"Recruiting Officer Will Be at The Belleville Armouries Tuesdays and Wednesdays of Each Week"

On the Double

7 TECH REGT
R.C.E.M.E.
CP

Regiment Boasts Double Issue Of Reuthers and McArthurs

WINNIPEG (CP)—The 7th Technical Regiment Royal Canadian Electrical and Mechanical Engineers (Reserve) is dealing in doubles.

The regiment boasts a double issue of the Reuther family and a similar number of McArthurs. The people in question are two pair of identical twins, Mamie and Joan Reuther and John and Jim McArthur.

The 22-year-old Reuthers, attractive, hazel-eyed blondes, sit side-by-side at an orderly room desk during their two nights a week of duty and about the only hints of their separate identities are the corporal's stripes on Mamie's tunic and the "in" and "out" baskets on their desks.

Both Reuthers have been with the 7th Technical Regiment four months. Mamie joined the reserve two years ago and Joan last year. Both are taking courses in clerical work and typing for their duties at regimental headquarters.

It is easier to keep track of the McArthurs. They don't work so close together. Jim, veteran of four years with the reserve, is a sergeant in the welding section of the unit. John, who joined one year ago, is a private in administration.

The pair, now 28, joined the army during the Second World War and served in Canada, England, France, Belgium and Holland but in different infantry units. Both are married.

Both sets of twins are past the stage of playing jokes on their friends but the Reuthers recall the confusion they caused on double dates and the McArthurs remember the time they kept a grocer in a state of apoplectic confusion by subbing for each other on errands.

FRANKFORD

Hundreds Attend Evangelistic Services

Frankford — Hundreds of people of all the Protestant denominations of Frankford, as well as from Stockdale, Batawa, Zion and other churches in the district have continued all week to crowd the Frankford United Church, where Rev. Lindsay Vogan, guest evangelist, has been in charge of special evangelistic services. Each successive night has brought larger and larger attendance.

On Wednesday evening, Young People's Night, Rev. Vogan spoke on "Tomorrow is Already Here." He was assisted in the devotional part of the service by the Stockdale United Church Young Peoples' Union. Immediately following the service a fireside hour was enjoyed in the church hall, at which time Mr. Sid Martin showed film slides taken around the church, and readings were given by two members of the Stockdale Union. Refreshments were served by the Stockdale folk.

On Thursday night, an even larger crowd was on hand to hear Mr. Vogan speak on "The Waiting Saviour," another word to the "Lukewarm." For the many who could not get into the church, a public address system was set up in the church hall, and many listened to the service in this way.

During the service it was announced that all expenses had been cleared, and a sizeable donation would be given to Mr. Vogan. There was still a large surplus and it was announced that this would go toward flood relief, as a gift from the Protestant churches of Frankford. It had been planned originally to give any extra to the United Church Mission Fund, but since the services had been so well supported by all the other churches of the village, it was felt that it should go to some worthy cause whereby all churches would receive their due credit.

Already, many have been won for Christ and it is certain that the services will leave a mark on the village of Frankford that will last for many, many years.

Mrs. John Casement has returned to her home with Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Smith, following some period of time visiting relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lohnes spent the supper hour with Mr. and Mrs. Carl Lohnes Friday.

Messrs. Jack Farley, master, and Harold Terry, past master, of Franck Lodge, 127, attended a Masonic rally in Watertown on Wednesday.

Messrs. Jack Madill and Carl Weese attended the motor show in Toronto on Wednesday.

United Church M.B.

The Mission Band of Frankford United Church held their weekly meeting in the church hall on Monday with a total attendance of 63 children present. Mrs. Poland had charge of the worship service. Sandra Morrow read the Scripture passage, and Mrs. Poland read a story. President Colleen Chase took charge of the meeting for the business Carolyn Carlisle took charge of the program which featured a duet by Sandra Morrow and Jean Caldwell. Helen Plevak favored with a piano solo, and Lillian Williams read a verse. Carolyn and Judy Carlisle sang a duet, and Carolyn Smith read a verse. Nancy Bailey and Carolyn Smith sang a duet, to complete the program.

Refreshments were served after the close of the meeting.

KILLED BY CAR

PERTH, Ont. (CP) — Donald Eager, 27, of Perth was killed Friday night when he was hit by an automobile while walking along a dark street. The driver, Donald Sullivan, 18, said he had swerved to pass another car and did not see the pedestrian.

BANCROFT

Careless Driving Charges Occupy Court Attention

BANCROFT — Two careless driving charges arising out of serious accidents involving personal injuries and heavy property damage constituted the major part of a light docket in Magistrate's court here on Wednesday. Magistrate R. C. Jackson presided with S. G. Robertson, Q.C., acting for the Crown.

Merrill Coe was convicted and fined $10 and costs after a lengthy hearing in which he was defended by Kenneth Ross. Coe was the driver of a car which struck the rear of one driven by Delbert Dupuis and pushed it over the edge of a steep bank on Selby hill, 10 miles north of here last month. The Dupuis car was wrecked and Dupuis' father suffered personal injury.

A charge of careless driving against Albert Gauthier was dismissed when mechanical failure of the truck was established by defence counsel J. D. O'Flynn. The Gauthier truck tore through the front of Park's store at Bird's Creek after leaving the highway.

Written pleas of guilty and fines of $10 and costs were accepted from four other persons charged with minor infractions of provincial statutes.

New York Rangers Virtually Out Of Playoff Question With Twin Defeats

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

ALL OVER!

Well, that's that. It's all over but the shouting and now for the pay-off playoffs. The Glens came through with a fine rallying offensive Saturday night to edge the Orillia Pontiacs 4-3 and share sectional top spot honors with the Goodyears from Roddenville. It ended up very nicely with everbody friends all round and the Goodies drawing the extra gate by virtue of their having a better goals average than the Glens.

That playoff game with Orillia goes into the archives as being unplayed and the Goodies and Glens are now girding their loins for what should be a thrilling sectional playoff series. The teams open the jousts with the first clash in Kingston Wednesday night with the second slated for Memorial Arena next Friday.

It should be a thriller-diller of a series and if both squads come up with the brand of hockey they are capable of playing it's a matter of "yer pays yer money and tykes yer choice." With the exception of Jock (MacSuds) Johnstone, who would bet on a peewee against a ten-ton tractor if the peewee wore a Belleville label. You can't beat that haggis-crunching son of Scotland for loyalty.

Michael J. Rodden can chuck his statistical records in the garbage now and cease worrying about who scored what, where and when. It's water under the bridge, Michael, me bhoy, and we start off on a brand new playoff sheet.

Dates for the playoff series were drawn up Saturday following the game with managements of both squads conferring with OHA executive member Lorne Cook, of Kingston, who was here for the final festivities. Mr. Cook officially confirmed the dates yesterday by telephone to Glen's manager Don McNevin.

For the first time in many years a Peterborough team is missing in the playoff series. The Petes, which had player trouble from the start, were the underdogs for the most part of the schedule season, but they spurted magnificently to race down the stretch and very nearly nipped the Goodies and Glens at the wire. They met and defeated the best of them but they didn't have the reserve power to carry them through. It seems a shame that that old Eagles-Petes feud was so deep-seated, and couldn't be forgotten by some of the players up around Perdueville. Had all hatchets been buried and boys gathered under the Petes' banner, it might have been a different story as far as sectional honors go.

Meanwhile another tough series gets under way in the western section of the group with Stouffville Clippers and Oshawa Truckers going to the mat for playoff honors. The Truckers are favored to win but only by a small margin as the Clippers are not any pushovers by any stretch of the imagination — and well—anything can happen in a chips-down series. The winners of the two sections should stage a thrilling series for the group championship and the right to go on into the provincial playdowns.

Travellers who have seen some of the teams in other senior "B" groups play state the brand of hockey played down this way is as good if not better than that of the western and northern parts of the province. We can't vouch for that, but whoever wins will have to be good.

ALL EVEN!

The junior "B" Hawks ran into a snag up around Lindsay way Saturday night with the kids from the Scugog town edging our side by a 3-2 score in a rugged bruising battle. The squads go at it again Wednesday in Memorial Arena and it should be one for the books. A Hawk defeat Wednesday evening will set the Barrett crew squarely back on its haunches, and that they can't afford to do. This Lindsay team is tough, but plenty, and there should be fun, fury and fireworks at the Wednesday battle.

The boys, according to reports, really "lowered the boom in the third period. A match misconduct, three misconducts, three majors and an assorted variety of minor sentences were doled out by the official, who, it is said, had a hard time keeping the boys under control.

BASKETBALL!

Tomorrow night the Belleville Moiras tangle with the Peterborough Marines in the first game of their second round OABA intermediate "B" playdowns in a points-to-count two-agme series. The Moiras have been practicing faithfully for what will be a tough series. The game is scheduled for the BCI gymnasium, starting at eight o'clock.

'OOTBALL!

Earnest efforts will be made this year to put Belleville back on the football map, and a number of interested people have already laid some groundwork for an Intermediate Rugby Football Union entry.

According to Bill Fry, intermediate ORFU secretary, and a former Belleville boy, intermediate football has come along with leaps and bounds the past year, despite the tremendous counter attraction of the professionals. This year, already, says Bill, some seven new teams have filed application for entry bringing the total to sixteen.

Canadian Rugby Football Union officials are showing increased interest in the intermediate brand, and according to Fry, it would not be a surprise if the top moguls came through with some financial assistance for their younger brothers.

A number of city gridiron enthusiasts held a meeting in the arena the other night and discussed temporary plans for the organization of an entry this year. Included were "Red" Doran, Ted Schwab, Frank Grandame, Stan Creeggan, Don Grant, John Bradden, Ron Longhurst, D. Walmsley and D. Shore.

A general meeting open to all interested in football and a Belleville entry has been called for Friday, February 27 at the Kiwanis Centre. Bill Fry will be on hand and outline plans and assist in any organizational ideas that might crop up. It is hoped an executive will be formed at the confab, and that a large crowd of enthusiasts will turn out.

Fry is bringing some football films with him to mix some educational entertainment with the business at hand.

It is believed that Belleville has a fair nucleus for a team with a lot of youngsters available.

Need Nine Wins Out of Twelve To Qualify for 4th Place; Bruins Cling to Third Spot

By ED SIMON

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Two old men tried valiantly, though unsuccessfully, to carry a dozen tired youngsters on their backs.

That was the story of Boston Bruins' efforts to make hay at the expense of their closest opposition during a disheartening week-end of National Hockey League campaigning.

The Bruins, clearly travel-weary after three games of a seven-game road trip, picked up only one point of a possible four, tying the third-place Toronto Maple Leafs 2-2 Saturday and dropping a 2-0 verdict to Chicago Black Hawks Sunday night.

And it was left to two of the oldest men on the team, captain Milt Schmidt, 35, and goalie Jim Henry, 32, to keep their youthful teammates in the game.

Schmidt, who has been playing big-time hockey since most of the current Bruins were in short pants, set up one goal and scored the others with barely two minutes left.

The crafty old-timer spearheaded what little offensive Bruins could muster, shaking off a two-stitch cut from an accidental high stick in the process.

Henry was even busier. In the two games, he stopped 73 shots while letting four get by him. He blocked 45 in the Chicago game alone—the same number the Bruins were able to train on the opposing netminders in the two games combined.

The Bruins led briefly in the second period at Toronto as Schmidt shook loose Joe Klukay for a shot on Leaf netminder Harry Lumley. Real Chevrefils whacked home the rebound.

George Armstrong and Rudy Migay fired goals for Toronto, setting the stage for Schmidt's tying marker.

Gus Bodnar and Sid Finney were the Hawk marksmen at Chicago Sunday night.

The result left the Hawks in fifth place, a single point behind Boston and two behind the Leafs.

Meanwhile the last-place New York Rangers had an even sadder week-end, dropping a 4-1 decision to the second-place Canadiens in Montreal Saturday and getting Detroit Red Wings.

The double defeat virtually eliminated the New Yorkers from an NHL play-off spot. With 12 games left, they need nine victories to reach fourth place under the most favorable circumstances.

The Rangers played scoreless hockey against Montreal for two periods. Then Maurice Richard, Bert Olmstead, Billy Reay and Bernie Geoffrion rattled home four goals in 14 minutes. Nick Mickoski averted a shutout after all the damage was done.

Against the Red Wings, Neil Strain set up a one-goal lead early in the first period, but Detroit's Glen Skov nullified it before the session ended. Tony Leswick put the NHL champions in front to stay early in the second frame.

All NHL clubs take a breather until Wednesday night when Canadiens visit Toronto and the Rangers entertain the Bruins.

WEEKEND STARS

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Gerry McNeil of Montreal who held New York to one goal Saturday night as the Canadiens downed the Rangers 4-1.

Milt Schmidt of Boston who scored in the dying minutes Saturday night to give the Bruins a 2-2 tie with Toronto Maple Leafs.

Tony Leswick of Detroit whose second-period goal Sunday night gave the Red Wings a 2-1 victory over New York Rangers.

Al Rollins, Chicrgo goalie, who chalked up his fourth shutout of the season as the Black Hawks downed Boston 2-0.

Barons Cling To Top Spot In American Loop

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Cleveland Barons hung on to first place in the American Hockey League by dividing week-end games. They defeated fourth-place Syracuse Warriors 2-1 Saturday but were dumped 4-1 by the sixth-place Providence Reds Sunday.

Pittsburgh Hornets held second place with a 7-4 victory Saturday over St. Louis Flyers.

The third-place Hershey Bears edged Providence 5-4 Saturday and parlayed defenceman Joe Schertzel's goal and Gord Henry's flawless net-minding into a 1-0 victory over the cellar-dwelling Buffalo Bisons Sunday.

Syracuse Sunday whipped St. Louis 3-1 with Leo Curick scoring one goal and getting two assists.

At Providence, coach Terry Reardon of the Reds drew an automatic $50 fine for charging onto the ice in the second period and protesting referee Doug Davie's failure to call what he believed to be a tripping penalty on Ike Hildebrand.

The Reds scored a goal in each of the first two periods by Ray LaPlante and Zellio Toppazzini, and added two more in the final, both by Barry Sullivan.

At Buffalo Sam Betio set up the decisive play. He broke away from a Bison power play in the third period. Schertzel, the puck carrier, beath Jacques Plante cleanly.

At St. Llouis after a scoreless first period, Don Ashbee, Harry Pidhirny and Curick scored in that order for Syracuse. Bert Hirschfeld scored the Flyers goal.

Snead, Partner Win Doubles

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) —Sam Snead's long drives and Betty McKinnon's approach shots were a winning combination Sunday, bringing them the international mixed two-ball golf title in a 3-and-2 victory over Babe Zaharias and George Bolesta.

The defeat put an end to the Babe's two-year reign as co-champion of the tournament. She and Bolesta, both of Tampa, won in 1951, and she paired with Al Besselink to win in 1952.

Miss McKinnon, Dallas, and Snead, White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., took the lead on the sixth hole of the morning round Sunday and were never headed after that.

Oil Capital Takes Rich Stake

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Oil Capitol, a stretch-running grey horse, won Hialeah's $100,000 added Widener Handicap Saturday with a tremendous burst of speed that seven other classy thoroughbreds couldn't match.

Spartan Valor, the favorite at 8 to 5, and Crafty Admiral, 7 to 2, raced each other into the dust in the 1¼-mile grind, and Hasty House Farm's Oil Capitol, with Jockey Con McCreary riding, came on to take the rich purse.

Hampton Stable's Alerted moved up to take second, a head back of Oil Capitol, and George D. Widener's Battlefield was third, a head behind Alerted.

Sudbury Skier Wins Titles In Junior Meet

MIDLAND (CP)—Chuck Austis of Sudbury's Nickleteen Ski Club won the four-way championship Sunday at the Ontario junior ski meet.

Cross-country and jumping competitions were held Sunday. The downhill and slalom events were run off Saturday at Collingwood.

Austin, who won the nordic title for cross country and jumping in the Ontario interscholastic meet here Friday, took the event again Sunday.

Fort William's Don Wallace, who took the interscholastic title, won the junior jumping crown. Wallace made the longest leap, 71 feet, and compiled the most points, 216.1.

Alti Liinama of Sudbury was first in the cross-country in the junior division. He was second in the same event in the interscholastic Saturday. Barry Norton of Sudbury came third in the event held over an ice-covered course.

The Ontario team championship was won by the Sudbury Nickleteen A squad who will represent Ontario in the Dominion junior championships at Fort William.

Austin was second in the junior cross-country, with R. Rasanabo, Sudbury, fourth and P. Olschamp, Sudbury, fifth.

In the junior jumping, Mike Howe, Hamilton, was second; Dennis Hale, Peterborough, third; Austin fourth and Olschamp fifth.

Michigan State 'On Probation'

Big Ten Sunday put Michigan State College on athletic probation for a year in a move bitterly protested by officials of the conference newcomer, which last year turned out the top football team in the U.S.

Commissioner Kenneth L. (Tug) Wilson ruled that a special fund to aid athletes violated conference regulations and his stand was backed in a special meeting of Big Ten faculty representatives.

In East Lansing, Mich., MSC's president, John A. Hannah, said in a statement the move was "harsh" and "unjustified." However, Hannah said the college would accept the decision.

Another spokesman for the school said the probation does not affect the college's athletic program and all sports, including football, will continue as scheduled.

Livvies Oust Niagara Falls In Senior Play

TILLSONBURG (CP)—Outscoring their opponents in three of the four quarters, Tillsonburg Livingstons rolled up a 73-54 victory over Niagara Falls Jolleys here Saturday night to eliminate the Roar City quint in two straight games in their Senior A Ontario Basketball Association playoff series. Tillsonburg won the first game of the best-of-three series 66-62 in Niagara Falls.

The Livingstons, defending Canadian senior cage champions, now meet Windsor with the first game here next Saturday.

The youthful Niagara Falls quintet battled the Tillsonburg team all the way and only the standout defensive game by the Livingstons kept the score from being closer.

Despite the fine scoring efforts of Harry Wade and Bill Pataky with 21 points apiece, Tillsonburg's shooting was below form.

Dick MacKenzie was closely watched all night but managed 18 points to lead the Jolleys in the scoring column. Henry Swan had 13 for the losers.

Chuck Dalton, Red Curren and Bob Simpson were standouts defensively for the winners.

Tillsonburg raced into a big lead 34-20 at half time. A third period spurt that netted them 18 points moved the Jolleys back in contention as they trailed by only eight points going into the final period.

The Livingstons came back with 27 points in the final 10 minutes while Niagara could manage only 16.

Tommy Gibbons of the Livingstons left the game with five fouls early in the second half.

Need Nine Wins Out of Twelve To Qualify for 4th Place; Bruins Cling to Third Spot

By ED SIMON

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Two old men tried valiantly, though unsuccessfully, to carry a dozen tired youngsters on their backs.

That was the story of Boston Bruins' efforts to make hay at the expense of their closest opposition during a disheartening week-end of National Hockey League campaigning.

The Bruins, clearly travel-weary after three games of a seven-game road trip, picked up only one point of a possible four, tying the third-place Toronto Maple Leafs 2-2 Saturday and dropping a 2-0 verdict to Chicago Black Hawks Sunday night.

And it was left to two of the oldest men on the team, captain Milt Schmidt, 35, and goalie Jim Henry, 32, to keep their youthful teammates in the game.

Schmidt, who has been playing big-time hockey since most of the current Bruins were in short pants, set up one goal and scored the others with barely two minutes left.

The crafty old-timer spearheaded what little offensive Bruins could muster, shaking off a two-stitch cut from an accidental high stick in the process.

Henry was even busier. In the two games, he stopped 73 shots while letting four get by him. He blocked 45 in the Chicago game alone—the same number the Bruins were able to train on the opposing netminders in the two games combined.

The Bruins led briefly in the second period at Toronto as Schmidt shook loose Joe Klukay for a shot on Leaf netminder Harry Lumley. Real Chevrefils whacked home the rebound.

George Armstrong and Rudy Migay fired goals for Toronto, setting the stage for Schmidt's tying marker.

Gus Bodnar and Sid Finney were the Hawk marksmen at Chicago Sunday night.

The result left the Hawks in fifth place, a single point behind Boston and two behind the Leafs.

Meanwhile the last-place New York Rangers had an even sadder week-end, dropping a 4-1 decision to the second-place Canadiens in Montreal Saturday and getting Detroit Red Wings.

The double defeat virtually eliminated the New Yorkers from an NHL play-off spot. With 12 games left, they need nine victories to reach fourth place under the most favorable circumstances.

The Rangers played scoreless hockey against Montreal for two periods. Then Maurice Richard, Bert Olmstead, Billy Reay and Bernie Geoffrion rattled home four goals in 14 minutes. Nick Mickoski averted a shutout after all the damage was done.

Against the Red Wings, Neil Strain set up a one-goal lead early in the first period, but Detroit's Glen Skov nullified it before the session ended. Tony Leswick put the NHL champions in front to stay early in the second frame.

All NHL clubs take a breather until Wednesday night when Canadiens visit Toronto and the Rangers entertain the Bruins.

Barons Cling To Top Spot In American Loop

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Cleveland Barons hung on to first place in the American Hockey League by dividing week-end games. They defeated fourth-place Syracuse Warriors 2-1 Saturday but were dumped 4-1 by the sixth-place Providence Reds Sunday.

Pittsburgh Hornets held second place with a 7-4 victory Saturday over St. Louis Flyers.

The third-place Hershey Bears edged Providence 5-4 Saturday and parlayed defenceman Joe Schertzel's goal and Gord Henry's flawless net-minding into a 1-0 victory over the cellar-dwelling Buffalo Bisons Sunday.

Syracuse Sunday whipped St. Louis 3-1 with Leo Curick scoring one goal and getting two assists.

At Providence, coach Terry Reardon of the Reds drew an automatic $50 fine for charging onto the ice in the second period and protesting referee Doug Davie's failure to call what he believed to be a tripping penalty on Ike Hildebrand.

The Reds scored a goal in each of the first two periods by Ray LaPlante and Zellio Toppazzini, and added two more in the final, both by Barry Sullivan.

At Buffalo Sam Betio set up the decisive play. He broke away from a Bison power play in the third period. Schertzel, the puck carrier, beath Jacques Plante cleanly.

At St. Llouis after a scoreless first period, Don Ashbee, Harry Pidhirny and Curick scored in that order for Syracuse. Bert Hirschfeld scored the Flyers goal.

Snead, Partner Win Doubles

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) —Sam Snead's long drives and Betty McKinnon's approach shots were a winning combination Sunday, bringing them the international mixed two-ball golf title in a 3-and-2 victory over Babe Zaharias and George Bolesta.

The defeat put an end to the Babe's two-year reign as co-champion of the tournament. She and Bolesta, both of Tampa, won in 1951, and she paired with Al Besselink to win in 1952.

Miss McKinnon, Dallas, and Snead, White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., took the lead on the sixth hole of the morning round Sunday and were never headed after that.

Oil Capital Takes Rich Stake

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Oil Capitol, a stretch-running grey horse, won Hialeah's $100,000 added Widener Handicap Saturday with a tremendous burst of speed that seven other classy thoroughbreds couldn't match.

Spartan Valor, the favorite at 8 to 5, and Crafty Admiral, 7 to 2, raced each other into the dust in the 1¼-mile grind, and Hasty House Farm's Oil Capitol, with Jockey Con McCreary riding, came on to take the rich purse.

Hampton Stable's Alerted moved up to take second, a head back of Oil Capitol, and George D. Widener's Battlefield was third, a head behind Alerted.

Sudbury Skier Wins Titles In Junior Meet

MIDLAND (CP)—Chuck Austis of Sudbury's Nickleteen Ski Club won the four-way championship Sunday at the Ontario junior ski meet.

Cross-country and jumping competitions were held Sunday. The downhill and slalom events were run off Saturday at Collingwood.

Austin, who won the nordic title for cross country and jumping in the Ontario interscholastic meet here Friday, took the event again Sunday.

Fort William's Don Wallace, who took the interscholastic title, won the junior jumping crown. Wallace made the longest leap, 71 feet, and compiled the most points, 216.1.

Alti Liinama of Sudbury was first in the cross-country in the junior division. He was second in the same event in the interscholastic Saturday. Barry Norton of Sudbury came third in the event held over an ice-covered course.

The Ontario team championship was won by the Sudbury Nickleteen A squad who will represent Ontario in the Dominion junior championships at Fort William.

Austin was second in the junior cross-country, with R. Rasanaho, Sudbury, fourth and P. Olschamp, Sudbury, fifth.

In the junior jumping, Mike Howe, Hamilton, was second; Dennis Hale, Peterborough, third; Austin fourth and Olschamp fifth.

Michigan State 'On Probation'

Big Ten Sunday put Michigan State College on athletic probation for a year in a move bitterly protested by officials of the conference newcomer, which last year turned out the top football team in the U.S.

Commissioner Kenneth L. (Tug) Wilson ruled that a special fund to aid athletes violated conference regulations and his stand was backed in a special meeting of Big Ten faculty representatives.

In East Lansing, Mich., MSC's president, John A. Hannah, said in a statement the move was "harsh" and "unjustified." However, Hannah said the college would accept the decision.

Another spokesman for the school said the probation does not affect the college's athletic program and all sports, including football, will continue as scheduled.

Livvies Oust Niagara Falls In Senior Play

TILLSONBURG (CP)—Outscoring their opponents in three of the four quarters, Tillsonburg Livingstons rolled up a 73-54 victory over Niagara Falls Jolleys here Saturday night to eliminate the Roar City quint in two straight games in their Senior A Ontario Basketball Association playoff series. Tillsonburg won the first game of the best-of-three series 66-62 in Niagara Falls.

The Livingstons, defending Canadian senior cage champions, now meet Windsor with the first game here next Saturday.

The youthful Niagara Falls quintet battled the Tillsonburg team all the way and only the standout defensive game by the Livingstons kept the score from being closer.

Despite the fine scoring efforts of Harry Wade and Bill Pataky with 21 points apiece, Tillsonburg's shooting was below form.

Dick MacKenzie was closely watched all night but managed 18 points to lead the Jolleys in the scoring column. Henry Swan had 13 for the losers.

Chuck Dalton, Red Curren and Bob Simpson were standouts defensively for the winners.

Tillsonburg raced into a big lead 34-20 at half time. A third period spurt that netted them 18 points moved the Jolleys back in contention as they trailed by only eight points going into the final period.

The Livingstons came back with 27 points in the final 10 minutes while Niagara could manage only 16.

Tommy Gibbons of the Livingstons left the game with five fouls early in the second half.

Glen Roys Edge Orillia Pontiacs 4-3 As Juniors Lose To Lindsay 3-2

Spot Visitors 3 in 2nd Period Then Rally to Win in Third; Tie Kingston for Section Top

By GEO. CARVER
(Sports Editor)

Spotting the Orillia Pontiacs three goals midway through the second period, the Glen Roys roared back with a driving offensive that netted them four goals in a row and the victory in their final game of the season's senior "B" schedule here Saturday night.

The win was the Glens 14th of the season as against 16 losses and placed them in a first-place tie with the Kingston Goodyears. The Peterborough Petes were eliminated from the eastern section picture last Friday with a 5-0 defeat at the hands of the Goodyears.

The Glens meet the Goodyears in a best-of-seven sectional finals series for the right to meet the western section winners, Oshawa Truckers or Stouffville Clippers. The first game of the series is slated for Kingston Wednesday night with the second tilt here next Friday.

Nothing at Stake

The game Saturday night was a crowd-pleasing affair especially in view of the fact the Pontiacs had nothing at stake since they were eliminated from the western sections playoffs.

The first period was a scoreless affair being livened by a pushing match between two members of the MacDonald clan. The Pontiacs ripped into sudden action in the second period scoring three goals in three minutes and four seconds. The Glens stung by the sudden setback roared back to the attack firing home two goals in the latter part of the period.

They maintained their driving offensive in the third chapter with Jackie Wardhaugh tying it up midway through the heat and Sammy Mulholland in a swooping drive slamming home the winner 51 seconds later. The Pontiacs drove hard in an effort to tie up the pastime but the Glen defence tossed back on its heels at times came through with a fine effort and held the driving Ponties at bay.

The game was rugged at times with the referee handing out sixteen penalties, with the teams splitting the "gate." Red Doran and Davidson of the Pontiacs who had three penalties, got banished for private feuding in the third period.

Scores Two

Playing coach "Red" Doran celebrated the birth of his new baby daughter with a standout performance. The sorrel-top scored two goals and assisted in another. Jackie Wardhaugh and Mulholland got the others.

Marshall, McCrone, Favero and Payne stood out for the Pontiacs with Reading coming through with a fine performance in the visitors net. Parisi had a somewhat strenuous time especially in the third period but he came up with a blank behind his mates' fine defensive work.

The teams battled through twenty-five minutes of scoreless hockey with both goals having narrow escapes before Marshall sank McCrone's short pass to beat Parisi. Two minutes later Favero teamed with Marshall and MacDonald on a three-man wave and surged in close to put the Pontiacs two up. Scarcely a minute had flitted by when Payne sallied in alone to give the visitors a three-goal lead.

"Red" Doran gave the crowd of nearly 1,200 something to cheer about at the fourteen-minute mark when he swept in with Peter Jones and Ted DeGray, his driving shot ripping in the mesh behind Reading for the Glens first goal. Two minutes later the red-top blasted his second goal of the night to bring the Glens within striking distance.

The Glens maintained their offensive drive in the third period missing on several occasions and back-checking hard as the Pontiacs forayed up the ice in an effort to protect the lead. Ten minutes had gone when Jackie Wardhaugh turned Doran's flat pass into paydirt and the crowd roared as the tying goal ripped into the net.

Sammy Mulholland was the hero of the piece two minutes later when he teamed with Gerry Desjardins and "Nobber" Day to fire home what proved to be the winning goal. The Ponties drove back desperately in a belated offensive effort but the Glens were not to be denied the victory and they held the opposition blank until time ran out.

Orillia: Goal, Reading; defence Davidson, Marshall, Pearsall, Favero; forwards, Payne, Kelly, McCrone, MacDonald, Aiken, Barren.

Gault Meets Baggett For Bantam Title

ROANOKE, Va. (AP) — Hard-socking Henry (Pappy) Gault lays his North American bantamweight championship on the line for the second time here tonight when he meets James (Buddy) Baggett in a scheduled 15-rounder.

Gault, who has never been knocked off his feet in the ring in 42 professional fights, was a 3 to 2 favorite early today to retain his crown. He won the hemispheric title last October in Quebec by defeating Canadian champion Fernando Gagnon of Quebec, and later defended it successfully against Gagnon.

Baggett, the Dallas, Tex., challenger, lost a decision to Gault, who hails from Spartanburg, S. C., 1952 bout—he was kept out of action most of the year by a pair of operations on his nose—Baggett lost to former featherweight champion Willie Pep.

Only Pep has been able to knock Baggett out in his 60 professional fights.

Chuck McCullough fired two goals for Saskatoon Sunday while Joe Bell sank a pair for Seattle.

In other Saturday encounters, the Bombers were nipped 4-3 by New Westminster Royals, Calgary Stampeders dumped Edmonton Flyers 6-4, aided by Enio Selisizzi's three goals, and Victoria Cougars trimmed Vancouver Canucks 6-2.

Golden Gloves 3-Ring Circus Starts Tonight

CHICAGO (AP)—Amateur boxing's three-ring circus, the 26th annual Golden Gloves tournament of champions, starts tonight for more than 300 fighters.

Some 250 bouts will have been fought in triple-ringed Chicago Stadium by the time preliminary competition ends Wednesday night. This will eliminate all but four men in each division who will return March 6 for the finals.

The eventual champion in each of the eight weight divisions will participate in later intercity bouts with a New York team and in an international match at the stadium.

Action tonight is in the four lighter divisions — flyweight, bantamweight, featherweight and lightweight. Welterweights, middleweights, light heavies and heavies mix it up Tuesday.

Wednesday, fighters of each weight class will battle through the quarter-final round for the right to return for the March 6 finals.

Discuss Entry Into Lacrosse

TORONTO (CP) — Representatives from Orillia and Brampton attended an informal meeting Saturday of the senior club officials of the Ontario Lacrosse Association and discussed re-entry into the league.

If Orillia and Brampton were readmitted it would increase league membership to nine. Present teams are Peterborough, Mimico, Hamilton, Toronto, St. Catharines, Fergus and Owen Sound.

Two meetings later this week, one in Hamilton and the other involving Owen Sound and Fergus interests, should help to clarify the situation.

The Hamilton club will meet to find out what material is available before committing itself. Owen Sound and Fergus will discuss possible amalgamation in a bid to field a strong senior team. Any decisions will have to be reached before March 7 when entries, accompanied with bonds, must be filed with the OLA.

Fail to Come from Behind In Rugged Bruising Battle; Teams Clash Here Wednesday

By JOHN GOODFELLOW

Belleville Black Hawks had their wings clipped Saturday night when they dropped a 3-2 decision to Lindsay Warriors in the second game of their best-of-five Junior "B" semi-final playoffs. The game was played in Lindsay.

The teams are now tied at one game each. They meet in Belleville Wednesday night with the fourth tilt scheduled for Lindsay next Saturday.

It was a bruising battle that saw 18 penalties called, including one match misconduct, three misconducts and four majors. Despite the ruggedness of the fray, only one player, George Jacklin of the Hawks, was injured. He suffered a gash over the right eye in the second period that failed to keep him out of action.

Ron Teel, Bill Gibson and Art Truax tallied for the winners, while John Casey and Davey Jones notched the losers' scores. Rival goalies Reg Truax and Bobby Green were sensational throughout.

Out to Win

Lindsay left no doubt in the first period that they were out to win this one. They swarmed all around the Hawk zone. Green kicked out three close-in shots, them robbed Williams who was in on him all alone.

It was left to the Hawks, however to break the scoring ice. Jacklin shot a pass to Casey just inside the Lindsay blue line and the chunky little Irishman swept in to beat Truax with a rising drive.

Two minutes later Lindsay tied it at 1-1, Teel taking Eric Chidley's pass from behind the net and beating Green with a short slap shot. Before the period ended, Lindsay lost Harold Williams on a match misconduct penalty for arguing too vehemently with the officials.

Casey and Stocco were penalized as the second period opened and Jacklin did a fine job of backchecking until they returned. The Hawks lost a great chance when Ron Halstead, Jerry Goyer and Jacklin swept in together on Truax but the cool Warrior custodian turned Halstead's drive aside.

Lindsay made it 2-1 at the halfway mark of the period, Gibson sinking a shot from the crease after Jack Graham and Don Cochrane had set up the play. Belleville had a goal called back by Gilmour, the officials ruling the left winger was parked in the crease at the time.

Tasted Victory

Tasting a possible victory, the Warriors kept checking furiously in the third period. The rough play started to get out of hand. Green had to be superb as Halstead got five minutes for drawing blood. Hank Therrien missed two great chances to tie it up, once when Jones' pass hopped over his stick and again when his shot grazed the outside of the post.

Art Truax tallied the clincher at 15.10, racing in from the left and flipping the puck high into the twine. Packer and Hutton drew assists.

The Hawks kept pressing in the rugged going and with less than two minutes left, Jones got them within strikin distance. He took relays from Gilmour and Therrien inside the Lindsay defence and slipped one past Truax to make the count 3-2.

With 45 seconds left, Coach Don Barertt pulled Green out of the Belleville nets. The Hawks drew three face-offs in the Lindsay zone, but Truax held the fort until the siren sounded to end the game.

The teams:

Belleville — Goal, R. Green; defence, Stocco and Delbosco; centre, Jones; wings Therrien and Gilmour. Alternates: Goyer, P. Green, Halstead, Jacklin, Casey and Hermiston.

Lindsay — Goal, R. Truax; defence, W. Williams and O'Neill; centre, Hutton; wings, A. Truax and Packer. Alternates: McGill, Crawford, H. Williams, Gibson, Cochrane, Teel, Chidley and Graham.

Referee, Doug Calhoun, Oshawa, Linesman, Ike Eberts, Lindsay.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

In one of his books, a noted bridge expert stated that a jump rebid in the same suit is not necessarily forcing. He bred millions of master-minding passers who use his statement as an alibi.

The purpose of the one-jump is to signal partner that they have enough for game. If so, why spoil its purpose merely because you desire to tell your partner your suit is stronger?

When you stop to think of it, the fact that the jump rebid is in the same suit should make it more forcing. Because it shows the suit is stronger than partner realized when you first mentioned it.

Of course, if your partner goes on the assumption that you are a moron, I have no argument. Because, a moron might jump the bid in a same suit only because he likes the sound of his voice.

But, a bridge player with an ounce of sense knows that a jump is signal for game; and when a player jumps he says he sees enough for a game. So, why should partner pass it?

In fact, how dare he?

We had the pair of hands shown here:

SOUTH	NORTH
♠K J	♠Q 6 4 2
♥A Q J 9 7 5	♥8 6
♦A 8 6	♦K Q [illegible]
♣A Q	♣[illegible] 8 4 3

The stranger who was my partner sat north and I was the dealer in south. My opening bid was a heart. He correctly responded with a bid of one no-trump. My second bid was three hearts. And, he passed.

He dropped me like a hot potato. And even though the trump suit finesse lost a trick to the king, it was easy to take 11 tricks. Not a chance was there for opponents to stop a game in hearts.

When I took all those tricks, my partner remarked: "On your rebid, why not mention a new suit? Then I would keep the bidding open for you. Your rebid in the same suit was not a force."

No use going into details with such a player. When his set notion is so wrong, there is not time enough during a bridge game to convince him. You might as well talk to the wall.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—The movie town has learned to expect anything from Marlon Brando. But folks were surprised to learn he will wind up his film career after one more picture.

"I'm not saying I'll never see Hollywood again," he remarked. "Nobody can foresee the future that well. But my present plan is to do 'Pal Joey' this fall. In the fall of 1954, I'll take an extended trip around the world that will last a year. After that, I'll confine my acting to the stage.

"This is the result of a long-term plan. I got what I wanted out of pictures. I was able to buy a ranch for my folks in Nebraska and provide a nest egg for myself. Now I can do the things I want to do."

Brando has two academy award nomination ("A Streetcar Named Desire," "Viva Zapata!") out of the three pictures he has had released. He is almost certain to be an Oscar nominee again for his Mark Antony in "Julius Caesar." Despite these honors, he says he doesn't like movie acting.

"It is a hit or miss affair," he remarked. "Anybody who does a good performances manages to by pure luck. There are too many elements against you.

"If you're doing a dramatic scene, you're not able to build up to it. Rehearsals are inadequate, and you have to jump right into the scene."

The portrayal of sex in motion pictures is a joke, he said. "The censorship of 'Streetcar Named Desire' was ridiculous. The picture had nothing of the power that the play possessed."

"Pal Joey" would complete a wide range of vehicles for Brando, who has taken on everything from Shakespeare to musicals. He admitted he has planned it that way.

"I got tired of people saying the only thing I could play was a slob," he says.

Barrie Extends Junior League Lead With Win Over Galt; Marlies Lose

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

There are only 11 games left to play in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A schedule and it's still a toss-up who will meet whom in the playoffs.

The teams — Windsor Spitfires and Kitchener-Waterloo Greenshirts—will miss the post-season play. Guelph Biltmores, last year's Memorial Cup champions, weakened by player raids of the parent New York Rangers, could still reach a berth among the noble six, though the chance is slim.

The Bilt would have to win their three remaining games while Oshawa Generals, now in sixth and last playoff spot, lose their last two.

Add Two Points

Barrie Flyers, who stole first place from Toronto Marlboros Friday, crept up another two points over the Dukes when they downed Galt Black Hawks 4-2 in Galt Saturday. The victory increased their lead to three points.

In the only other Saturday game, Oshawa edged Kitchener-Waterloo 4-3 in Oshawa.

Sunday, St. Michael's defeated the Generals 7-2 in Toronto, Toronto Marlboros got the short end of a 3-1 decision playing the Biltmores in the second half of the doubleheader and St. Catharines Teepees nipped Windsor 4-2 in overtime.

At Galt Saturday Orm Carver and Ron Cherry gave Barrie a two-goal first-period lead that the Flyers never relinquished.

Hec Lalonde and John Sleaver tallied for Galt in the second period and Doug Mohns fired the winner for the Flyers. Orv Tessier deflected the final Barrie counter with an open net off the body of a Galt player after Galt goalie Les Brinkley was taken out in the last minutes.

Communist Party Of France Fast Skidding Down Hill

PARIS (Reuters—France's Communist party — second largest in Western Europe—is skidding down hill rapidly and its leaders frankly admit falling membership.

Latest evidence of the party's downward spin came in an announcement Sunday that Le Soir Dimanche, Sunday edition of the Communist evening paper Ce Soir, will cease publication because of lack of funds and increased costs.

Falling party membership has been reflected in the failures of recent strikes and demonstrations. Observers believe the failures clearly indicate decline of Communist influence inside trade unions and among the middle class.

RMC Defeats Naval College

KINGSTON (CP)—Royal Military College of Kingston Saturday defeated Royal Roads Naval College of Esquimalt, B.C., in their annual sports meet.

Four records were broken and another equalled in the battle for the Claxton Trophy.

The broken records were all in the swimming division and two were made by Cadet R. V. Morrison of RMC. Morrison won the 100-yard free-style in 58.9 seconds, compared to the old mark of 61 seconds and his time of 24.3 in the 50-yard free-style set another record.

Royal Roads' Smart swam to another record when he covered the 50-yard breastroke in 35.2.

Cockfield of RMC broke the 50-yard back stroke mark of 33 seconds when he swam it in 31.3.

RMC tied the mark of 48.2 in winning the 100-yard relay.

Bantams Win Playdown Game; Others Defeated

Belleville salvaged one game of three minor hockey league playoff tilts played against Kingston at the Limestone City Community Centre on Saturday night. The games marked the first home and home series, the second group of games to be played in Belleville Thursday.

The local bantams took the measure of Kingston,, 6-0, for the lone victory. Hull was the big man for the winners, scoring three times and adding two assists. Wannamaker got two and St. Louis one. Robb and Musgrove picked up an assist each.

The juveniles fell before the Kingston crew, 6-4. Drinka, Carsicallen and Jackson each tallied twice for the winners. Brant scored a trio for Belleville, Atkins getting the other.

The local midgets also lost, 5-1. St. Remy led the victors with a pair of goals, while Roy, Sanderson and Hampton got the others. Cruji got the lonesome Belleville marker on a pass from White. Leo St. Dennis played a fine game in goal for the Doran boys who were up against a more experienced club.

Sport in Brief

KITCHENER (CP)—Curly Davis of Toronto, coach of Kitchener-Waterloo Greenshirts of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A League, said Saturday he is accepting an offer to coach the club next season. Davis, who took over in mid-season when the team was in a slump, is considered to have done an outstanding job.

KINGSTON (CP)—Queen's University Golden Gaels ran up their highest score in three years Saturday night as they whipped the Purple Raiders of Windsor's Assumption College 81-52 in an intercollegiate senior basketball game. The victory gave the Gaels a record of four wins and five losses for the season.

WINNIPEG (CP)—A team from the Irish Football Association has accepted an invitation to make a tour of 10 Canadian cities next summer, the Football Association of Canada announced Saturday. Sam Davidson, chairman of the foreign relations board of the Canadian association, said the team will arrive May 12 and leave June 19.

Brundage To Probe Set-Up In Australia

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) President Avery Brundage of the international Olympic committee says he may go to Australia for a first-hand look at preparations, or lack of them, for the 1956 games.

"Right now, Melbourne does not seem to be in a position to handle the 1956 Olympic games," Brundage said in an interview at his home here Sunday night.

"The committee has been very disturbed about the lack of preparations, the lack of construction of an Olympic village there, and the time is getting short," he said. "Melbourne was awarded the games four years ago and a lot of problems that should have been settled by now have not been settled."

But Brundage emphasized:

"There is nothing unfrienly n our attitude. Nobody on the committee wants to take the games away from Australia, but we are disturbed about the situation there."

SENTENCE 2 FOR ATTACK

TORONTO (CP)—Patrick McLeod, 36, and James Leitch, 24, of suburban Etobicoke were sentenced Friday to 15 and 12 years, respectively, and 10 strokes of the paddle each for the assault and rape of a 16-year-old immigrant girl. The pair, married with children, were convicted Thursday by an assize court jury for the assault last November.

Why We Say--

. . . from a plant

A beautiful girl is referred to as a belle because of an old Italian custom. Women in Italy used a tincture of the poison plant belladonna, to dilate the pupils of their eyes and thereby enhance their beauty. Thus beautiful women were referred to as belles, a shortened form of the plant name.

'Saucers' Said To be Flying Soap Bubbles

LONDON (Reuters) — The British Medical magazine, the Lancet, today produced a stranger-than-ever theory on flying saucers — they may be just a lot of bubbles from mother's washtub.

An article discussing "strange objects" in the sky said the housewife's use of detergents for her laundering might be responsible.

The soap went down the wash basin, stuck together and became a layer of foam at the sewage plant. Then a sharp wind came along and carried the suds into the sky.

There, said the Lancet, was a flying saucer.

DRUNK DRIVER JAILED

LAKEFIELD (CP)—Leslie Foster, suspended police chief in this Peterborough district village, is serving a 15-day sentence for drunk driving. Reeve William Grant suspended Foster last week after he was charged following a traffic accident near Peterborough. Police said they had to pull Foster from his car and he refused to submit to an alcohol test.

The life cycle and habits of the ring-necked pheasant, one of Canada's favorite game birds, are described in a new motion picture produced by the Carling Conservation Club in co-operation with the Royal Ontario Museum of Zoology and Palaeontology.

"The Ring-Necked Pheasant" will be shown in Belleville next Thursday evening under the auspices of Fish and Gabe Club at their monthly meeting at the Orange Hall.

Wild-life photographer W. H. Carrick and members of the Museum staff kept pheasants under observation for an entire year to produce the full-color sound movie. A total of 17 weeks were spent in the field during the actual filming of the picture. For some scenes — particularly one scene of a nest of pheasant chicks breaking through the shells of their eggs — as long as five hours of painstaking preparation were necessary. The film's sound track was actually recorded in the field.

The film is one of a series prepared by Carling's and the Museum to arouse public interest in the need for conservation of our wild life resources. It points out that artificial restocking of pheasant preserves is unnecessary providing there is adequate food and natural cover. Farming land, with woodlots, grown-over roadside ditches and hedgerows, provide ideal natural cover for pheasants. Without these conditions, however, no amount of artificial restocking can maintain pheasant populations.

The film describes the yearly cycle of a pheasant's life — the scratching for food through the snow in the winter; the fighting of the male birds prior to the spring mating season; the nesting and hatching of the young and, finally, the fall hunting season when, if the right conditions for reproduction are maintained, it will be safe to harvest one-third of the pheasant population and still leave enough stock to renew the cycle in the spring.

World Day of Prayer Observed at St. Paul's

The St. Andrew's - Gilead W.M.S. met at the home of Mrs. Orval Rollins on Friday, in observance of the World's Day of Prayer.

Mrs. John Ross opened the meeting with the hymn "In Christ There is No East or West" after which the business followed. This consisted of planning to make a missionary quilt; each lady to present her block at the March meeting.

A letter of thanks was read by Mrs. J. O. Huffman for the bale sent last year also special thanks for the money donation to help forward the bale.

Mrs. Orland Bertrand's life membership was accepted having been transferred from Bridge Street United Church, Belleville, where she had been a member for the past ten years.

Letters of thanks were read from Mrs. W. Clare for candy received and Mrs. Jas. Hutchinson for cards during her illness.

Silent Tribute

The order of service for the World Day of Prayer was followed under the leadership of Mrs. J. O. Huffman with Mrs. J. Ross assisting.

A few moments of silent prayer were offered for Rev. W. Merrick, who is ill and for the friends of Bethany in their loss of two valuable W.M.S. members, Mrs. James Sills and Mrs. William Clarke.

All wish the pastor a speedy recovery. Six members were selected to offer the special prayers.

The address based on the theme "Walk as Children of Light" was given by Mrs. Gerald Swan in which she quoted "The Happy Pilgrim" by Patience Strong.

Mrs. Fred Yorke sang impressively "My Prayer", the theme song of Edward McHugh.

The meeting closed with this thought to remember: "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your Father which is in heaven". All joined in singing "The Day Thou Gavest Lord is Ended". Mrs. John Ross pronounced the benediction.

The hostess served bountiful refreshments which everyone enjoyed.

The March meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Clarence Martin with Mrs. W. Clare and Mrs. Everett Yorke in charge of the program.

The St. Andrew's-Gilead W.A. will meet on March 4th at the home of Mrs. J. O. Huffman.

Abolition Of Death Penalty Hotly Debated

OTTAWA (CP)—Abolition of the death penalty for murder was debated in the Commons Friday.

A bill introduced by Ross Thatcher (CCF—Moose Jaw) to substitute life imprisonment for hanging was discussed for an hour and then dropped to the bottom of the private members' list of legislation. No cabinet member spoke.

Mr. Thatcher said capital punishment violates the Christian principle of the sanctity of human life. Also, he said, it has not proven la deterrent to murder since killings are on the increase. There also is the possibility of executing the wrong man for a crime.

Earl Catherwood (PC — Haldimand) said he feels the time will come when capital punishment will be abolished. For the time being, it should be maintained, but a less "inhuman" method than hanging should be used. The fear of the death penalty was infinitely more of a deterrent than life imprisonment.

Rev. Dan McIvor (L—Fort William) said he is convinced the present method of execution in Canada is "barbarous." There was "a good deal" in the suggestion that a murderer should be given the option of death or life imprisonment.

MARMORA

Marmora — Preceding the annual meeting of Marmora Chapter, I.O.D.E., held on Thursday evening, the annual dinner was held in St. Paul's parish hall on Thursday evening. It being Coronation Year, the decorations used were of the I.O.D.E. colors, purple and yellow, for the flowers and candles and a golden crown graced the centre of the head table.

The repast was served by members of St. Paul's Ladies' Guild. With guests from Stirling and Norwood Chapters the attendance was swelled to 74.

Royal Toast

Mrs. William Regan, retiring president, in the course of the meal proposed the royal toast.

A vote of thanks was extended the Guild by Mrs. Charles Brady, with reply being given by Mrs. Jack Hickey. Adjournment was made to the Masonic hall for the business of the evening.

Following the opening exercises the secretarial report and treasurer's report as given by Mrs. A. F. Fraser and Miss M. Savage, respectively, were adopted. The latter report showed finances to be in good condition following a goodly expenditure on worthy causes.

Favorable also were the annual reports given of the activities of the various committees.

Installation of Officers

Mrs. M. Tillotson, of Kingston, councillor of the Provincial Chapter, took the chair for the installation of Mrs. R. H. Rennie the incoming Regent, and of Mrs. C. R. Whittemore, the new treasurer. Completing the executive for the year are:

1st. vice-president, Mrs. J. M. Brownlie; 2nd. vice-president, Mrs. J. H. McCrodan; educational secretary, Mrs. R. G. Walsh: standard bearer, Mrs. A. W. Drew; Echoes secretary, Mrs. W. Tupper; councillors, Mrs. M. Borland, Miss H. Henderson, Mrs. J. H. English, Mrs. E. Brady and Mrs. E. J. Maynes.

Upon retiring, Mrs. Regan thanked the executive and members for their co-operation in the past year.

Following her installation Mrs. Rennie pledged herself to give her fullest support and will count on the membership to work together for the welfare of the chapter.

A short program was carried out under direction of Mrs. J. Aitchison, program convener for the evening. She conducted two contests and was accompanist for a solo rendered by Miss Anne Nickle, of Madoc.

Guest Speaker

Mrs. M. Tillotson, as the guest speaker for the evening, was introduced by Mrs. M. Borland. She gave a fine exposition of the varied educational work carried out by the order. She stressed support of adopted schools in the northern areas of Canada. Also she urged continued observance of national anniversaries, particularly in the schools, feeling that on the Friday before Empire Day a special program, incidental thereto, should be carried out in the schools.

She was thanked for her able address by Mrs. J. Aitchison.

The matter of the forthcoming canvass of the town for the C.N.I.B. project was touched upon. The chapter sent representatives to the recent meeting called by Reeve Wells to plan for this canvass and will take its place with other organizations asked to help.

The meeting closed with the presentation of the flag.

What More Could a Boy Want?

While grownups questioned in a recent Gallup Poll survey had myriads of reasons to explain their approval or disapproval of a child having pets, this happy young lad and his dog are oblivious to the controversy. Seventy-eight per cent of Canadians interview agreed that "it's a good thing for a child to have a pet." Perhaps they themselves were influenced by childhood memories.—Central Press Canadian.

Someone to Love

By Irene Lonnen Ernhart

—III—

It was April now, one of those warm sunny days, incredibly fragrant and sweet, the air as soft as silk, the grass a tender new green. Jenny always cut across Cleveland park on her way to catch the bus and that was where she met Tod. He was sitting on a bench along the walk that circled the fountain with its statue of Grover Cleveland.

At first she didn't recognize him, for he was slouched down on the bench with his hat sort of over his face just like the other loafers. But suddenly he straightened and shoved back his hat.

"Tod!" She stopped shock still and her heart jumped into her throat. He looked thin, but as handsome as ever.

"I didn't know whether you'd stop of not." He got up, searching her face. "I remembered you always used to like to cut across the park."

"Oh, Tod! I'm so glad to see you!" Tears actually sprang into her eyes, much to her dismay. Tears of relief and delight. "I phoned and Harriet said no one knew where you were, and I've been so terribly worried."

"Harriet told me you phoned. I've been trying all week to get up the nerve to look you up."

"To get up the nerve?"

He twisted his hat in his hands and she lokoed that hietaD"HT and she noticed that his hands shook ever so slightly.

"Yeah. I said I'd phone you and then I didn't, and it's been quite a while. I guess Harriet told you what a bender I'd been on. I guess I couldn't think of anything but running away."

"But, Tod," she whispered, "it doesn't matter. All of us run away in one fashion or another." She came close and put her hand on his arm, smiling at him.

"Gee, Jenny," he said looking down at her, "we used to be such good pals, didn't we?"

"Yes."

They walked along now, away from the inquisite stares of the loafers, until they found a more secluded bench. "I don't want to bother you Jenny, or make you late for work."

"Max won't care if I'm a few minutes late." She souldn't bear to let him go away and perhaps not see him for months again. Besides she had a feeling that he needed her. That was probably why he had come.

He told her all about the scene that had taken place at home the day of his return from New York. Harriet had had hysterics and they'd had to call the doctor for his mother, she carried on so. And his brother Joe had taken the whole thing as a personal double cross.

Jenny, remembering Joe, could just picture him, talking in that Humphrey Bogart way of his, cigaret dangling from his mouth, his face twisted, his hair falling athwart his forehead. Someday Joe would probably get into some real trouble, trouble worse than getting knocked flat for cheating at a poolroom poker game. He was cheap. The whole family was cheap, all except Tod. But, like Pop used to say, Tod had always been different somehow, clean and handsome, and nothing petty or cheap about him.

Jenny put her hand on his arm again sympathetically. She longed to touch him, to take him into her arms and cradle him like a child. "Don't mind your family, Tod. They'll get over it. I remember when you all used to live on Catalpa street where there was always a family row at your house about something."

"You'd have thought I jilted Liz instead of her jilting me,' he said ruefully. "To begin with, Ma had rented this expensive apartment. They moved there a month ago. Ma never did think any further than this month's rent, anyhow. junk, all bought on credit; new And they'd filled the place full of clothes for the wedding, lamps, dishes, even new furniture—because they said they didn't want me to feel ashamed to bring Liz around to see them. Liz had never met them, and they felt as though —well, you know. Then after getting all set up, they find out all of a sudden I wasn't going to marry into the Conover family after all. Well you can see how it was——"

"Yes, I can see." Jenny remembered the venom in Harriet's voice that night over the phone.

"And I was feeling so upset and confused anyway, and pretty blue to think Liz couldn't have waited and explained things to me."

A squirrel scampered along the green grass and sat up on its haunches regarding them hopefully with its beady eyes, chattering fiercely.

"But in the end it would have come out the same, anyway, wouldn't it, Tod?" Jenny said after a moment. "The only thing to do is start all over — a fresh start."

He was so good looking, she was thinking, so darned handsome. She didn't see how Liz could have turned him down for anybody else. If only he could look at her and stop thinking of Liz now. He had been half in love with her once. She was sure of it. He had even kissed her a few times, and they'd been warm kisses too.

"I suppose I ought to get a job," Tod said. He picked a blade of grass and twirled it in his fingers thoughtfully. "I ought to finish college. Just one more year is all I need for a degree."

"Why don't you?"

"There'll be no more football," he said glumly, "after that accident."

"The football wasn't the most important thing, anyway, Tod. It wouldn't help you get a job. It's the education that counts."

He was silent for a few moments, watching the squirrel scamper away and dart up a tree.

"I wouldn't be much of a hero around the campus now." Bitterness twisted his mouth. "I guess I wouldn't count for much with a lot of people that used to be glad of my company."

"You count with me, Tod."

He turned to look at her, his blue eyes sober and intent. "Jenny, You're the only good friend I got."

"Don't be silly, Tod. Just because Liz married someone else is no sign all your friends are going to drop you. You're making too much out of it. Just because you're heartsick and disillusioned everything seems distorted. I don't want to sound like a Pollyanna, but honestly you'll see things in a different light a couple of months from now."

He continued to look at her thoughtfully. "Jenny you're really pretty wonderful." He flushed slightly, perhaps thinking of the three years when he had never bothered to look her up, or phone. Maybe he was thinking about Pop's dying and his not even coming around then or sending a card. "You've had a pretty rough time of it," he went on, "having no one but Pop for so long, and now he's gone. It must be lonely."

"Yes, and dull too. I mean, unless you do have someone to come home to or look after there's really no meaning in anything. Of course I have friends. There's Nina. She works at Max's with me, and then—" she toyed self-consciously with her purse, embarrassed at his steady scrutiny. "I suppose you have men friends, too. I mean, I'd have thought you'd have been married before now."

"I guess the right one never asked me," she said. She had meant the words to sound light and frivolous, but there was a queer hoarse note in them that made Tod lift his brows.

"The right one!" He laughed "Why Jenny! You're in love with someone! Who is it? Someone I know?"

"It's you, silly." She tossed her head, and threw him a lightly provocative look from her brown eyes.

He looked surprised and rather pleased. "D'you suppose you could get the day off, Jenny?" he said abruptly. "We could go somewhere and——"

"Where?"

"Oh, I don't know, lunch at some snazzy place, and then a show maybe."

"Sure," she said happily. "Max won't care. "I've not had a day off in ages. I'll phone him."

Tod hailed a taxi swinging around one of the boulevard curves nearby and it drew to the curb and they climbed in. The day suddenly grew festive, the sun was brighter, the air was fresh with promise.

—IV—

Jenny saw a lot of Tod Duncan during the next few weeks. He met her after work occasionally and they had dinner together. Once or twice he went home with her to the tiny house on Catalpa street and she cooked a couple of steaks and French fries and got out a bottle of Pop's wine that was still stored in the basement.

Jenny was trying to find an apartment, for the house had been sold. And Tod was trying to find a job, so they had a lot of fun looking over the rental and help wanted columns of the evening paper, and underscoring the favorable ones. They had a laugh over more than one.

"Listen to this," Tod said once. "Wanted: Closers and Canvassers!' What in the world is a closer? And here's an ad for a saddle horse groom. Must have experience, house and utilities furnished. I know about horses. Liz insisted I learn to ride. We were going to have a stable of horses, among other things." He broke off then and a short silence fell between them. By tacit understanding they did not speak of Liz.

After a while he looked up and said casually, "By the way, Mr. Conover phoned today and asked me to come to his office."

"He did?" Jenny answered just as casually. She began to clear the table.

"Yes. I went down, and listened to what he had to say. It seems that the whole Conover family disapproved of Liz's elopement, including him. And he saw no reason why I shouldn't accept the job that had been arranged for me in the Agency."

Jenny paused by the sink, her back to him. "And what did you tell him?"

"No, thanks."

"Why?" She did turn now, regarding him curiously.

"Because of what he implied."

"And what was that?"

"That Liz had made a mistake, but sooner or later would come to her senses. And when she did, there I'd be, ready and waiting, as though nothing at all had happened. You see, Mr. Conover's always been fond of me. He's quite a football fan."

"So you turned down the offer?"

Tod nodded. "I wasn't ready for a job like that anyhow, in a big-time advertising agency. I'd like to go back to school and get a degree. Not to State, but some other college — maybe Markwood here in town."

Jenny came over and stood by the table looking down at him. "I'm so glad to hear you talk like that, Tod. For a while I thought——"

"That losing Liz was going to get me down?" He grinned up at her. "It did, almost, but I think I'll get over it pretty nicely after all. I almost told Conover off today, because he wouldn't take no for an answer, insisted that I think it over and give him an answer later."

"Well, perhaps you'll get a job soon, and then it'll be easy to tell him."

A few days later Tod did get a job with an automotive supply company. He had to buy a car, but he'd wanted one anyway. He was out of town a good deal from then on, but he and Jenny still had week-ends together.

May passed and it was June. They went one fine Sunday morning out to Pop's old shack on the river. Jenny had packed a picnic lunch, deviled eggs, potato salad in a fruit jar, pickles, minced ham sandwiches and cookies. And Tod had brought a lard bucket full of ice and canned beer.

The day was sunny and warm to the point of sultriness. They had to park the car on the gravel road and walk in to the cabin because the lane, untravelled for so long, looked soggy. Jenny carried the picnic hamper, and their bathing suits, and Tod the lard can full of beer.

The day before had been rainy and the hot sun now made the fields steamy smelling. There was the scent of honeysuckle heavy in the air, for the vine was thick along the fences, and there was the smell of white clover too from a nearby open field.

The cabin, nothing more than a shack really looked dismal with its closed shutters and it smelled musty, but they soon had it opened and aired out.

The river was just right, cool and greenish looking, and not a bit muddy in spite of the previous day's rain. Tod hunted out Pop's old fishing tackle and Jenny shook the dust out of the cushions on the furniture.

The day passed pleasantly. They swam in the deep pool below the cabin, and later, after they'd eaten they took fishing tackle and the can of bait Tod had bought on the way out and sat together on the small wooden pier fishing. They talked a lot about Pop, the way it used to be when he was along, the funny ways he had of doing things, the way he used to get so excited when he caught a fish.

Finally they were getting ready to close up the cabin and drive back to town. Tod had already put the fishing tackle away, and Jenny was gathering up the last remnants of their lunch putting it away in the hamper, shaking out the cloth. Tod had lit his pipe and was leaning with one arm on the fireplace mantel watching her. Outside a robin sang its rain song, monotonously, loudly in the stillness. And the running of the river made a muted undertone.

"Jenny."

She paused and looked at him for a second, knowing instantly by the look in his eyes what he was going to say. Her heart almost stopped beating, and she could feel the color creeping up her throat.

"Yes, Tod?"

"I've been dong an awful lot of thinking lately."

"About what?"

"The future."

"Oh you mean about finishing college?" she couldn't quite keep the breathlessness out of her voice, for she knew quite well he didn't mean that.

"No. About us."

"Us?"

She suddenly dropped the package of paper napkins she was about to put in the hamper, and they slithered over the floor. "Oh darn." She stooped to pick them up, and Tod came to help. Their hands touched and all at once Tod took her wrist and they both stood up.

Restored to Health Through March of Dimes

Irene Pump, 22-year-old polio victim, was on her way to becoming a helpless bed-fast invalid in spite of her heroic efforts to avoid this. Years of treatment and struggle to become mobile were being lost by a further weakening of her back. Surgery held out her only hope of escape from life in a wheel chair and eventually in bed.

Her hospital insurance would not cover the long months necessary for this type of treatment, but the March of Dimes could, and did, come to her aid. From September 1951 to May 1952 she was hospitalized. Recuperation at home for a few months followed and in September of 1952 she was ready to go back to work, a useful, independent member of society and very happy to be so as her picture indicates.

Donations to the March of Dimes will repeat this story for many another young polio victim whose healthy active mind is being imprisoned in a body that will not respond to his will. Such imprisonment is so often unnecessary, — this is one type of freedom that money will buy. Send your dimes and dollars to the Canadian March of Dimes, Box 10, Toronto, to see that every one that can be reclaimed is restored to useful happy living.

$5,000,000 Gift Of Wheat For Pakistan Relief

Canadian Grain Will Alleviate Food Shortage

OTTAWA (CP)—The Canadian government has decided to provide Pakistan with a gift of $5,000,000 worth of wheat to help alleviate a food shortage in that country.

The external affairs department announced Monday that the money will come out of Canada's 1952-53 contribution of $25,000,000 to the six-year $5,000,000 Colombo Plan to develop South and Southeast Asia.

Another $25,000,000—the third—is proposed for the fiscal year starting April 1.

The wheat to Pakistan will be shipped shortly and will consist of various grades, including Nos. 1, 2, 3, and 4.

A similar $5,000,000 wheat allocation, also covered by Colombo Plan funds, was sent to India during the last few months.

As in the case of India, Pakistan will be asked to convert money it receives from its people for the wheat into a fund to help cover costs of economic developments approved by Pakistan and Canadian governments.

Live Models Jam Traffic

BARNSLEY, England (Reuters) — Most men don't stop to stare at lingerie displays in store windows. They look the other way and hurry past.

But a display in a local women's store Monday not only stopped the men in their tracks —it caused a traffic jam and brought out the police.

No plaster doll, but a shapely model was parading lilac lingerie for an appreciative audience — mostly male.

Police said the show was holding up traffic, ordered the girl out of the window.

Mother Perishes With 2 Children In Montreal Fire

MONTREAL (CP) — Mrs. Blanche Taillefer and her two young children were burned to death today when fire swept through their home on mid-town de Bullion Street.

Two other families in the building fled to safety.

There appeared to be little warning of the fire, the cause of which was not immediately determined.

When firemen finally subdued the blaze they found the interior of the house a mass of charred furniture and smoldering walls.

The bodies of the 35-year-old mother and little Denise, 1½ were found in the front of the house, the baby on the chesterfield and the mother kneeling beside her. The body of five-year-old Gilles was found in a back bedroom. The father, Ephram Taillefer, was at work.

3 Counties Urge Central Location For Executions

TORONTO (CP) — A county council has asked the provincial government to have condemned prisoners hanged at some central point in the province.

The request was contained in a resolution put before a meeting of the Ontario Association of Rural Municipalities Monday by the united counties of Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry.

Angus McDonald, reeve of Alexandria and a spokesman for the county council, recalled that an official report recommended more than 15 years ago that prisoners be executed outside the county where the crime was committed.

Queen to Have Tito for Lunch

LONDON (AP) — The Queen will entertain President Tito at luncheon when the Yugoslav leader visits Britain March 23, Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told the House of Commons today.

Tito's visit will be a private one, Eden said, "since it would be inappropriate for a state visit to take place before the Coronation. He comes, however, as a guest of the government."

THE WEATHER

TORONTO (CP) — Synopsis: Pleasant spring-like weather continues to favor southern Ontario today. In northern regions of the province temperatures are cmoparatively mild but slightly colder air is pushing its way into these northern regions causing some light snow.

Indications for Wednesday are for mainly cloudy skies throughout the province. An area of rain over the southern states is being closely watched since there is a threat of it spreading northward into the lower lakes region late Wednesday.

Man Who Killed Wealthy Parents Dies on Gallows

BRISTOL, England (AP)—Miles Giffard, 26 - year - old Cornwall county cricket star convicted of killing his wealthy parents and dumping their bodies off a cliff, was hanged today at Horfield prison.

Only police and newspaper men stood outside the prison gate when the formal notice of execution was posted.

Young Giffard beat his father and mother to death with an iron bar last Nov. 7 in their home near Porthpean. He loaded their bodies in a wheelbarrow, trundled them to a nearby cliff and threw them to the seashore 120 feet below.

Police picked the young man up the following night in London, where he had driven in his father's car to meet his girl friend. The girl, 19-year-old Gabriel Vallance, testified at his trial that young Giffard had taken her on a round of drinking places, told her he had killed his parents and then proposed marriage.

The prosecution charged Giffard committed the double murder because his father cut off his allowance to keep him from spending time in London.

The defence contended the youth was insane.

A plea for reprieve on the ground that one juror disagreed with the verdict was turned down last Saturday by Home Secretary Sir David Maxwell Fyfe.

Uninsured Motorists Should Pay to Fund

TORONTO (CP)—Motorists who do not insure themselves should pay all, or most of the money going into the unsatisfied judgment fund, Robert Macauley (PC—Toronto-Riverdale) told the Ontario Legislature Monday.

He claimed that holders of motor vehicle licences in the province should be divided into two categories: those who insure themselves and those who do not.

PEACE OR WAR IS STILL ISSUE AS UN RESUMES

Pearson Warns Against Dividing Free Nations

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (CP)—Assembly President L. B. Pearson of Canada was scheduled to open the second half of the United Nations seventh general assembly today with peace or continued war in Korea still the most important item on its agenda.

The full assembly meeting at 3 p.m. EST was expected to include only the formalities of getting started. The assembly recessed for Christmas Dec. 22 and delayed return to work to allow the new Eisenhower administration time to work out its policy on Korea and eight other items on the agenda still to be discussed.

Pearson, external affairs minister who has been mentioned as a likely successor to Trygve Lie as UN secretary-general, said during the week-end that Korea dominated the thinking of all diplomats at UN headquarters.

The assembly president warned Monday that "irresponsible action or talk which might divide the free countries in these days of crises would be folly."

Pearson spoke in the chapel of Rollins College at Winter Park, Fla. During convocation ceremonies he was awarded an honorary degree of doctor of literature.

The Canadian cabinet minister strongly defended the UN secretariat against charges that it was "full of dangerous and subversive people" and was a threat to the security of the host country.

'Fowl' Joke Is Played On Gander

WACO, Tex. (AP)—Aleck's second wife is an oil drum.

Some think Aleck ought to see a psychiatrist, but he's happy, so why bother?

Seven years ago, Aleck, a gander and his first wife, a goose, were crossing a street. A car whizzed by. Aleck dodged but his wife, the goose, didn't.

W. Tell Hayes, Aleck's owner, picked up the dead goose, dropped the body in an empty oil drum and cremated it.

Since then, Aleck has not strayed more than 10 feet from the side of the oil drum—and then only to chase intruders.

"He talks to her all the time," Hayes said. "And when we feed him—right there by the oil drum—he tells her what he has to eat. Turns his head toward that drum and chatters away before he takes a bite."

Aleck knows the joys of parenthood, too. Every year, Hayes hatches some eggs in an incubator and puts the goslings inside the oil drum. Then he turns the drum on its side. Out walk the goslings.

"Aleck always looks at that oil drum with an expression like 'I don't know how you do it old girl, but I knew you'd do it,'" Hayes said.

HATCHET ATTACK, SUICIDE

LONDON, ONT. (CP) — Mrs. Rose Wallison, 38, was attacked by a hatchet wielder in her home today but escaped to a neighbor's house without serious injury. Later police found William Melville Richmond, about 70, dead behind the furnace in the Wallison home, his throat slashed.

Shopbreakers Nailed by Policeman Forced to Call Station for Wagon

HAMILTON (CP) — A rookie policeman who discovered two men tampering with the safe of a store early today, held them at gunpoint and ordered one of them to telephone the police station and have the patrol wagon dispatched to "pick them up." Seven hours later, in magistrate's court, one of the men was sentenced to three years in penitentiary on a shopbreaking charge while the other was remanded a week for sentence.

Constable Keith Elliott testified that he discovered Arthur Glover, 24, and David Clappison, 16, crouched before the safe at the rear of Peacock's meat market about 3:30 a. m.

He said that Glover, who was later given the three-year prison term, was carrying a fully-loaded .22 calibre pistol, "cocked and ready to fire." Both pleaded guilty to the break-in and Clappison was remanded a week for sentence.

Constable Elliott was attracted into the store by jimmy marks on a rear door which had been broken open. He drew his own revolver when he saw them and ordered Clappison to telephone the dispatcher at the police station and ask him to "send the wagon."

Clappison carried out the direction and was asked by the dispatcher: "Why do you want the wagon?"

"Because," replied Clappison, "this guy's got me covered."

B.C. House Is Told Immorality Taught in School Classes; Cries of 'Shame' Greet Charge

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A claim that children in British Columbia's schools are being taught immorality was made today by a government member of the legisalture.

J. A. Reid (SC—Salmon Arm) quoted from a document he said had been prepared by A. J. Clotworthy of Salmon Arm, whom he described as a teacher in Alberta and B. C. for 29 years.

Sex in Detail

Amid cries of "shame, shame" from opposition benches, Mr. Reid quoted Clotworthy as saying he had found school books describing sex in "complete detail and written under the guise of teaching morality."

School children, the document said, are becoming thieves, robbers, dope addicts and prostitutes.

The document, later filed with the clerk of the house, also claimed that provincial teachers are "socialist-dominated" and that the CCF is a "sinister faction" which has gained control of the B. C. Teachers' Federation.

Education Minister Tilly Rolston hastily conferred with Premier W. A. C. Bennett and said that on behalf of the government she was disavowing the statements. She added Mr. Reid has the right to express his own views.

Help for Small Home Buyer Urged in Ontario Legislature By Two Government Members

TORONTO (CP)—Government aid to the small home buyer was urged in the provincial legislature Monday.

Harold Fishleigh (PC—Woodbine) and Robert Macaulay (PC—Riverdale) said in the throne speech debate the provincial and federal governments should subsidize housing through loans or mortgages.

Mr. Macaulay said a good two-bedroom home could be built for $8,600. He suggested the federal government advance the entire amount to builders and have the buyer return it with an $865 down payment and a monthly instalment of $50 for about 25 years.

Mr. Fishleigh said the province should resume its practice of issuing second mortgages, a system it followed shortly after the Second World War.

He said private firms insist on a minimum salary of $4,000 a year and a large-down payment before issuing mortgages, preventing many young couples from buying a house.

"These people have to go to the loan sharks and pay high rates of interest, yet at our last session we passed a bill so that a displaced person could borrow up to $15,000 if they agreed to stay on farms," he said.

T. D. Thomas (CCF—Ontario) said the government should broaden its regulations for disability pensions. He said last year $2,000,000 was voted for this purpose and $367,000 was left over.

Mr. Thomas said there are many cases of pressing need in which disability pensions have been rejected because the regulations were too restrictive.

Mr. Fishleigh said one man was turned down because his wife earned $1,200 a year, although he had been confined in bed almost continually for 20 years.

Mr. Macaulay appealed for an increase in the federal old-age pension from $40 to $50 a month. He said in some areas $40 a month is insufficient to pay the rent for one room.

He also recommended appointment of parliamentary secretaries drawn from the membership of the House, to lighten the load on cabinet ministers. He said this would provide a proving ground for the administrative talents of the members.

Mr. Fishleigh suggested the province make loans available to British industries as an inducement to locate in Ontario. He said many firms have millions of pounds in English banks, but no Canadian dollars. Loans could be issued with English credit as collateral.

John Root (PC — Wellington North) urged legislation to protect the dairy industry from "unfair competition" of edible oils manufacturers.

Mr. Root said Northern Ontario can develop a grass-farming industry, but it would depend on a good livestock and dairy market.

"We have a responsibility to legislate in such a way that this industry is allowed to develop without unfair competition," he said.

R. M. Myers, (PC — Waterloo South), asked for an increase in the annual provincial grant to the Boy Scouts Association for $8,500 to $23,500.

He said 66,000 Ontario boys are receiving valuable training as scouts, but more money was needed to extend the movement among 300,000 boys not in the organization.

Tobacco Firms Reduce Cigarets Two Cents More

MONTREAL (CP) — Many Canadian smokers were greeted at retailers today with a further cut in the price of their favorite brand of cigarets.

Major tobacco companies Monday followed Finance Minister Abbott's budget cut of four cents in excise duties on a package of cigarets with a further reduction of two cents, effective on shipments made by the companies Monday.

A spokesman for the trade said it was believed that retailers generally did not have large stocks on hand and that while some might clear old stocks at the old price, others would absorb the loss and clear them at the new price.

The consumer price, with the new cut and without provincial taxes, will be 33 cents for a package of 20 cigarets. The 25-cigaret pack will cost 41 cents. Six provinces have varying provincial taxes on cigarets.

The companies gave no reason for the cut and there was no indication whether the move meant a sudden little price war or whether smuggling of United States cigarets had any bearing.

OPPENHEIMER RESIGNS

LONDON (AP)—Sir Ernest Oppenheimer, known as the diamond king, resigned Monday his permanent directorship of the Anglo-American Corporation of South Africa, the giant gold and diamond mining enterprise he founded in 1917. Sir Ernest, 72, and ailing, is one of the world's richest men. He remains as ordinary director and chairman of the corporation.

Top Nazi General Von Runstedt, 77, Dies in Germany

HANNOVER, Germany (AP) — Field Marshal Gerd von Runstedt, 77, died at his home here today.

The soldier, who was regarded as Germany's best military leader, had been ailing for some time and his housekeeper said he succumbed early today to "general weakness."

The erect, taciturn Rundstedt came out of retirement at the start of the Second World War and outflanked the heroically resisting Poles after a German mass frontal attack had failed.

He had already won fame in the First World War as chief of staff of an army corps serving under Crown Prince Wilhelm.

It was Von Rundstedt who exploded the "phoney war" of 1939-40 by directing the great German breakthrough at Sedan where he won promotion to field marshal.

He directed what many observers have called the most flawless operation of the entire Second World War—the blitz drive through the Ukraine in the summer of 1944.

RESCUE BOY FROM RIVER

PETERBOROUGH (CP) Keith Nolan, three-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Nolan, was rescued from the Otonabee river Monday by two Toronto men. The boy had wandered onto the ice of the river. When he fell through, Eric George and Steve Kippell, both railway surveyors, jumped in and pulled him from the icy water.

STUDENTS FORCE 'RED DEAN' TO FLEE UP ALLEY

Disrupt London Meeting With Bells, Paper Bags

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—University students, wildly ringing cowbells and exploding paper bags, forced Dr. Hewlett Johnson, the "Red" dean of Canterbury, to give up a scheduled address and flee through a back alley Monday night.

The University of Western Ontario students broke up a meeting of the London Society of Friendship committee by keeping up a continual din in the Masonic Temple packed by 600 persons.

When Dr. Johnson, on a tour of Eastern Canada, dashed out the rear entrance, students surrounded his car. Police officers finally cleared a path for the car.

The students arrived early and filled the first 15 rows of the auditorium. They made it impossible for anyone to hear Dyson Carter, editor of the left-wing publication "News-Facts," who spoke for 30 minutes.

Bert Haggis, chairman of the committee, threatened to cancel the meeting unless the crowd subsided. When Dr. Johnson began his speech he threatened to take his seat "unless the children quit yelling."

Finally the dean dashed outside the auditorium and jumped into his car. He turned and shouted:

"They are not quite adult yet in London. I shall go back and tell them so."

Piano Mute Gives Tired Ears Break

PITTSBURGH. (AP) — What should parents do with their ears while junior or sister practises at the piano?

Norman Welsh, an insurance agent who likes to play the piano himself, says he has the solution.

It's a silencing device that looks like a pole with pieces of felt attached. Placed against the strings of a piano, it mutes the sound so folks in the next apartment can't hear it.

"It ought to be made by manufactures and given with each new upright sold," says Welsh, who claims the device is so simple he can't even get a patent on it.

Welsh says the silencer saves his wife's nerves when he's practising.

"Some people ask, 'what about the tone?' I tell them the tones are muted. Who cares about tone until a player can put the right finger on the right note at the right time?"

Damage of $1,500 was confined mostly to the living room.

Last of Famed Fishing Schooner Skippers, Captain Ben Pine, Dies

GLOUCESTER, Mass. (AP)—Captain Ben Pine, 69, last of the famed fast sailing fishing schooner skippers, died Monday of a heart attack at his home. He was a native of Newfoundland.

Capt. Pine was the last Gloucesterman to keep sail on a fishing vessel as motors supplanted canvas, ending a picturesque era. He became internationally known as skipper of the famous racing fishing schooner Gertrude L. Thebaud.

In her, he thrice disputed the International Fishermen's Trophy, emblematic of sailing supremacy on the North Atlantic with Captain Angus Walters and his big Lunenburg, N.S., saltbanker Bluenose.

Those race series, off Gloucester in 1930, off Halifax in 1931, and off Gloucester again in 1938 were sailed with a fierce disregard for the niceties of yacht racing rules.

Captain Ben took the opening round, Capt. Angus the second and third. But the third, in 1938, fated to ring down the curtain for all time on such contests, ended in a discordant note. The race committee, on a wildly pitching destroyer when the wind piped up to a snorter, succumbed to seasickness and called off one of the three races of that series just when the Thebaud appeared to have the trophy tucked away in her locker.

Eight Persons Die In Halifax Tenement Blaze

Dozen Families Flee When Fire Started After Dawn

By FRED CHAFE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

HALIFAX (CP)—The death toll rose to eight today after an early morning fire swept through a row of tenement houses in the north end of this port city of 100,000.

Firemen recovered an eighth body, believed to be that of a woman, as they probed through the blackened, ice-covered ruins of four wooden buildings.

One person was seriously injured in the outbreak which blazed for more than two hours before it was brought under control.

A dozen families were forced to flee the fire.

Water froze where it fell in bitter pre-dawn weather as firemen fought the flames on North Barrington street near the naval dockyard and in the approach area to the new Halifax-Dartmouth bridge.

Still unidentified were the bodies, recovered earlier, of a man, another woman and five children.

Gutted was a four-storey tenement, a row of apartments, a grocery store and a tavern.

Murder Trial Opens in Death Of Kitchener Girl

KITCHENER (CP) — Kenneth Wiles, 21, today pleaded innocent to a charge of murder in the fatal shooting last month of his girl friend, 17-year-old Marie Huras.

The trial of the young carpenter started today in Ontario Supreme Court with Mr. Justice Wishart presiding. A grand jury Monday returned a true bill requiring him to stand trial.

The girl died in Toronto Jan. 27 of bullet wounds in the head, the same day as the shooting here.

Crown attorney H. L. Daufman, outlining the Crown's case, said the Crown will show that police found the wounded girl in Wiles' automobile with Wiles and that a gun was between the man and the girl. He said the Crown will attempt to show the bullet did not come from the gun in the car but from a sawed-off rifle.

Mr. Daufman said Crown evidence will show that Wiles and Miss Huras had been keeping company but that the girl recently gave Wiles back his ring and started going out with other men.

The trial is continuing.

Thieves Get Loot, Miss Queen, Duke

WILTON, England, (AP) — A gang of ladder thieves raided historic Wilton House here Monday night less than 24 hours after the departure of the Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh.

The thieves climbed into the ancestral home of the 72-year-old Earl of Pembroke, and stole two fur coats, an emerald ring the size of a postage stamp and other valuables with a total value of £6,000.

The Queen and her husband were guests of Lord and Lady Pembroke during a cross-country steeplechase near here Saturday.

The thieves did not get into a museum containing art treasures and tapestries valued at £750,000.

Victorious GI Gets a Shock

IN KOREA (AP)—Pte. Robert Frankhuser walked back to his tank the other night feeling well-pleased with himself.

He had just captured two Chinese Reds single-handed and marched them back to his tank company command post.

He had waited patiently while the Chinese crept up on the tank. Then he sprang up and waved his .45 calibre automatic in their faces.

He chuckled as he recalled the shock on their faces, the way their eyes glued on his pistol, how they dropped their burp guns and shot their hands into the air.

Still chuckling, he patted the .45 in the holster, pulled it out — and got the shock of his life. It wasn't loaded.

Rural Municipal Heads Reject Criticism of CAS

TORONTO (CP) — Officials of Ontario rural municipalities Monday rejected a suggestion that the Children's Aid Society is helping to break up homes by offering better accommodation for its wards than most families can afford for their own children.

Carleton county council had submitted a strongly - worded criticism to the Ontario Association of Rural Municipalities of the cost of maintaining Children's Aid Societies and of the results obtained.

Heart Disease Biggest Killer During January

TORONTO (CP)—Diseases of the heart killed more people in Ontario in January than the combined totals of the next three leading causes of death, provincial statistics show.

The leading causes and their toll were: Heart, 1,633; vascular lesions affecting the central nervous system, 583; cancer, 532, and violent and accidental deaths, 296.

There were more births and deaths but fewer marriages in January, 1953, than in the same month last year.

The figures, with January, 1952, in brackets: Births, 10,101 (9,476); marriages, 1,499 (1,695); deaths 3,981 (3,738); and stillbirths 155 (171).

President Gives Finance Report

At the annual meeting of the Belleville and District Red Cross Society, the financial statement was submitted to members. This was reviewed before the gathering by the president, Judge J. C. Anderson.

Judge Anderson paid particular attention to the amount of the campaign receipts which came to $24,171.64. He commended upon the co-operation received from surrounding areas in raising this amount. Homemakers' fees accounted for $4,356.25 and general donations totaled $76.70.

In 1952, the branch remitted $15,867.91 to the Ontario Division. The Homemaker department expended $7,249.44. Campaign expenses and supplies totalled $1,568.35. The blood donor clinics cost the society $139.70 and assistance of hospitals and nursing centres cost an additional $208.86. Other expenditures included, rent, administration, health work, maintenance and improvement to premises.

The cash on hand and on deposit in the bank at the end of the year was $5,732.84. However, Judge Anderson explained, the greater portion of this had been transferred to the Ontario division at Toronto. Expenses on the financial statement totalled $32,843.50 for the year 1952 and the receipts balanced with a similar figure.

Red Cross Told of Far Spread Work of World Health Agency

W.H.O. — The World Health Organization; its influences upon one nation and upon many nations were discussed in an address delivered before the annual meeting of the Belleville and District Branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society last night in St. Thomas' Parish House. The speaker was Dr. Oliver Leroux, member of the W.H.O. executive board and W.H.O. liaison officer attached to the Department of National Health and Welfare at Ottawa.

In the three hour meeting the annual report was submitted and a report from the nominating committee listed the following officers for this year: Frank S. Follwell M.P.; W. E. Sandercock, M.P.P.; Roscoe Robson, M.P.P.; Warden, J. J. Kincaid and Mayor A. McLean Haig, honorary presidents; Judge J. C. Anderson, (re-elected) president; Mrs. A. H. Ketcheson, Mrs. Herbert McCabe, Archdeacon F. A. Smith, Rod Cameron, Mrs. Fred Deacon, Mrs. M. Bulger and Mrs. J. Buchanan, vice-presidents; Mrs. E. W. Elliott, secretary; Mrs. A. J. P. Joss, treasurer.

Executive Members

On the executive and advisory committee are the following: Carman Lowther, Dr. Bruce Cronk, Rev. S. E. Larman, S. E. Lewis, Mrs. W. J. Taylor, George Whitman, Mrs. C. E. Argue, Mrs. J. E. Madill, Mrs. Howard Graham, Mrs. W. C. Lockyer, Mrs. W. C. Mikel, Mr. P. W. Geen, Mrs. Jack Marsh, W. Anderson, V. J. White, Philip Till, Don McKinnon, Garnet Dobbs, Mrs. A. S. Lewis, Mrs. P. W. Geen, Alan Sprague, H. W. Ackerman, George O'Brien, G. S. Freeman, J. J. Trudeau, O. H. Cook, E. E. Follwell, H. P. Cain, Miss Carrie B. Genik, W. H. Stovin, Mrs. S. W. Northcott, Miss Josephine Tickell, Mrs. Don McKinnon, M. P. Duff, E. Booth, Fred Chamberlain, Ed Bernstein, Mrs. E. K. Atwell and Mrs. A. J. Soaft.

Representatives named to the Ontario division were: Mrs. W. C. Mikel, Mrs. A. H. Ketcheson, Mrs. Herbert McCabe and Mrs. M. Bulger.

Blood Donor Clinics

Highlight of the consolidated report was result of the Blood Donor Clinics. Five were held in the city during the past year with a total collection of 637 bottles or an average per clinic of 127.4. According to the report, this average is the third lowest in the area served by the Chorley Park Depot. As the outstanding reason for this low average per clinic, the report lists lack of response from local industry. The report said: "With the exception of the Northern Electric Company, co-operation of industry has been noteworthy by its complete absence. Members of the committee have used every reasonable means to try and organize a concentrated effort upon the part of industry but, unfortunately have been quite unsuccessful."

The Homemaker Service spent 1,245 days in 168 homes caring for 335 children. A total of 481 supervisory visits were made. Also with this service was included 11 monthly meetings which covered topics ranging from First Aid to Cancer Prevention. The branch aided 40 families in the year who were victims of illness, accident and fire. Necessary articles for home and rehabilitation use were loaned out from the "Loan Cupboard."

The Women's Work Committee was able to complete 410 articles of children's clothing. Early this year, the committee was able to supply the victims of the recent fire with clothing. Four cartons of used clothing were distributed to local needy families during 1952.

As indicated by the report, Junior Red Cross activities were at a maximum throughout the year in local public and separate schools. With most schools recording 100 per cent enrollment, a report of the individual school's activities was listed in the report. A notable accomplishment of the Junior Red Cross was its donation of $125 toward the Blind Building Campaign. Mrs. O. C. Herrington, Junior Red Cross director for the Ontario division, spoke briefly on concerted efforts of this organization throughout the province. Mrs. Herrington revealed the amount raised by the junior branch in the province, through the saving of nickles and dimes of the children, was approximately $72,500.

There were four meetings of the executive committee of the Ontario Division, all held in Toronto. At these meetings, various reports were heard from individual committees. The report states that there will be no chance for a new hospital at Whitney in 1953. At the present time, the Whitney Outpost Hospital serves a wide area and is housed in a rather old building. The superintendent there, Miss Mary McKeon, reported the staff handled more than 100 cases in 1952. Miss McKeon specified 55 of these to be maternity cases.

The campaign objective for 1953 has been set at $19,000. This figure is slightly less than that of the year previous but it was mentioned that the need is greater. It is hoped to acquire $12,500 from the city and the remaining $6,500 from surrounding areas. March 16 marks the opening of the campaign.

In his talk, Dr. Leroux dealt with a number of his personal observations in the Far East while attached to the Indian Army Medical Corps.

He described the fight against disease throughout the provinces of India and paid particular reference to cholera and malaria epidemics. He said: "A little over five years ago, Egypt was struck by cholera. Within a month the epidemic had spread with such rapidity that on one day, a thousand cases and 500 deaths were reported. Wholesale inoculations were the only means of checking the disaster which threatened to engulf the entire Middle East."

It was at this point the W.H.O., stepped in and sent vaccine speeding to the scene. Within six weeks, the battle had been won and a large part of the world was saved from what the doctor termed, "possible disaster."

Beliefs of W.H.O.

Describing the beliefs of the organization, Dr. Leroux said, "The W.H.O. believes the health of all peoples is fundamental to the attainment of peace and security. International co-operation forms the basis on which W.H.O. operates today, an epidemic anywhere on the globe endangers all of us. The efforts of W.H.O. to combat malaria in India, tuberculosis in Europe, trachoma in Burma and sleeping sickness in Africa, help to protect us, who live on this continent."

The W.H.O. was first suggested in San Francisco in 1945 and in the following year the constitution was adopted. On April 7, 1948, the 26th nation affixed its signature and the W.H.O. came into being as a specialized agency within the terms of the United Nations Charter.

In the way of entertainment, following the supper prepared by the ladies of St. Thomas' Auxiliary, the gathering heard several renditions given by Matthew Dicky, tenor, accompanied by Egerton Boyce on the piano.

During the early part of the meeting, Mrs. A. H. Ketcheson, presented Mrs. Arthur Miller with the Red Cross Homemaker Service pin for her work in this department.

Dr. Leroux was introduced by Dr. Reginald Anderson and the thanks were extended by Fred L. Ward Q.C. of Picton. The doctor's address was re-broadcast over CJBQ at 10:00 p.m. last night.

GEORGE JARRELL

Month in Jail For Supplying Liquor to Minors

Liquor Control Act cases predominated in the local magistrate's court today with five men being sentenced to jail terms following pleas of guilty. Four of the men charged as ordinary drunks chose the jail terms in lieu of paying the $14 fine and costs, while the fifth, Gordon Chauvin, received a month for supplying liquor to minors. The offence took place in Tyendinaga township.

A local woman pleaded guilty to four separate charges of shoplifting and was sentenced to ten days in jail.

"It is an extremely light penalty for what you have done," Magistrate R. C. Jackson told the woman as he passed sentence. The woman had no record of previous offences.

Detective Harold Reid told the court that the manager of Woolworth's Store had seen the woman take an article from the counter and place it in a box and then leave the store. He had caught her at the street and bringing her back into the store had notified police. Articles from three other stores were found in her possession by police.

Pussywillows, Robin Reported

Add other signs of spring:

Tulips and other spring flowers have been seen sprouting in local flower beds; pussywillows have been seen in blossom and even a robin has been reported.

Today Rex Alyea of Rossmore came up with further evidence that spring is again "just around the corner." Mr. Alyea reported that he saw a flock of between 30 and 40 ducks heading north.

He admitted, however, that the ducks could not be considered as true harbingers of spring. He said they may have come from Lake Ontario as quite a number of ducks remain there around the open water all winter.

Mrs. M. Harris Reaches Her 96th Milestone

A happy time was spent on Thursday at the home of Mrs. E. Tucker, Coleman street, when many friends assembled to honor her mother, Mrs. Martha Harris on the occasion of her 96th birthday.

Mrs. R. Logan, her daughter, from Hamilton, received the guests, who were ushered into the living room, fragrant with lovely flowers.

Other members from out of town were her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. F. Harris, of Wallbridge.

Mrs. Harris is exceedingly bright for her advanced age, and was able to entertain her guests with her fine sense of humor. For years her hobby had been crochet work, but of late years, she has dispensed with this, although she does not use glasses. Just recently, she had the misfortune to break her wrist, but in spite of this, had maintained a staunch front. Most of her life has been spent in Belleville.

Mrs. Harris was the recipient of many cards of congratulations and many lovely gifts, as well as sincere wishes for future anniversaries such as this.

A lovely birthday cake with lighted candles, and other refreshments were served, climaxing a happy afternoon and evening.

The citizens of the city join with her friends in extending to Mrs. Harris their sincere wishes for health and happiness in the days that lie ahead.

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP)—Speculative interest continued to keep stock market trading boiling today in forenoon deals but the pace was slightly slower than Monday.

New Brunswick base metals regained strength and uranium issues continued firm. The market generally showed little change on the exchange indexes; industrials, golds, base metals and western oils showed minor gains.

Volume for the first hour totalled 1,869,000 shares, a drop of about 1,000,000 shares from Monday's record first hour.

Heaviest trader was New Larder U, a New Brunswick prospect, which gained five cents in a turnover of 86,000 shares. Inspiration, interested in North Bay rare metal prospects, continued recent gains.

Industrials were mixed as utilities, refining oils and papers gained and steels, banks and constructions slipped.

Strength in lower-priced issues buoyed the base metals list. Western oils showed a majority of gains and Senior golds held firm.

PRODUCE MARKET

TORONTO. (CP) — Churning cream and butter print prices were unchanged here today.

The egg market was steady and prices were unchanged. Quotations for graded eggs in fibre cases were: A large 47; A medium 45; A small 43; grade B 40; grade C 37. Wholesale to retail: A large 52; A medium 50; A small 48; grade B 45; grade C 42.

Butter solids: first grade 62 1-4 to 62 1-2; western, second grade 59-61.

Pakistan Student Guest Speaker Before Y's Men

The conditions and improvements which have been made in Pakistan over a period of the last few years were discussed at the meeting of the Y's Men's Club by the guest speaker, Ahmin-Ud-Din of Silicot, Punjab.

The speaker is assistant director of industries in Pakistan who has been in this country for the past seven months studying the pulp and paper industry. His subject was "Factory Management".

"We have made great progress in our country," he said. "Like Canada, we have rich farming districts. Changes and improvements are being made in our methods of farming and cattle raising. We have many large herds of cattle and good rich farm crops. The mineral development in Pakistan has been extended so that we now mine large quantities of minerals of all types. The country also manufactures many types of equipment, some of the better known lines being sporting goods, musical instruments and possibly the finest type of surgical instruments available."

The population of Pakistan is 70,000,000. Asked what the reaction of the people was toward Communism, Mr. Din said, "because of the people's strong unity, their faith in each other and their country, the people will never accept the Communistic way of life."

The speaker was introduced by Ron Cass and thanked by Doug. Bateman.

Quiz Program Tests Rotarians

Continuing with the planned classification talks, the Rotary Club participated in a quiz program under the direction of Ed Bernstein on Monday in the Hotel Quinte. Questions of nonsensical value and others more serious concerning Rotary activities were put to the members by the speaker.

A letter from the president of the Kingston Club, Wilfred Buckley, was received inviting the local club to enter a quartet in the musical contests to be held in Kingston on March 16. Other correspondence included a letter from the V. O. N. requesting continued support in their forthcoming drive.

Mr. Bernstein was introduced by Mack Robertson and thanks of the club were extended by John Buchan.

U.K. Converting Infantry Forces

LONDON (AP) — Britain is converting her infantry into one of the hardest-hitting forces in the world, War Minister Anthony Head disclosed today.

He said infantry battalions are being re-equipped with a United States rocket launcher—now being mass produced in Britain — plus what is probably the most powerful anti-tank gun used by an infantry in the world and a tiny grenade-launcher which can punch holes in big tanks.

These new weapons are among the reasons Britain must pay more for her army in the coming year, Head told the House of Commons.

2-Mill Increase On School Tax May be Sought

CAMPBELLFORD — An increase of two mills in the school levy may raise the tax rate for public school supporters here to 67 mills.

At a special town council meeting here on Friday night, 1953 estimates were studied and a provisional estimate of 65 mills for public school supporters and 62 mills for separate school supporters was struck.

It is understood, however, that the public school board may ask to have the school levy raised by another two mills before the by-law is passed. The board will have to equip another room and hire another teacher if all kindergarten pupils are to be accommodated.

Mayor Locke reported that the Public Utilities Commission had assured council of a $10,000 grant —an increase of $4,000 over the 1952 grant. This amount would be reduced by any grant to council by the counties for the Memorial Hospital. Last year the United Counties granted the town $1,500 for the hospital, but it is not expected that they will do so this year.

Leave of absence from two-to-three months was granted to Councillor Burgess, due to ill health.

Police Constable Duncalfe's resignation was accepted and council decided to receive applications for a chief constable and a constable up to March 7. The position of chief constable was left open by the recent death of Chief Constable Hardy.

Interviewed by Legion President Tom Smith and Comrades K. Hazell, O. Sargison and William Hampel, council offered cooperation to that body and any others contemplating the celebration of Coronation Day, June 2. The committee of council named by Mayor Locke comprises Councillors Tatham and Free.

The Rotary Club was granted permission to hold tag days the next three Saturdays for European flood relief.

Americans Buy Homes In Niagara Peninsula

FORT ERIE, Ont. (CP)—United States citizens have bought more homes and homesites in Canada near this Niagara river town in recent weeks than in any similar period in the last 10 years.

A spokesman for a real estate company said lower prices for many goods in Canada and removal of price controls in the United States are responsible.

Brig. Rockingham Decorated By Queen Elizabeth

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP) — Brig. John Rockingham, the fighting man who commanded Canada's first forces in Korea, was decorated by the Queen today in the year's third investiture at Buckingham Palace.

The 42-year-old Canadian, now a student at the Imperial Defence College, received the insignia of a Companion of the Order of the Bath, for "his coolness in action, great loyalty and skilful leadership" in the Korean campaign.

The Order of the Bath was instituted in 1399.

After the ceremony in the gold and white state ballroom of Buckingham Palace, Rockingham said:

"It was a great thrill to be decorated by the Queen — but really this decoration belongs to the brigade. I was proud to receive it for them and will be proud to wear it for them."

Rockingham was one of 260 men and women receiving decorations at today's investiture. They included more than a dozen officers and men of the Royal Navy and British Army who served in Korea and Malaya.

The monthly meeting of the Sidney Junior Farmers and Junior Institute was held on Thursday, February 12. The Junior Institute met at the home of Jean Frost. The group began projects of making cushion covers, tea towels and chesterfield sets. Meanwhile the Junior Farmers met at Brookdale School. Dr. H. Burns addressed them on Animal Inheritance. A valentine box social, which was held after the joint meeting, was a big success. Bob Burkitt, the auctioneer, was kept busy with the frantic bidding.

Town Council Works 'for Free'

TRENTON (Special) — A lot of people in Trenton think their Mayor and councilmen receive pay for the service they render the municipality. On the contrary they work year round for free and have ever since Harry R. Cory was defeated at the polls by Kenneth J. Couch.

When Mr. Cory was Chief Magistrate he drew a salary exceeding $800 a year and councilmen received $100 apiece. Mr. Couch and his council rescinded the by-law authorizing council pay because there was a general feeling that time should be given to town administration gratis. One of the members of the Couch council objected to abolishing the annual stipend but his vote was obviously in the minority at the time the act was repealed.

A citizen argues that while Belleville councilmen are paid yearly, Trenton, with at least half the population and the same amount of business to transact in comparison gets a job done conscientiously for nothing. He contends the ratepayers would have better control is they paid their administrators.

On the other hand some of the present councilmen believe a reasonable remuneration should be forthcoming and instituted this term. In order for salaries to be resumed council would have to sanction a by-law to the effect subject to approval by the Municipal Board.

TRENTON — Stirling trounced Trenton 7 to 3 in a sudden death game here last night for third place in the Trent Valley Hockey League and by winning Stirling meets Point Anne in a two out of three playdown series starting weather permitting, in Stirling on Wednesday night.

Trenton Admirals wound up the schedule in fourth position but still fighting gamely for the loop championship. Wellington and Trenton battle it out in a best of five game series opening at Wellington Wednesday night, providing the ice is suitable.

Frankford defeated 6 R.D. at Frankford last night 11 to 6.

DANGEROUS YOUNG DRIVERS

Teen-agers figured in another spectacular and fatal highway accident over the week-end. So conspicuous have young drivers become in the mounting toll of casualties on Ontario's highways that there is serious talk of raising the age limit at which young people should be allowed driving permits. New legislation in this respect is expected to come before the current session of the Legislature.

The grim statistics support the good sense behind such a move. Figures for the first six months of 1952 show that although drivers in the 15 and 16-year-old groups were only seven per cent of the licensed drivers, they were responsible for more than ten per cent of the accidents.

Figures also indicate that drivers under 25 years of age are involved in a disproportionately large number of accidents. At one time 18 years was the accepted minimum age for the holder of a driver's permit. In recent years the legal minimum was reduced to 16 and licences have been granted, under special circumstances, to 15-year-olds.

There is little argument that teen-agers for the most part are good car drivers. Driving skills come more easily to the young than to the older person. But it is by the very reason of this acquired skill that youthful drivers become involved in more accidents. Fully confident of their driving ability they drive faster and take more chances.

Add this to the paramount fact that speed is the major cause in the record of fatalities on our highways and the higher percentage of younger drivers in accidents is understandable. The loss of driving privileges may be a serious matter to some. It may mean loss of jobs to those engaged in commercial driving. Nevertheless it is a justified measure.

There are some inescapable statistics confronting the authorities. They show that we are 18 times as likely to die by the automobile as by a gun, yet we handle automobiles and permit them to be handled with a degree of carelessness that would terrify us in the handling of firearms. They show that it is ten times more likely that we will be killed by a car than by an aircraft for each mile of travel. Few of us, however, board an airliner without serious nervous qualms even when we know it will be flown by the most highly trained and emotionaly stable pilot, but we blithely climb behind a wheel of an automobile with complete indifference to all recognized hazards to safety.

Speed and carelessness are the relentless killers on the highways. If the death toll is to be curbed the authorities must take steps to deal with those factors which statistics show to be the most dangerous.

THERE IS NO EASY WAY

Health authorities become increasingly concerned about the penalty this generation is paying for overweight. It is estimated that over 2,000,000 Canadians are reducing their life expectancy by overeating.

Many in this group are unhappily aware of their condition but they are all too reluctant to face the alternative. It is a discouraging one but it is inescapable. Experts state bluntly that "no easy way to reduce is safe; no safe way to reduce is easy."

Actuaries reveal that overweight is a major factor in many of the diseases that cause death after 45. Heart disease, whatever its specific cause, is always aggravated. A recent study of health of army officers revealed a greater incidence of high blood pressure among those overweight.

Contrary to the belief of many overweight is not the particular affliction of any particular economic group of Canadians. Workers and executives alike are its victims. The cause is simply overeating. The answer is proper diets.

Health authorities stress that the sensible plan to cope with overweight is to consult your doctor. Only a physician has the knowledge essential to deal with an individual's dietary problem.

PLAYING STALIN'S GAME

The view has been expressed here that President Eisenhower's policy on Formosa was nothing to become greatly exercised about in Ottawa. Now it has been made clear in Washington that there is no plan for blockading China and assurance has been given that the President will consult with Congress and with U.S. allies in Korea before "any drastic new moves" are made in the Far East.

We note that both the Ottawa Journal and the Montreal Star had occasion to draw this to the attention of the political alarmists in all parties in the House of Commons. "Let us hope," says the Journal, "this silences those cliche-ridden amateur strategists and would-be world statesmen who seem to think it is a sign of sophistication and an 'open' mind to keep nagging at Americans."

To see our CCF-ers in an anti-U.S. role is understandable, the Journal adds, because they work very hard at following the party line of the Bevanites in Britain. "Harder to understand are members of our two major parties who fall for Socialist jargon, or, worse still, for the jargon of our young ultra-nationalists, without the good sense to take the sober, informed line laid down by Mr. Pearson and followed by Mr. Graydon."

Deploring loose criticism of the U.S., the Montreal Star comments: "The people who rush into print or get in front of microphones to say that American policy is rash, unwise and unworthy, are playing the game of the Communists. The Reds hope—and Stalin himself in his latest statement repeated it—that we will all fall out among ourselves, fight each other, and thereby assure our defeat in the ultimate conflict. Stalin hopes to break the coalition of the free world. Today he sees many divisive forces at work and must be well pleased."

TRUCKS GET GLAMOR

Maybe truckdrivers aren't getting soft, but trucks are definitely going glamorous. Manufacturers are turning out literally thousands of gimmicks, gadgets and special items of equipment in a drive to add splendor to the highway hefties. Among the more popular items listed in a N.Y. Journal of Commerce roundup are electric razors that plug into the cigar lighter, heated rear-view mirrors, pillow cushions, and warning signals that call attention to low oil pressure, loss of air in tires, and improperly functioning brakes. Due soon are power steering and, yes, even air conditioning.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

Feb. 24., 1933.

Miss Ethel Horton is spending a week with friends in Toronto.

Mrs. T. V. Scanlan, Forin street, has returned home after spending a few days in Toronto.

Mayor Geo. O. Tice went to Toronto today on business.

The Hon. Nelson Parliament was in town today.

Miss Myrtle Holway, a member of the Belleville Skating Club, injured her right wrist when she fell while practising at the arena.

The supper served by the Women's Parochial Guild of St. Thomas' Church in the Parish House was largely attended and was an enjoyable affair. The supper was served in the lower assembly room and those waiting to be served in the upper assembly room were entertained by an orchestra composed of Mr. Ross Hunter, Mrs. Hunter, Carman Osborne, Albert Elliott, George Forster, Ted Day and Arthur Thompson. Songs were rendered by Peter Bigham and Thomas Wilkinson, boy soloists.

Feb. 24., 1923.

A $100,000 fire occurred in Trenton last night when the Wesley Saylor Block, at the corner of Elgin and Front streets, was completely gutted in a fire which spread down Dundas street ravaging some 20 stores and apartments. The Belleville fire department was called and rendered good assistance. The fire was discovered by Mrs. R. Anderson, a blind woman, whose cries awakened neighbors who carried her to safety.

Miss Jean McIntosh made her initial professional debut as an elocutionist before a highly appreciative audience in the city hall last evening. Miss McIntosh was assisted by Mr. Frank Oldfield, baritone, and Mr. Ernest Wheatley, pianist. Miss McIntosh's mastery of dialects and adaptation of masculine impersonations were outstanding. Belleville is indeed fortunate to be able to claim Miss McIntosh as one of her daughters.

Feb. 24., 1913.

A fast game of hockey took place last evening at the Turnbull street arena when Dick Arnott's Midgets defeated the Y.M.C.A. team by a score of 7 to 0. The following composed the teams: Y.M.C.A. Nurse, Holland, Reid, Ketcheson, Hay, Hamilton, Kiser. Arena Midgets Goyer, Reg. Arnott, Hunter, Brotherhood, L. Arnott, Whalen and Gar. Arnott.

The Board of Education met last evening with the chairman of the Board, C. M. Reid, presiding. Reports showed a total of 1,229 pupils registered at the four city public schools as follows: Queen Victoria 413; Queen Alexandra 344; Octavia Street 298 and Grier Street 169. This is an increase in attendance over last year. A motion prevailed that the matter of building a new school in West Belleville and the preparation of plans be given attention by the Sites and Building Committee.

50 YEARS AGO

Feb. 24., 1903.

There is a definite scarcity of medium-sized houses with modern conveniences in Belleville and the situation requires immediate attention as this city can not afford to lose residents.

A new Methodist Church is to be erected at Cooper in Madoc township.

The Rev. J. H. Locke, pastor of the Tabernacle, will preach in the Methodist Church in Cobourg next Sunday.

Mr. Fred C. Fairman will leave shortly for Minnedosa, Manitoba.

Mr. Henry Pringle has arrived home after a business trip to Boston and New York City.

Can't Afford Oil Well

(Cleveland Plain Dealer)

Anyone who owns a hunk of land probably has been guilty of toying with the possibility that riches lie below its surface. Texas oil millionaires have added to this daydream. Alas, we learn from the American Iron and Steel Institute, the cost of an oil well is fabulous, and the chances of making a strike are not too good.

A wildcat well, for example, in unproved territory, has one chance in 16 of finding a small field; one chance in 330 of finding a medium field; one chance in 91 of finding a large field. Only one wildcat well in nine finds any oil at all!

Then there is the cost, which like everything else has gone up. In 1945 it cost $511 per day to drill a well—in 1951 it cost $983 per day. In 1945 a 10,000 foot rotary rig cost nearly $180,000—in 1951 around $300,000. The average wildcat well costs about $90,000—a deep exploration well may cost $1,000,000.

Derricks have developed from 60 foot wooden structures to semi-portable steel giants up to 200 feet in height, able to hoist a million pounds and withstands winds up to 125 miles per hour. A well has been drilled to a depth of 20,521 feet, but a 10,000 foot well is still considered deep.

We shall, therefore, give up any get rich quick notions we may have had, for if we possessed the price of an oil well we wouldn't need the well.

JUST FOLKS

THE GRACES

A blazing fire in winter, and a garden in the spring,
A bed of pansy blossoms and a tree where robins sing,
Some trinkets in the corners of the little home we keep,
A few brave years of laughter and the tears that all must weep.
'Tis only those we gained through the time we have to live,
As soon as we shall discover these are all that life can give.

Though fame and wealth may lure us; though both of them we gain,
The home must ring with laughter or all the rest is vain.
And love must bid us welcome when all the struggle's done
Or paltry are the prizes our strength and skill have won.
And peace of mind must shield us from pangs of sharp regret
Or an instrument of torture will be anything we get.

So let's give some thought to tulips and the garden in the spring.
Let's take the time to listen when the robin redbreasts sing.
Let's plan the home for laughter, and let's not forget to keep
The faith we shall be needing when it's time for us to weep.
For if there be no friendship, and loved ones cease to smile,
Then neither fame nor fortune for long can be worth while.

Herefords Hardy Stock

(St. Thomas Times-Journal)

All across Canada, motorists and railroad travellers can see herds of Hereford cattle in the fields. Their deep red and white coats are a familiar sight and their large size in comparison with most other breeds tell the city dwellers that the Hereford will supply a very large, if not the largest part of their meat supply.

An interesting supplement on British cattle, chiefly devoted to the Hereford breed, is contained in the current issue of the Overeas Mail, including an article by the secretary of the Hereford Herd Book. Hereford is one of the smallest counties of England, but its livestock famed throughout the world. So also is its cider. The Hereford Herd Society was established in 1878 for the promotion of the breed for which the county was already well-known. Today there are Hereford societies in every country in the British Empire, and also in the United States, Uruguay and Argentina. There were, however, herd books before that dating back to 1846, the original having been based on the Eyton herd from which practically all registered pure-blood Herefords are descended. Every movement of pedigreed Herefords is recorded in order to maintain the purity of the strain.

Although buyers naturally go to England for the best in Herefords, overseas buyers have bought the best stock and have paid enormous prices for them. Last October there was a sale of the celebrated Vern herd to reduce its size and buyers from Uruguay and Argentina, Australia and New Zealand almost bid frantically against each other. There were 66 animals on offer, which brought an average of about $3,000 each. One of the most noted bulls ever known was Vern Robert, which died last November when 13 years of age. His progeny were noted for their superb qualities as beef producers, and it is estimated that his sons and daughters brought the amazing sum of £150,000 in the markets of the world.

The Hereford is easy to raise, requiring little but pasture, and he is hardy and conspicuously free from tuberculosis. Recently a Canadian cattleman picked out a bunch of Herefords in Herefordshire and Shropshire for his ranch 4,000 feet up in the Rocky Mountains. He told the Secretary of the Hereford Herd Book Society (A.P. de Nobriga) that his ranch was under snow for nearly six months of the year and he wintered his cattle out. The Hereford, he said, was the only breed capable of standing up to those conditions and putting on weight.

Gains Fame In Cement

(Sudbury Star)

Fame comes to people in strange ways, and one of the strangest paths that fame used to arrive at the door of the recipient was that on which cement prehistoric animals were the guide posts.

Canadians have not been unmindful of the work of John Kanerva, who left his native Finland to seek a livelihood in Canada, and wound up at the Calgary Zoo.

This zoo has an international reputation for its life-like models of prehistoric animals, and the Western Canada city has the only zoological park in America with 30 life-size models of prehistoric life—the biggest being a brontosaurus which is 107 feet in length, with a height of 32 feet at its head.

Mr. Kanerva's success is the proof that Canada offers unlimited opportunities to hose who are prepared to give of their toil and talents to the development of this new country.

There are thousands of ways in which an indusrious man can earn security in Canada, and when he combines his industry with the unique, then fame does indeed seek him out.

Doubly Tagged

(Fort William Times-Journal)

One of Fort William's aldermen is entertaining just a slight suspicion that he has been the victim of an injustice.

He was stopped on the sidewalk by one of the city's finest. The latter asked him to buy a couple of tickets for the policemen's ball.

The alderman demurred. He had another engagement that evening. And although he protested that there were so many people asking him continually to buy tickets for this and that, the police officer persisted and finally completed the sales job.

The alderman then walked along the street to his motor car, to discover that while he had been talking, another officer had tagged his car for a parking violation.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

My little sister has been dieting for twenty years. She is middle-aged, but of course does not know it. Middle-aged people are those ten years older than she. She is a nice, plump, chunky little woman who is just the right size for her age, plus good eating not only her own sake but as an example to her children. If the cook shies away from her own cooking, what do you expect her children to do? Part of her weight, you might say is exemplary.

But she is an ardent and, I believe, a typical dieter. She has faithfully tried fourteen diets in the past twenty years. Some of them lasted as long as twenty days. Beyond making her a little dark around the eyes and giving her double chin a curious and unbecoming looseness, I cannot say any of the diets made any change in her.

I had the pleasure of dining with her in Nashville, Tennessee lately. Nashville is on the highway leading straight up from the Gulf of Mexico, where the shrimp boats are comin' all the time. And great big lovely jumbo shrimps are as fresh in Nashville, almost, as they are in New Orleans. Besides, Nashville is in the deep heart of the South'n Frahed Chicken country. It seems gluey to me. I don't like to see a chicken cut off practically in its early adolescence. I like a chicken to live on to a ripe old six pounds in weight, and then be roasted, with dressing.

But here in Nashville, my little sister, already speaking with a Southern accent, ordered a jumbo shrimp salad to open with. The shrimps were as big as your thumb and finger curved before you. Hard, pink, glorious. I think there were eight of them in the salad, together with rich Roquefort dressing. Then came the South'n Frahed Chicken. My little sister fought with every joint; battled with every muscle and ligament. There were french fried potatoes, rich buttered corn bread and sundry other fixins. She finished off with a mere dab of Liederkranz cheese and coffee.

When the coffee came, my little sister leaped into action.

"My saccharine!" she cried, reaching for her handbag. "I must have saccharine in my coffee. I'm dieting, you know."

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

PLENTY HERE

A book has recently appeared on the market setting forth the possibilities of space navigation. Competent scientists now talk about the possibility of making a trip to the moon as if they were speaking about a plane trip from New York to Chicago. They even speculate how long it will take the scientific world to get ready for interplanetary travel; perhaps to Mars sometime—or some other planet. Two thousand persons are said to have signed up already for the first trip to the moon.

There is a story in the early chapter of Genesis of how men at one time tried to build a tower—which has since become known as the Tower of Babel. It was to reach the sky. God apears to have looked out of Heaven and with the little finger of his left hand wiped the tower off the landscape and scattered the builders muttering to one another in strangely diverse tongues. The episode is presumed to be symbolic of what happens when man relies too much on his own efforts without regard to God.

Of course, great adventures and projected discoveries have always been scoffed at, and perhaps this fantastic scheme will eventuall prove sound and helpful. But it would seem sensible to try to solve some of the problems of this planet before taking on the problems of another.

Personal Health Talks

SMOKING AND ATHLETICS

An athlete who has the will to win or the pluck to give it at least a good try doesn't smoke at all, because he or she knows smoking invariably hurts the wind. That is, breathlessness comes on earlier in the smoker and lasts longer than in the non-smoker.

In students, both athletes and nonathletes, the heart pumps less blood after one or two cigarets. The average grade of smokers is significantly lower than that of non-smokers in cardiovascular physical fitness tests.

Erograph tests demontrate lower muscular efficiency in smokers than in non-smokers. Smoking causes a 10 per cent decrease in lung capacity.

An athlete who has neither the will to win nor the pluck to do his or her best can smoke, of course, but not for long —not as an athlete. On the other hand, a smoker can be an athlete or put on a good imitation of athletic ability for a few minutes, but one can't win that way.

Physicians and physiologists formerly assumed, as they had to do before instruments of precision were available, that the ill effects of smoking were due to nicotine. A good many physicians and most laymen still think so.

Now, I'm an unhappy geek. Always borrowing trouble—and envying the fellow who can go along with the crowd or follow the prevailing trend regardless of what he might think if he stopped to think at all. This is just one of the many instances where I find myself occupying a lonely position, perhaps accompanied by a few nuts who will run out when the going gets rugged.

It is my belief, based on scientific evidence, that the nicotine in tobacco has little or nothing to do with the ill effects of smoking. The ill effects, I contend, are due to the carbon monoxide in tobacco smoke.

Chemists find from 0.9 per cent to more than 6 per cent of nicotine in various kinds of tobacco, according to Bastedo. If this is true, and if, as medical authorities assert, 2 drops of nicotine will kill a dog, 8 drops a horse, how can a man chew a cud of it and remain upright?

Chemical analyses show that there is a considerable quantity of carbon monoxide in every puff of cigaret smoke. Since the presence of only 0.1 per cent (1 part in a thousand) of carbon monoxide in the air one breathes will cause headache and other symptoms, and 1 per cent of C-O in the air may be fatal in the time it take to draw a few breaths, it seems to me that C-O and not nicotine is the factor responsible for the ill effects of smoking.

Incidentally, I have yet to find in medical literature convincing reports of pathological changes due to chewing. Next to drinking an infusion of solution of tobacco there is no more certain way to get the full effect of the nicotine than by chewing the tobacco. Combustion, whether in cigaret, cigar or pipe, of course destroys the nicotine—which accounts for absence fo nicotine from tobacco smoke.

TODAY'S TALK

THE HOURS BETWEEN

Most of us have a set number of hours in which we work and concentrate upon tasks that afford us a living. Most people think this is quite enough—but it isn't if a fuller richness of life is desired. It's the hours between those of regular work that may be the most important and enjoyable of all. Many an education has been gained from books in these hours between.

An early riser completes many a useful "chore" between the time when he awakes and goes out to his land or office, and many a one has used the hours between the regular work of the day and bedtime to improve his mind or concentrate upon some useful task that has often turned out to be an unexpected surprise!

Travelers in a train have always interested me. For months I have traveled spending day after day upon trains. A goodly number sleep their hours away. Some you will see reading a book. Others will be engaged in the smoking or club car in conversation, mostly to no purpose at all. Others will be looking out of the window. This last named group may be mulling their thoughts and dreaming dreams that may later distinguish the hours between as the most significant of their lives. Who can say?

Elihu Burritt was famed as "the learned blacksmith," because of the fact that he learned so many languages while at his forge. He found time to study mathematics, write several books, and give many a lecture on peace. Also, for a time, he edited a weekly newspaper at Worcester, Mass. The hours between became for him the golden hours!

One of my friends used his hours between to furnish his home with beautiful early American furniture. He would comb the country for miles, hunting out old neglected pieces, during Saturdays and holidays, then in his shop he would beautifully restore each piece, until his home became famous for its taste and beauty. All largely created out of those hours between.

It is during these hours between that we get our mind in hand, concentrating upon definite purposes, enriching our spiritual vision, and adding efficiency tao all our efofrts during all the hours of our allotted days. And what an enemy to worry may these hours between become!

Court Bans Slave Talk

(Windsor Star)

When a colored man from the South testified at a Toronto trial, court officials noted he invariably referred to the Negro men as "boys" and white men as "gentlemen," Negro women as "girls" and white women as "ladies." It was the strict terminology of the sharply drawn race line of the South.

It is to the credit of our judicial system that the trial judge, Mr. Justice E. R. E. Chevrier, intervened asd ordered an end to that discriminatory form of address.

"In Canadian courts," he said, "men are men and women are women. There is no race, no class, no distinction."

It has been a long time since the days of the "Underground Railway," along which fugitives from Southern slavery fled to a haven in Canada. This incident, however, is a reminder that long period of time has not been enough to erase all the disabilities which afflict Southern colored folk.

Mr. Justice Chevrier indirectly set the stage for Brotherhood Week and provided it with a kynote. In Canada there are not, or should not be, any second-class citizens.

Kinsmen Hold Past Presidents' Night In Celebration of 33rd Anniversary

Past presidents of the Kinsmen Club held the spotlight at the annual "Founder's Night" held in the Hotel Quinte last night.

The red-capped ex-prexies, wearing ribbon ties of a dazzling crimson filed slowly into the banquet room as Past President Frank Lang, held potential hecklers at bay with a water-charged "tommy gun."

The "Ex's" wore large identification cards with the year of office inscribed in large black letters. Current president Harry Knott was in the chair with past president Harry Rollins acting as master of ceremonies.

Past President Matt Currie of the Bank of Montreal inspection staff, Montreal, made a special trip to be present. He was accorded a warm welcome by his fellow Kinsmen.

Included in the ex-"bosses" of the club were Kin, Buster LaBarr, 1942; Gardner Duff, 1941; Bill Hurst, 1939; Cleo Colling, 1938; Norm. Garbutt, 1937; Harry Rollins, 1945; Matt Currie, 1944; "Boiler" Lloyd, 1943; Art. Cruji, 1947; Frank Lang, 1948; Ernie Colebourne, 1949; Ben Yanover, 1951 and Newt. Wilbur, 1946. Missing were Geoff. Marvell, 1940; Bill McIntosh, 1934; Carl Sills, 1936 and Keith Scott, 1935. Tribute was paid to the memory of another past president, Murray Davis, 1950 who passed away a short time ago.

They Were Good

Past President Cleo Colling was the official guest speaker but ex-prexies Lloyd and Garbutt who respectively introduced and thanked him ran a close two-three for the honor.

"Boiler's" introduction was interspersed with many witty sallies but the speaker who had the opportunity of rebuttal met witticism with witticism and the result was plenty of hilarity.

Past President Colling a charter member of the club reviewed the work of the organization since its inception. He reviewed the successful soap box derbies held here, the first being held on Oct. 12th 1936 before 8,000 spectators. The derbies were held until 1940 with winners being sent to Akron, Ohio for the international championships.

He recalled the outstanding war jobs done by the club in raising funds for "Milk for Britain" and "Fags for Overseas." Nearly three million cigarettes were sent to Belleville men in the armed forces.

Declaring that the 'public has a short memory for community service, Past President Colling came up with several suggestions on how to keep the club's name in the spotlight.

He suggested a "write-up" committee and broadcasts of meetings. He felt the club should select a "Citizen of the Year" and inaugurate spelling bees so that the club's name would be mentioned in every grade school in the district.

Organization of a large bowling tournament with the club supplying the prizes, he said, would be a good suggestion. He thought the Kinsmen should be the leading club in the organization of parades for the city. That Belleville should have a Santa Claus parade is a "responsibility to ourselves and our children."

Public Service

Motion pictures of outstanding sports events such as the Grey Cup, world series etc, should be brought to the city by the club and shown to football and baseball minor leagues.

"These ideas," he said, "are not money-raising suggestions but will sell Kin to the public besides being a public service."

The Belleville Kinsmen Club he said, have had members who later became presidents of both the Rotary and Kiwanis clubs.

"I believe," he went on, "that we are the only active local service club without a little spiritual guidance within itself, and although it might slow up some of our activities, it might add to some of the dignity we require."

In closing, Past President Colling paid tribute to deceased members of the club including Murray Davis, Ray Arnott, Jim Lafferty and Jimmy Fraser. "They were all good Kinsmen and I am very thankful for their friendship."

Past President LaBarr read a communication from the Kinsmen national president Walter Gaudet on the occasion of the organization's 33rd anniversary.

The musical portion of the program was heard in the fine voice of Don Butcher in two solos and the trumpet virtuosity of Gary Tremaine with Phil Huddleston at the piano.

Calvary Temple Reports Progress

Annual reports presented at the Calvary Temple business meeting on Friday night indicated satisfactory progress in all departments. A total of $21,510.35 was raised for all purposes during the calendar year 1952. Of this amount, $19,979.21 was received through the general church account; $1,111.15 was raised by the Sunday School, $266.20 by the Christ's Ambassadors young people's group and $153.79 by the Woman's Missionary Council.

Chief items of expenditure included $9,333.56 paid on the building fund, $1,250.72 for radio broadcasting, $717.13 for missions (of which $340.37 was contributed by the Sunday School), and $2,111.11 for evangelistic work.

There was no change made in the deacons' board of 1952, all members being re-elected for another term. These are A. J. Becker, C. W. Jackson, A. E. Haw and G. Lott. A. E. Haw retains the office of secretary-treasurer.

Much useful work was done by the Women's Missionary Council which included thirty baptism gowns made, twenty-five parcels of literature sent to mission stations in the British West Indies, four parcels of bandages to Kenya, five Christmas parcels to missionaries, eleven Christmas baskets to shut-ins, eight cases of tomatoes and vegetables to the Eastern Pentecostal Bible College, flowers to the sick and various gifts to new babies. The young people's group bought a new typewriter for the church.

Commenting on the report, the Reverend Laurie Price stated, "It is wonderful the way God has blessed us, not only financially but spiritually. After all, this church was built in order to get souls saved. We exist for no other reason. Many have been added to our fellowship this year through their faith in Jesus Christ.

Reverend Hope Smith, who acted as chairman during the business session, spoke appreciatively of the faithfulness and co-operation of the officers and members of the congregation.

Farm Forum Notes

Brookdale (12), Foxboro (9), Hazzards (18) and Melrose (16) met in their respective areas to study together what the St. Lawrence Seaway will mean to Canada.

All were of the opinion it will be a good thing for their communities in several ways, namely:

1. Lower transportation rates and hence lower feed grains from the west. At the present time a load of wheat has to be loaded about five times from the time it leaves the prairies until it reaches England. Also transportation of iron ore. Melrose says, "If the railroads keep on striking, freight will be so high we'll have to find a substitute."

2. A great deal of hydro electric power will be a result of this proposed seaway.

3. A means of national defence. Munitions could be made inland and easily shipped where needed.

4. There are so many transports on our highways. The seaway might relieve this congestion.

Benefits from the navigating angle:

1. Freedom from transportation bottlenecks that are now a deterrent to full production. Better transportation facilities mean more industries; in turn more employment which in turn encourages an increase in population.

2. Home consumption built up with a benefit to agriculture.

3. Create international trade on Great Lakes.

4. Benefits from hydro expansion: (a) An industrial expansion, development of local resources. (b) A tendency to increase land values and (c) better standard of living in both rural and urban areas.

Mr. Bernard Hollinger was a guest of Hazzards forum where he explained the Co-op medical-surgical contract.

'Place of English in Modern Education' Topic at U.W. Club

The University Women's Club met on Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. William Hurst, 248 Church Street, with 20 members present.

Mrs. Douglas Burr, president, in a short resume of the purpose and aims of the University Women's Club, noted that it is neither a service club nor a charitable organization, but that its main interest is education, especially of women. To that end, the club provides an annual scholarship open to girls.

Mrs. Hurst brought to attention the printed news letter from the Canadian Federation of University Women's Clubs, and pointed out particularly, a letter from Dr. Olive Fisher, deploring the present scarcity of trained teachers.

It was decided to donate $10 to the society for the Rehabilitation of Prisoners, formerly the John Howard Society. The aim of this society is to provide education and help for prisoners who are about to take up normal life once again.

Miss K. Daly reported that fees had been sent to the Canadian Federation of University Women's clubs for 56 members.

Special Speaker

Mrs. L. R. Finlayson expressed her feeling of pride and honor in the privilege of introducing one of her former teachers, Miss Nellie Merry, as the speaker of the evening. "Miss Merry", she said, "is head of the department of English at B.C.I.V.S., is an honor graduate of Queens, and has done post-graduate work in English. One of the charter members, she has done a great deal of work for the University Women's Club. During her 20 years of teaching in Belleville, Miss Merry has shown great interest in dramatics, and has always had a deep personal interest in her pupils."

To begin her address, "The Place of English in Modern Education", Miss Merry outlined first the dissatisfaction of the universities with the lack of preparation of their freshmen in the subject of English. Every university, she reported, has been obliged to give an English test at the beginning of the year, and now requires failures in it to take a basic English course. In earlier years pupils had reached university well-grounded in English, and such a course had been unnecessary.

Rising Standards

The first reason for the present lack of a good foundation in English was given as the rising standards of the universities, which, Miss Merry says, are much higher than they were 20 years ago. Universities, therefore, are expecting a great deal more now from students of seventeen and eighteen years of age than they did previously. The universities, she feels, may have had their standards of expectation raised by the influx of mature students following the war years. Their standards of marking, too, are much higher.

The second reason listed for insufficient English study was the attitude of the Department of Education. In the days of Ryerson, cast-iron rules were laid down giving a certain amount of time to the study of each subject, and in every school, pupils would be studying the same subject at the same hour. At that time school was mainly a preparation for university. Then the school leaving age was raised to 16; courses were devised for the masses rather than for university entrants. The theory that education be a preparation for university changed to the idea that education be a preparation for living every-day life. Difficult subjects, such as Latin, an excellent basis for English, came to be avoided. With the introduction of many new subjects and extra-curricular activities, the study of English has suffered. Larger classes, too, and the scarcity of trained teachers have had a devastating effect on thorough teaching and study.

Little Time For Reading

The third cause for present-day lack of excellence in English was listed as outside influences, such as comics, the radio, and television. In addition to these distractions, the movies, newspaper routes, and other work after school, leave the students with little time for the reading of good books.

To summarize, the place of English in modern education seems to have been crowded out by too many outside activities. The result is that even many intelligent adults find reading a difficult feat, and national speech is growing slovenly. There seems to be a belittling of the importance of correct speech, and a general attitude of indifference towards correct English. The advance seems to be too material, people are wealthier in material possessions, but lack the desire to read and to learn. More should be done to teach and encourage the really brilliant students, and those with a deep desire for education.

Miss Josephine Tickell expressed the gratitude of the members to Miss Merry for her interesting and thought-provoking address.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. E. L. Littlejohn, social convener; Mrs. H. M. Morton and Mrs. M. Brunton.

Women's Activities

ST. ANDREW'S W.M.S.

IVANHOE. — The February meeting of St. Andrew's W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. Donald Haggerty, recently.

The meeting was conducted by the president, Mrs. Barton Haggerty. Psalm 88 was read by Mrs. Harry Thompson and the offering was gathered by Jimmie Haggerty.

Mrs. W. H. V. Walker gave a thoughtful talk on the keyword "Prayer", explaining how the power of prayer effects and changes individual lives, stressing the need of earnest unceasing prayer in the church.

A piano solo was given by Mrs. A. Hassall and a reading "The Final Analysis", by Mrs. Donald Haggerty.

The first chapter of the new study book on the "People of Africa", was introduced by Miss Bessie Fleming.

For over 200 years the Europeans have been exploring, ruling, developing and exploiting the continent of Africa. Troubled by injustice, conscious of recent events in Asia, and the rising tide of "color", agitated by the ideas of freedom and economic equality, taught by the white man himself, the black man is dreaming of taking his own lands for his own use.

Latest manifestation of unrest is in Britain's Kenya colony of East Africa, where a Negro secret society called Mau Mau has run amok in a reign of terror. The African's grievances are very real—they arise from poor wages and hunger for land.

"What is our attitude to men of different color and race? Do we regard them as equals? In the following chapters we will learn of their country, their customs and beliefs and what great part the church will play in the winning of Africa for Christ."

Refreshments were served by the hostesses and appreciation to Mrs. Haggerty and her assistants, was expressed by Mrs. Harold Thompson.

MARMORA

World Day of Prayer Observed at W.M.S.

Marmora — The World Day of Prayer service was held at St. Paul's Anglican Church on Friday afternoon with members of the Missionary Society (women) of St. Paul's Anglican, St. Andrew's United and Marmora Free Methodist churches uniting therein.

The service opened with words of welcome from Mrs. J. M. Brownlie. The call to worship was taken by Mrs. R. G. Winters. Mrs. Stewart Hardy next led in responsive readings, after which Mrs. W. Tupper led in special prayers ending with the Lord's Prayer.

Individual prayers were then offered by Mrs. P. Gray, Mrs. A. B. Moffatt, Mrs. G. H. Bache, Mrs. E. C. Prentice, Mrs. T. J. Bateman and Mrs. E. Hewitt. Mrs. J. M. Brownlie led in further responsive reading. The solo, "O Thou That Tellest Good Tidings," from Handel's "Messiah", was rendered by Mrs. Roy Frost with accompaniment on the organ by Mrs. L. R. Rundle, who was organist throughout the service.

An appropriate address "Lighten the Darkness," was given by Mrs. K. J. Crawford. The offertory was taken by Mrs. G. Jarvis and Mrs. W. Lavender. The benediction was pronounced by Mrs. J. M. Brownlie.

Mrs. Rose Brawley and Mrs. Arthur Eggleton had birthday anniversaries on Friday.

William Cronkright is confined to his home through illness.

Refreshments for The Club

By Mary Moore

This letter requests recipes many of you would like for your entertaining, so that is why I am using it for the subject of today's column.

"Dear Mrs. Moore: The members of the club to which I belong customarily serve buttered fancy breads at our meetings. They are delicious. Could you give me a few such recipes? I would also like to know how to prepare jellied tongue or cold tongue for a buffet luncheon. Have you other suggestions for cold meats other than hams or fowl? . . . enjoyed your liver rolls and chocolate diamonds immensely.—Nettie S."

BANANA NUT BREAD

One and 3-4 cups sifted all-purpose flour, 2 teaspoons baking powder, 1-4 teaspoon baking soda, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1-3 cup shortening, 2-3 cup sugar, 2 well-beaten eggs, 1 cup mashed ripe banara and 1-2 cup chopped nuts (or instead of nuts use 1 cup chopped dates). Sift together sifted flour, baking powder, soda and salt. Cream shortening with spoon until light then gradually beat in the sugar. Both should be very light. Add eggs and beat some more. And flour mixture alternately with the banana puree, a little of each at a time, beating smooth between additions. Stir in nuts or dates. Bake in greased loaf pan 9x5x3 inches at 350 deg. Fahr. for about 70 minutes.

RAISIN BREAD

Three and one-half cups sifted all-purpose flour, 4 1-2 teaspoons baking powder, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-2 cup sugar, 1 beaten egg, 1 tablespoon soft shortening, about 1 1-2 cups milk, 1 cup chopped raisins. Sift together dry ingredients, taking out 1-2 cup and mixing it with raisins. To remaining dry ingredients add the milk, beaten egg and soft or melted shortening. Beat until perfectly smooth. Stir in the floured raisins. Turn into greased loaf pan and let stand 20 minutes. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for 45 minutes to 1 hour. Dates, figs, or prunes may be substituted for the raisins, and grated orange rind may be added if desired.

JELLIED TONGUE

Wash a beef tongue well, cover with hot water, cover and simmer until tender—about 3 1-2 hours. Cool in liquid in which it was cooked. Remove skin by peeling it off and trim off fat, unsightly tissue and bones. Strain the liquid. Put tongue back in it and add 1 bay leaf, 6 peppercorns, 6 cloves, 1 sliced onion and 2 teaspoons salt. Simmer 20 minutes. Lift out tongue, skewer tip to base. Place in round bowl which will hold it in shape. Strain liquid. Measure 3 cups. To 1-2 cup of this cooled liquid add 3 tablespoons plain gelatin and soak for 5 minutes. Dissolve gelatin by stirring over hot water. Add to remaining 2 1-2 cups liquid. Taste for salt and pepper and add if needed. This must be highly seasoned. If desired garnish sides of bowl with sliced hard-cooked egg and little diamonds of canned pimento. Very carefully spoon in some gelatin liquid, not dislodging the garnish. Chill till set. Add remaining gelatin mixture which should be kept at room temperature until now to prevent it jelling. Chill until set hard. Turn out on chop plate, garnish attractively, and slice with very sharp knife.

SALMON MOLDS

One-half tablespoon salt, 1-2 tablespoon mustard, 1 tablespoon sugar, 2 eggs or 3 yolks, 3-4 cup milk or cream, 1-4 cup vinegar, 1 3-4 tablespoons gelatin, 1-3 cup cold water, 1 one-lb. can red salmon, drained, boned and flaked coarsely. Make a salad dressing of first 6 ingredients by mixing together in top of double boiler the salt, mustard, sugar and eggs or yolks. Place over hot water and stir in the milk and vinegar until mixture thickens. Soak the gelatin in the cold water 5 minutes then stir it into the hot mixture. Add prepared salmon and if desired 2 tablespoons chopped parsley and 1-2 cup mixed diced celery and gherkins. Pour into moistened individual molds. Chill. Unmold on beds of lettuce and garnish with hard-cooked egg slices or crescents and ripe or green olives and parsley.

BEAUTY

Dramatize Your Loveliness With Perfume

There is magic in floretted fragrances. A sweet perfume can weave a spell around a drab little woman. For the lady of fashion, wearing her garments with splendor, it is the final touch. If a woman sneaks money out of the grocery allowance to buy perfume loot, she is committing no crime. It is coming to her. She earns it as engineer of the domestic machinery.

Perfume is more than a sweet smell. It can hint of mystery, romance, adventure. If it is faint and delicate, it carries the message "I am young and naive." If it is exotic, it says "I am sophisticated and worldly wise." You can't see or touch an odor; it appeals to the most primitive and the most imaginative of our senses. Experienced women select aromatic odors with discretion, rejecting those that do not strike a responsive chord. Unless the scent excites them, it is not the right one.

Today's fine perfumes are expensive; but what isn't? So you should conserve yours, and the best way to do that is to keep it in atomizer — which should be placed in a dark cabinet. See that the stopper is tight.

When seeking a gift for a woman you will make no mistake if you select perfume. When she uses it she will have that nice feminine feeling. Even the small fry have their toiletries these days — the bubble bath, dusting powder with big soft puff, even toilet water, the use of which will make them feel grown up.

Teen-agers especially appreciate sweet fragrances. A purse-size vial is nice to carry along to the party. Sachets, too, are appreciated. These come in tablet form and in little satin cushions to place between undies in the dresser drawer, and to tuck in handkerchief, glove and hat boxes.

A nice present is a sampler box of cologne or perfume, tiny bottles with which one can experiment. After deciding which one she likes best, she can buy a larger bottle.

You can get a set of bath toiletries of the same odor, and that is indeed a luxury and a joy. It will include bath salts, dusting powder, bath oil, soap and cologne.

If a woman likes to wear bright colors, provocative scents are suitable. These are the spicy, woodsy, crisp and clear types. If she is retiring and shy, find a delicate floral bouquet or a single flower odor, like jonquil or lily of the valley.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

At 13, she objects to being treated "Like a Baby"

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Just because I am only 13 years old, my parents treat me like a baby. .

I never get to go anywhere unless they go along. All my girl friends are allowed to go to school affairs, but I have to stay home. If I ask to go, Mom and Dad start fussing and say, "What if you didn't get back?" or "What if something should happen to you?" Nobody else's parents act like that.

My teacher at school told me to talk to my parents about it and said they would undersand. I have tried to talk to them, but they won't listen to me. —D.N.D.

Dear D.N.D.:

You won't be able to realize it for a long time, but some day, when you are grown up and married and have children of your own, you will understand how hard it is for mothers and fathers to feel that their children are growing up and ready for "grown-up" privileges.

Of course, 13 can hardly be considered "very grown-up", but even so it is natural for 13-year-olds to think they should have more privileges than when they were still younger, and I think they art probably right. That doesn't make it any easier, though, for some mothers to feel the same way about it.

One of the best ways for you to show your parents that you really are getting older and more responsible is by always being ready to help out cheerfully with the home chores, whatever they may be, and avoiding arguments with your parents and quarrels with your brothers and sisters, if you have any. Don't wait for your mother to ask you to do something. Watch for ways in which you can help her, and offer to do so before she has a chance to tell you. When she sees that you are so thoughtful, it will probably make her more ready to give you the privileges you want.

Another thing you might do is to ask this teacher of yours if she won't drop in and see your mother sometime, and make an opportunity to talk with her a little bit about letting you go to events at school. Or, sometimes when there is going to be something at school you'd like to go to, perhaps this teacher could call your mother on the phone and ask her if she wouldn't let you attend and promise that someone will see you home safely.

Try these suggestions and let me know how you make out.

Fashion Flashes

OUTSIDE or tucked inside shorts — brief or long — is the word on the various sport shirts designed for resort wear, shirts that range from a fisherman's shirt to that of a Venetian gondolier. The gondolier shirt, of white broadcloth with a sailor collar, is rather long and is gathered at the hem, where it almost covers shirt pants of finely striped navy and white denim.

AN ADDITION to fabrics used for between-season hats is silk chiffon. This delicate fabric, in pale blue, is used for a pillbox that is intricately draped and pleated around the edge to give a turban look. The fabric is caught at the centre front with a pearl and rhinestone clip, and the hat is finished with a misty blue veil.

THERE'S COLOR and to spare at resort evening events. A handsome ensemble consists of a gown of splashy printed pink and green chiffon worn with a low-belted boxy coat of cherry-blossom pink taffeta lined with the dress material.

The Greatest Story Ever Told

THE NATIVITY

An interpretation of the Rembrandt etching. (about 1654) at the Metropolitan Museum of Art

CHAPTER 7

THE LONG JOURNEY

From Nazareth it is a distance of seventy-five miles to Bethlehem of Judea. For Joseph and Mary and Anna and Joachim—the aged father and mother also had to go down to be counted—that made a three-day journey. The two women rode on stubborn little Galilean donkeys, while their men trudged alongside and held on to the reins.

They went by the way of the great pilgrim road, running north and south, crowded with other families, on donkey and travelling afoot.

Joseph noticed a tightening of his wife's hands, a whitening of knuckles, as they drew near the town.

"The child must be coming," he told himself. "I will get her to a bed as quickly as possible."

No Room at the Inns

But as they entered the streets of Bethlehem, the press of pilgrims was so great that the pair could scarcely move forward; no one would even listen to Joseph when he asked the way to a hotel; one urchin laughed in his face at such a question. Five hostelries they tried but all were filled up. Joseph kept on doggedly; he forced his way through the door of the last tavern and demanded to talk to the host.

"My wife is ill," pleaded Joseph. "Her baby is about to be born."

The inkeeper was a stout and grumpy man with an enormous stomach. For a moment he said nothing; then he curled fat fingers around his mouth and bawled hoarsely.

"Sarah!"

His wife, just as stout as he was, came shuffling from the back of the house.

"What you want?" she demanded, hoarse voice a replica of his own.

"Look at this woman, the young one, is she having her baby now or is this a scheme to get lodgings?"

The greasy wife leaned forward.

One Warm Place

"This one," she announced, voice even hoarser with fright, "is having the baby now. I know. There's not a bed in the town tonight. But she can't have a baby here on the floor. We've got to do something. Gabriel! There is one warm and comfortable place where we haven't put anybody yet."

"Is there now? Where? Just where?" demanded Gabriel.

"In the stable!"

"The stable!" echoed Joseph miserably, and Anna put her arms around Mary. But the young wife looked gratefully at the innkeeper's wife.

"You are very kind to think of it," she said. "A stable is warm." She turned to Joseph. "These people would surely take good care of their animals. And we will be alone there."

The stable was in a roomy cave that extended under the whole building of the inn. Heaving and puffing, the stout Sarah came clumping down the stairs behind them, and after her Gabriel, puffing even louder than his wife, both clasping fresn bundles of straw. They laid a bed against the inner wall, which was warmer and not so damp, and they brought linen and a coverlet and a pillow for Mary's head.

"God Be With You!"

Then Gabriel and Sarah had to leave them, for business was brisk upstairs, but both of them paused to give a hoarse: "God be with you tonight!" Anna helped Mary to undress, and then went upstairs in search of jars of heated water, while Joseph stood near brooding.

"Why do we have no sign now?" he was asking himself. "Where is the angel? Why doesn't Anna hurry back?"

Anna soon came back with the water. She briskly exiled Joseph and Joachim through a rear door in the stable, bidding them to stay out until they were sent for.

Joseph trudged up and down in the dark area behind the stable. He fingered the pouch that held his store of coins and wondered whether he had enough money to see them through. The hours dragged on. Joachim had sat down on his haunches and soon fell asleep. But Joseph walked on like a man in a nightmare, waiting, praying, until at last and suddenly he heard the sound—a child's first cry.

In the dimmish light he knelt beside the bed of straw where Mary lay, pale and weak but wide-eyed and with a small, brave smile for him.

"See!" she murmured.

"To Give Everything"

Joseph was on his knees. Mary held out firm hands, lifting up her son, wrapped in Grandmother Anna's swaddling clothes—lifting him up adoringly, the fate of the world reposing in the chalice of her hands.

Even in the first instant of seeing the child Joseph was aware of something extraordinary different about him. Somehow he knew that this newborn baby, whose face was not red and crinkled but smooth and white, and whose expression was of such potent innocence and affection, had come into the world to get nothing and to give everything.

Mary had fallen asleep, and there was quiet in the stable. Anna and Joachim made a bed for themselves, far back in the shadows. And Jesus, the baby, lay asleep in his first bed, a manger which the foster father had hastily filled with fresh hay and barley oats that smelled sweet and clean.

For Joseph, sleep was impossible. His mind, his very soul, was too tremulous and excited. Joseph in that dark hour could have poured out his heart in rapturous conversation. He still felt baffled that there was no further sign.

Nine months since the angel had stood with folded wings in the Nazareth house; the day of the Annunciation. After that the dream message had come to Joseph; then silence; months of commonplace reality. Was it not strange that the baby had been born without some demonstration? Here was the child; where were the angels?

Shepherds at the Door

He listened for a rustling of wings and heard only the sleepy bleat of a yearling lamb. That, and presently a low rumble of distant voices, the shuffling of feet outside the house and, at the lower back entrance of the stable, the knocking of a staff.

With a gasp of concern that Mary would be awakened, Joseph hurried to the door. Unfastening the latch, he opened the upper half of the door, then put a finger warningly to his mouth. A group of bearded faces were staring at him. One man held up a lighted lantern. Behind them was still the night, dark and clear, with the sparkle of unaccountable and extraordinarily brilliant stars. Joseph had not seen those stars until now.

"Peace!" breathed Joseph. "This is no time to make noise."

"The Lord be unto you," returned one of the men in a low, placating voice. "We have not come to make any trouble at all."

"Who are you, then?"

"We are shepherds from the hills outside this town. We have been tending our flocks."

"The hour is late," insisted Joseph firmly.

He would have closed the door but the speaker held up his staff.

"Wait. Only one question. Has a child just been born in this place?"

"We Are Friends"

"Why do you ask, shepherd? How is it your business about a child?"

"Don't be afraid of us man. We are friends."

"Well, then —yes. A child has been born here."

"Only a little while ago?"

"True. Within two hours."

Low exclamations came from the bearded mouths of the shepherds. And the first speaker laid a kindly hand on Joseph's shoulder. "Tell me—is it a man-child?"

"It is."

"And could it be possible that you have laid the child in a manger?"

"Yes," answered Joseph, feeling the tears gather in his eyes "There was no cradle, you see. The town is overcrowded; there was nowhere else I could take my lady. . ."

"Then God be praised!" murmured the shepherd fervently, and the others muttered agreement in their beards.

A Marvellous Sight

"Listen, man," cried the one with the lifted staff. "We five men have just seen a marvellous sight. An unbelievable sight. And it has to do with you."

Marvellous sight! And unbelievable. Hope sprang up in Joseph's thoughts.

"Believe this thing we tell you. We were all tending our flocks tonight, minding our own business. The night was clear, air cool, stars bright, everything going along just as usual. Suddenly Jonas here interrupted our talk and pointed at the sky."

"That I did," confirmed Jonas. "There was a great big bright light in the sky and the shape of it like an angel bigger than the world. And I heard a voice. . ."

"We all saw the light," declared the first man. "And we all heard distinctly that voice from the sky."

"What did the voice say?" asked Joseph eagerly.

"It told us not to be afraid."

"Yes. It always begins that way. And then?"

"And then it said it brought us great news. The Saviour of the world was being born. I remember the very words; how can I ever forget them? 'For this day is born to you a Saviour who is Christ the Lord.'"

"Christ the Lord," whispered Joseph.

"Yes, friend. That's what the voice said. It told us the child was being born right here in this town and that we would find it, wrapped in swaddling clothes and lying in a manger."

Here another shepherd pushed himself forward.

"Angels Singing"

"You can never imagine what happened then," he broke in excitedly. "The whole heaven seemed to open up. The curtain of the stars was split like a tent, and through the opening we saw a host of angels that filled the sky and they were all singing at the top of their voices. . . "

"And do you know what they were singing?" demanded Jonas, again interrupting. "The words were: 'Glory to God in the highest and on earth peace. . .'"

The tale of the shepherds brought peace to Joseph. The sign had come at secondhand, which was better. These men, panting and out of breath and sweaty, full of strength and humility, had seen the gates of another world open up and had heard singing from on high, the heavens rejoicing at the birth of Mary's child.

Joseph received them with open arms. On tiptoe they followed him as he led them straight to the manger, where they looked down and then knelt beside the sleeping figure of Mary's son.

Soon they were gone, and Joseph resumed his unsleeping vigil. But now his heart was calmed. The sign had come. In his mind's ear he could hear the unnumbered hosts of the servants of God, singing to the ages: "Peace on earth to men of good will."

Organized Labor Loses 3rd Leader In Three Months

WILKES-BARRE, Pa. (AP) — Organized labor lost its third leader in three months when Allan Haywood, executive vice-president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, collapsed and died Saturday night.

Haywood, bitter foe of communism who compared joining a union with joining a church, died of a heart attack while addressing a union meeting here. He collapsed on the speaker's platform and died without regaining consciousness.

The death of the 64-year-old Haywood, who was hailed in some labor circles as "Mr. CIO," follows those of Phil Murray, CIO president, and William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor. Murray and Green died last November.

Haywood, who rose from a coal mining pit in England to the CIO's second-ranking job, recently lost a bitter fight for the presidency of the vast union. Believed to be heir apparent to Murray's leadership, he was defeated in his bid for union control by Walter Reuther of the United Auto Workers. Haywood was re-elected vice-president.

One Man Killed

MONT LAURIER, Que. (CP)—One man was killed Saturday and 21 persons injured when a self-propelled diesel coach, operated by the Canadian Pacific Railway, cut a trailer truck in halves at a level crossing here. Mont Laurier is 180 miles north of Montreal.

Dead is Theodore St. Yves, Val d'Or, driver of the truck.

It was reported at first that Oscar Carreau, also of Val d'Or and a passenger in the truck, had been fatally injured, but later the CPR reported Carreau was in Mont Laurier hospital where his condition was improving.

Hospital officials reported only three of the injured, besides Carreau

WOOL OUTLOOK GOOD

WASHINGTON (AP) — The agriculture department predicts that producer prices of wool will be as good this year as last and possibly average slightly higher. Factors likely to hold prices at stable levels include prospects for a slightly smaller U.S. clip this year and a slowly increasing consumer demand.

Two-Year Drought in Brazil Desolates Cotton, Sugar Lands; Dust Bowl Refugees Destitute

By A.C. VALLANCE

RIO DE JANEIRO (Reuters)—One of the worst droughts in Brazil's history—it has been virtually unbroken for two years—has desolated wide cotton and sugar lands in the north and saddled the south with a critical social problem of thousands of dust-bowl refugees.

The drought has partly ruined northeastern cotton and sugar crops and this year's prospects are even grimmer. Reports say that sheep, cattle and goats are being decimated.

Move to South

Penniless farmers are moving southward in a steady stream. Local economy has been unable to absorb them, though the southern provinces of Sao Paulo and Parana have taken on large numbers for factory work.

Many soon find city life with its high cost of living as unpalatable as the drought itself. It is a common sight here to see truckloads of ragged northerners on the way home.

But the southward trek still goes on.

Die From Hunger

Agriculture Minister Joao Cleophas, now visiting the drought zone, will report directly to President Getulio Vargas and is expected to recommend extra emergency measures.

Reports reach here daily of children dying of hunger and thirst en route south and of towns in the interior being ransacked for food by famished travellers.

The principal federal agency operating in the affected area, "Obras Contra Secas," is making roads and damming watercourses. But general drought relief is hampered by lack of funds.

Claim Teen-Agers Got Break-in Loot Worth Thousands

MONTREAL (CP) — Police said today they were holding eight youngsters, ranging in age from 14 to 18 years, in connection with one of the worst outbreaks of juvenile banditry in the city's history.

Inspector Georges Allain said the youths, some of whom have appeared in court before on other charges, broke into literally hundreds of private homes during the last two months and stole an unestimated amount of articles and merchandise. The gang was said to have admitted stealing at least three cars.

One of the boys, a 17-year-old, has admitted breaking into at least 500 homes since he was seven years old, police said.

The eight, trailed by police for several weeks, were rounded up Sunday in a series of simultaneous raids on pool rooms and restaurants where they were known to hang out and through visits to their homes.

Inspector Allain said the stolen merchandise would run into thousands of dollars. Only one thing of value—a $1,000 tea set—has been recovered.

The loot was sold for a small percentage of its value to poolroom habitues and on the street to lesser characters of the underworld. Police were unable to say yet how many charges would be laid against the gang.

Identity of Girl Slain on Island Leads to Arrest

MONTREAL (CP)—The body of a young woman found slain five days ago on nearby Ile Bizard was positively identified Monday as that of 23-year-old Marie-Paulle Langlais of Montreal.

Less than two hours after the victim was identified, police arrested Roland Genest, 34, and held him as a material witness for a coroner's inquest into the woman's death.

The Langlais woman's body was found on the island, 20 miles northwest of here, last Wednesday. It bore the marks of 30 knife wounds.

Police said Genest was picked up after investigation showed he allegedly had been living with Miss Langlais in a private home for nearly two years.

SONG COMPOSER DIES

LONDON (Reuters) — Fred Godfrey, composer of "Take Me Back to Dear Old Blighty," First World War British song hit, and other vaudeville tunes, died Sunday. He was 72. One of his best known songs was "All the Nice Girls Love a Sailor," written in the early 1900s along with such others as "Irish and Proud of It, Too," "Now I Have to Call Him Father," and "Who were You with Last Night?"

Activity Is Motto of Haven For Aged Norwegian Patients

By ELIZABETH KITSON

OSLO (Reuters) — "Activation" is the motto of Oslo's latest nursing home for the aged, opened recently with Dr. Victor Gaustad, one of Norway's leading experts on the problems of old age, as head doctor.

This new ward is equipped with gymnastic devices designed to train the old folks how to become sprightly again.

Inactivity is the greatest danger especally if they have once had an illness which necessitated hospital treatment. Their longing for a good chair and a comfortable chair becomes a dangerous habit.

Certain Problems

But most hospitals lack the equipment, time or personnel to give the old folks the help they need. So aged patients are often transferred to nursing wards where they remain bed-ridden for the rest of their lives, although there is nothing medically wrong with them.

The new ward aims to teach old persons to look after themselves again, by training their weakened muscles and loosening up their stiff legs.

They will also be taught various hobbies to keep their fingers busy and give them an interest in life.

In the gymnasium, special equipment includes an apparatus like parallel bars, with which the old persons can practise walking while supporting themselves with the rails, and a stationary bicycle for exercising ankles and knees.

Dr. Gaustad has estimated that there are between 150 and 200 different actions which a patient must master in order to be able to look after himself.

The old folks must be able to dress and undress themselves, get into and out of bed alone, walk unaided, wash themselves and brush their own hair, shave, eat and if possible prepare their own food.

It is hoped that each year more old people will pass through the ward and return to active social life again.

TRIM KRUPP HOLDINGS

BONN, Germany (Reuters)—Alfried Krupp, former German armaments king, will have to sell all his holdings in coal, iron and steel industries by 1960 under an agreement between the Western Allies and the Germans, it was learned here Saturday. The agreement, reached after months of negotiations, is expected to be signed this week by representatives of the Allies and the Krupp industrial empire.

Lack Practical Diplomats, Says Gordon Graydon

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada's diplomatic corps is endangered by an over-abundance of academic brains and a shortage of practical men with plain common sense, Gordon Graydon (PC—Peel) said Monday.

The foreign affairs specialist of the official opposition who has served with Canadian diplomatic teams at United Nations meetings said the staff of the external affairs department should bear a closer relationship to the "fabric of Canadian life."

Specifically he suggested to the Commons external affairs committee that there should be more farmers representing Canada abroad and that men who may not have college degrees but are long on common sense and practical shrewdness should have their chance too.

Dana Wilgress, departmental undersecretary, replied that Canada's minister to Norway, John Watkins, is a farmer by background, that there are a few graduates of agricultural colleges on the staff and nothing to stop others making the grade if they can pass the entry tests.

He said the department recruits the cream of Canadian college graduates and gives special marks to those who have practical experience. It was true, however, that the majority did not have practical experience outside the department.

SIGN ECONOMIC TREATY

SANTIAGO (AP)—The presidents of Chile and Argentina signed a treaty Saturday to wipe out trade and economic barriers between the two countries and to strengthen their sphere of influence in Latin America. The agreement is aimed at increasing trade and calls for the gradual elimination of import taxes and other trade barriers.

U.S. POLICY ATTACKED

LONDON (Reuters) — Britain's Chamber of Shipping Sunday attacked the United States policy of requiring some American aid cargoes to be carried in American ships. In its annual report, the chamber said that in some cases the rates paid to American ship-owners for mutual security aid cargoes were nearly double those paid to ships of other countries dependent on the open chartering market.

Detroit, Habs Appear Cinch To Finish 1-2 In National Hockey League

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

What fans in both Kingston and Belleville predict will be one of the bitterest series ever fought between clubs representing the cities, gets under way Wednesday night in Kingston when the Glen Roys and Goodyears clash in the first of their best-of-seven semi-finals.

The Kingston Community Centre led the group "Box Office League" by a wide margin during the schedule, easily averaging some 2600 fans. That the Centre will have the "SRO" sign out for the playoffs goes without saying.

With this in mind Manager Don McNevin of the Glens, has secured a number of tickets for loyal Belleville fans who have followed the fortunes and misfortunes of the team all season, and these are available now.

Reserved seat tickets are now on sale at the Glen Roy Creamery, Pinnacle St. The number is limited and fans desirous of taking in tomorrow's initial battle, are well advised to secure them right away.

In addition, Manager McNevin has secured two buses which will accommodate 66 people. The tab is three dollars return and this price includes a reserved seat ticket at the Communtiy Centre. Better act quickly if you want to "get in" on the safari. Get in touch with McNevin at the creamery, 4308, or 693.

MARINES VS. MOIRAS TONIGHT

There's a treat in store for basketball fans at the collegiate gymnasium when the Belleville Moiras and Peterborough Marines open their second round intermediate "B" playdown points-to-count series. Both squads are reputed to be court powerhouses and it has even been stated that the winner of this series bids fair to cop the provincial crown. The Moiras and Marines have met in exhibitional battle in off nights during the schedule with each team coming up with a narrow-margin vcitory. So tonight's tilt should be a thriller for court fans. The second game is scheduled for Peterborough Thursday evening.

Speaking of basketball, Albert College's undefeated senior and junior teams meet the Napanee C.I. squads in the college gym in the final scheduled games of the season tomorrow afternoon, starting at four o'clock. The college squads go to Toronto on Saturday where they will take part in the COSSA basketball tournaments. "Red" Townsend's BCI juniors will also make the trip. The games are being played in the Danforth Technical School.

SKATING STARS!

President Jack Dickens, of the Quinte Skating Club, says three outstanding attractions will enhance the club extravaganza scheduled for Memorial Arena Saturday night. These include Miss Joyce Kornacher and William DeNance, Jr., 1952 runners-up in the Canadian Dance Championships and 1952 Toronto Skating Club champions. Both are silver medallists and will skate here as a team.

Beverly Barber, talented young artist, a silver medallist and dance silver medallist, will appear as a soloist. She has appeared in this role in eight consecutive Toronto Skating Club Carnivals.

Then there is Jim Hambly, stilt skater, a professional from Oshawa, who has appeared in many touring ice shows. Recently he was with the Barbara Ann Scott show on a trans-Canada tour.

FOOTBALL FILMS!

Albert "Toots" Holway, hockey hot stover and district representative of the O'Keefe Brewing Company, says the football pictures being shown at the special meeting of gridiron enthusiasts at the Kiwanis Centre Friday night are a "must" for those who like and play the game. The O'Keefe Brewing Company, which sponsors the movies, is having the films sent here by special messenger, none other than "Toots" himself, so those who attend the meeting are assured of deluxe entertainment besides contributing to the business end of the meeting. Bill Fry, intermediate ORFU secretary, will be on hand to give out with some useful advice, and it is hoped all interested in football will attend.

ATHLETE OF THE YEAR!

A sports fan of the city, a business gentleman, who wishes to remain anonymous, has informed this department that a suitable trophy for a Belleville "Athlete of the Year" will be forthcoming, if acceptable.

The gentleman suggests that a panel of sportsmen of the city act as judges. The trophy will be put up for annual award with a replica presented to the winner each year.

He further suggests that the selection be made immediately following the hockey season, say sometime in April, so that all events of the 1952 season will be completed.

It is a generous offer, and this department concurs in it heartily.

But It Looks Like Dog-Fight For Third and Fourth Spots; Three Teams in Close Battle

MONTREAL (CP)—Along about this time of year it is fitting to indulge learnedly in mathematics to determine what's going to happen in the fast-waning National Hockey League race.

Elementary arithmetic shows that only a debacle of violent proportions can prevent Detroit Red ings from winning their fifth consecutive league title and thereby setting an NHL record.

On the same calculations, Montreal Canadiens have only a whisper of a chance of catching the flying Red Wings but should finish comfortably in second place.

It's a different story for the next three places—only two of them playoff slots. In determining the finishing levels of Toronto Maple Leafs, Boston Bruins and Chicagi Black Hawks, neither Euclid nor Einstein offers anything better than Madame Zazza and her crystal ball.

Detroit has rolled up 73 points in 58 games and Montreal 65, while of the three teams behind the leaders, Toronto has 56 points, Boston 55 and Chicago 54. New York Rangers are 13 points behind the Hawks.

The individual scoring race produced practically no change last week in positions of the leading 10. Gordie Howe of Detroit, in a class by himself and with records in sight, collected one goal and four assists and heads the list with 79 points.

Howe needs eight more goals to equal Maurice (Rocket) Richard's record of 50 goals in one season and needs only seven points to equal his own mark of 86 points in one campaign.

Ted Lindsay of Detroit, with a goal and two assists, held to second place and now has 58 points. Wally Hergesheimer of New York, with a two-two count for the week, pulled into a third-place tie with Montreal's Richard, who scored one goal and one assist. Each has 52 points, although Hergy has 25 goals to the Rocket's 23.

Terry Sawchuk of Detroit widened his margin over Gerry McNeil of Montreal in the goaltenders' bid for the Vezina Trophy.

Sawchuk allowed only five goals in four games last week and cut his goals-against average from 2.02 to 1.97. McNeil let in five goals in two games and his average went from 2.05 to 2.07.

Habs Whip Teeps In Exhibition

ST. CATHARINES (CP)—Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League defeated St. Catharines Teepees of the Ontario Junior A hockey series 9-2 in an exhibition game Monday night.

Only one penalty was handed out—that to Canadiens' Jim McPherson in the third period.

Elmer Lach and Paul Meger led the Habs with two goals apiece. Tom Johnson, McPherson, Bert Olmstead, John McCormack and Dick Moore scored the others for Montreal.

Hank Ciesla and Hugh Barlow tallied for the Teeps.

Mercurys Whip Brantford In Series Opener

OWEN SOUND (CP) — Owen Sound Mercurys struck for four goals in the final period to defeat Brantford Redmen 7-4 Monday night in the opening game of their best-of-seven semi-final series in Ontario Hockey Association Senior A play.

Right-winger Ray McCallum fired three goals and assisted on a fourth to pace the Mercury offensive.

Brantford clung to a one-goal lead through the latter part of the second period and the early stages of the final. But once the Mercurys tied the score the Redmen seldom had a good scoring opportunity.

Tommy Burlington, Roy Leckie, Jerry Reid and Bill McComb were the other Owen Sound scorers.

Jack Taylor tallied twice for Brantford. Wally Hnatiuk and Jake Wade scored the others.

Brantford drew five of the nine minor penalties. The series continues in Brantford tonight.

THE Calvert SPORTS COLUMN

by Elmer Ferguson

It seems to this observer that one of the greatest sports dramas of 1952, which had quite a number of these, was crowded into the last day but one of the year, when little Tony Despirito won a desperate battle against the most relentless opponents of all, Old Father Time.

Tony Despirito is a jockey. He hadn't been heard of when 1952 dawned, he may never again hit the heavy type. But December 30, 1952 was his moment of glory, the climax of a play that gripped the imagination of sports folk all over this continent.

On the morning of December 30, Tony had ridden 385 race winners. So that every one of the year's closing days would count, he flew to Havana to ride in the Sunday races three, then flew back to Florida to resume his attack on the old mark of 388 winners in a single year. So with one day to go, he needed four winners to break the record, and on that day, he rode the four winners, became the new champion. He had one day to go, which is drawing it as close as any camera finish could be.

The undersized son of a textile mill-worker, at Lawrence, Mass., was so small that other youngsters called him "The Runt" and shooed him away from their games, lest some bigger lad should trample him. So he wandered the eight miles to Lou Smith's Rockingham Park, and began to hang around the barns. Kindly horsemen let him earn a buck by walking "hots"—that is, cooling out horses after a race.

He rode horses for training in the morning and finally, he got a mount, but he didn't get close to the pay-off line. In fact he rode so poorly that the stewards instructed that Tony wa[illegible] have any more mounts until he developed skill and timing. So it was back to the exercise gallops in the mornings for the kid from Lawrence.

In January 1952, at Florida's Sunshine Park, he got another chance. He rode Great Shuffle and won. Even then, success didn't blaze a sudden easy trail. For stewards at Sunshine shooed him away, told him to quit riding before he killed himself or somebody else. "You'll never be a jockey" they advised.

But the kid didn't heed the advice. We presume he felt, as have a lot of other kids in a great many other sports, that he had the stuff if given any kind of a break. He went back to New England, and on the lesser tracks there, he began to ride at a rate slightly more than sensational. One day he had six winners, is now the eighth jockey in 57 years to ride more than 300 winners in a year. And despite a 10-day suspension which seemed to wreck his chances late in the year, he rode courageously, rode well, until, on December 30, with the end of the year just over 24 hours away, he piloted home four winners, became holder of the new riding record. A sporting and dramatic feat indeed.

Venerable Dutch Leonard Readies For 21st Major Baseball Loop Season

By GAYLE TALBOT

MESA, Ariz. (AP)—As his 43rd birthday approaches, Emil (Dutch) Leonard, the eminent knuckleballer, is driving himself into condition for what he expects to be another full season of duty in the Chicago Cub bull pen.

Leonard is probably the most remarkable physical specimen in baseball today. His weight remains an almost invarying 197 pounds and his legs might still pass for those of a college football star.

"I'm not ever going to quit this game," the Dutchman insisted as he cooled off from a hard session. "They'll have to cut this uniform off me. I'll never take it off as long as I still love to play this game."

Leonard, who reported to his first big league camp 20 years ago this spring, saw action in 45 games last season. In the 67 innings he worked he yielded only 24 bases on balls while running up 37 strikeouts.

"This relief work I really love," he said. "I think maybe I'll get a bigger kick out of it than I ever did starting."

We asked Dutch if his fast ball was blazing in there with its customary velocity this spring.

"It sure it," he exulted. "It's getting to be my best pitch, and I'm not joking, either. The batters in our league think all they're going to get from me is a knuckler and that's what they keep looking for.

"While they're looking for it I just keep on whipping that fast one past them, and first thing they know they're out of strikes."

If there is any one explanation for the fact that he's still in there drawing down a major league salary at an age where the average pitcher has long since retired to run a bowling alley, Leonard says it lies in his legs.

"I started with good ones and I've kept them in shape," he said.

Announce Top Tennis Juniors

MONTREAL. (CP) — David Piers of Truro, N.S., and Mariette Laframboise of Montreal were announced Monday night as the top-ranking junior tennis players in Canada.

In announcing the rankings, Dr. Georges Leclerc of Montreal, chairman of the national ranking committee of the Canadian Lawn Tennis Association, said the top six men come from six different provinces.

"This indicates that the CLTA's junior development program which was begun in 1949 is functioning well across the country," he said.

Piers was ranked No. 1 by a close margin over John Swann of Vancouver and Pierre Lambert, Victoriaville, Quebec, Nos. 2 and 3 respectively. Piers won both the Nova Scotia and New Brunswick championships.

Miss Laframboise retained the No. 1 ranking she earned in 1951. She won the Canadian junior championship without the loss of a set.

Carol Turcotte of Ottawa was ranked No. 2 and Josie Smith of Toronto No. 3.

Postpone Bells 'Fra Brames'

DAUPHIN, Man. (CP)—Cries of "Sweep, Sweep," will replace the chimes of wedding bells next month for Russ Jackman, lead man of Manitoba's rink in the Dominion curling championships at Sudbury.

Twenty-three-year-old Jackman planned to get married March 5, but the wedding was postponed when his Dauphin rink, skipped by veteran Ab Gowanlock, won the Manitoba title and a berth in the Canadian finals starting March 2.

Gowanlock, third Jimmy Williams and second Art Pollon, hope to give Jackman the Canadian title as a wedding present.

Dominion play is nothing new for 50-year-old Gowanlock. In 1938, he skipped a rink from his hometown, Glenboro, Man., to the championship.

"The competition is getting tougher each year," Gowanlock says, "but we're not short on experience. We've got a well-balanced rink which can play both the draw or knockout game capably, depending on ice conditions and circumstances."

Fans Charged After Game

ST. MARYS (CP)—Three men were charged Monday night—one for assaulting a police constable—after fights broke out before and during an intermediate WOAA playoff game at the arena.

Police said a Forest man was charged with assaulting a provincial police officer, and driving a car while impaired. The man allegedly picked a fight with provincial constable Gerald Hartmier of St. Marys before the hockey game.

Police said the man was looking for a place to park his car in front of the arena and bumped another car. He then assaulted constable Hartmier.

During the game two St. Marys fans mixed it up near the penalty box and a by-stander was trampled during the fight. The two were charged with disorderly conduct but were allowed to go home.

The largest crowd of the season watched Forest defeat St. Marys 7-3.

CAPETOWN (Reuters) — The term "private" has been abolished in all South African infantry regiments. It has been replaced by the term "rifleman." The new term, it is said, brings the infantry into line with other units which have special titles — gunners in the artillery, sappers in the engineers and troopers in the tank corps.

COLLEGIATE NEWS

Dance

"Cupid's Frolic!" Don't those two words fill your head with hearts and arrows? This was the name of the Valentine's dance recently sponsored by the Girls' Hi-Y Club.

The decorations consisted of hearts, cupids and umbrellas. The variety of records was the best ever heard at a dance. During the dance, the box of Valentines which had been in the hall all week was opened and the Valentines distributed. Everyone went home with gay "hearts." Many also left wondering who sent "that" Valentine.

Assemblies

The assembly of February 11 presented by C.11 was excellent in musical entertainment. Beverly Gow played a song entitled "Whispering." The Girls' Choral Ensemble under the direction of Mr. Templer sang a group of songs, Joshua Fit de Battle of Jericho, I Got Shoes, Memory and The Three Little Kittens. These girls were also featured Tuesday on the Radio Club's broadcast. Joan Jeffery saig, "Roll on Kentucky Moon," to bring to a close the musical side of the program. So that everybody would return to their class rooms in good spirits, C.11 presented a play entitled "Experience Necessary."

The assembly of February 18 will linger on in the minds of many a student at B.C.I. as one of the best of the year, if not the best.

Pat Campbell quoted two poems to emphasize Brotherhood Week. A film followed, also on the subject of Brotherhood.

Beth Wilbur presented to Mr. Lambert the sum of ..630 collected by the students of B.C.I. for the Canadian Institute for the Blind. This money, along with the money collected by the teachers, will go to help Belleville reach its $25,000 objective. N. P. Suzanne Cavers sang "Such Lovely Things", accompanied by Mr. Read at the piano and after a hearty round of applause, "Till I Waltz Again With You", as an encore.

New Quartet

Three Dots and a Dash, a new harmonica quartet in the school gave forth with their version of some good old Negro spirituals. This group of four were dressed to suit the part with everything on from long johns to boiler hats.

Roberta Allen gave a reading entitled "The Batchalor Sale." Roberta made this poem even more humorous by going through all the motions.

The Glee Club gave a series of vocal selections under the direction of Mr. Templer entitled "Let Us All Go Maying," "The Heavens are Declaring", "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes" and "Oklahoma."

They were accompanied at the piano by Mr. Linton Read.

Spike Jones might have ruined the song "I Went to Your Wedding," but what G-12-B and G-12-C did to it is unmentionable. With the song playing in the background they went through the actions of the greatest Hillbilly marriage of them all, the Mighty John Woods to that Midget, Terry Clifton and so ended for good that once beautiful song, "I Went to Your Wedding." There was a special assembly on Wednesday for the cadets where they were awarded cups for being the best band and corps.

Kampus Kapers!!

Have you met a girl racing around the corridors with a racing form in her hand mumbling "and it's Homework in the fourth and Detentions in the fifth"? Well if you haven't, watch out!

It isn't safe going anywhere in B.C.I. from top to bottom or bottom to top. Everyone is practising for Kampus Kapers.

The gyms aren't safe to enter as Miss Abrahmson and Miss Martinson are training their different groups for brand new numbers. Clubs go flying once or twice a week for Fantasy in Rhythm which is a club swinging routine by a group of young collegiate girls. The Shamrock and the Thistle is a number of high kicking lads and lasses who have a drop of Irish or Scotch in their blood. They are taking to the Highlands to bring us f'ngs and jigs.

Have you seen the person on the bottom of the great pyramid when the top comes down to the bottom? You will see how he fares plus several arrangements of pyramids and tumbling.

Board of—Education?? meets on March 5 and 6 to show what can happen when women enter politics.

Rollicking fun is in store when "Kampus Kapers", presented by students of the Belleville Collegiate is enacted in March.

Officials Salaries Of Housing Body Remain Secret

OTTAWA (CP)—The Commons voted 95 to 51 Monday to defeat a Progressive Conservative attempt to obtain the individual salary scale of high officers of Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, the government housing agency.

John Diefenbaker (PC — Lake Centre) asked for a copy of all cheques for December, 1952, and January, 1953, of employees who were or are making more than $10,000 a year.

Resources Minister Winters, who reports to Parliament for the agency, said the government lacks that information. Cheques were private accounting documents of the corporation and never had been produced in Parliament.

The minister added that the president of the corporation, David Mansur, had his salary—$20,000—set by the government when he took the job. Effective in January this year, he had been given an 11-per-cent increase to $22,200 on his reappointment.

The resetting of salaries from the original scale set by the government was the prerogative of the agency. Further, its employees' salaries were set by the agency itself.

Twins Celebrate 82nd Birthday

TORONTO (CP)—William and Robert Smith of Toronto, who claim to be Canada's oldest twins, celebrated their 82nd birthday Monday. Robert is in hospital.

The twins were born on a farm near Teeswater, Ont., in 1871. They had one brother and seven sisters but all now are dead.

William, who now heads the Full Gospel Mission in Toronto, offered this advice for a long life: "Keep the Ten Commandments and fear the Lord."

All Cabinet Ministers Advised Before Orders-in-Council Pass St. Laurent Assures Commons

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister St. Laurent indicated in the Commons Monday that all members of the cabinet are consulted before orders-in-council, including secret orders, are passed by the government.

"I have never made any recommendations not known to my colleagues," said Mr. St. Laurent in outlining how orders are handled by the cabinet.

Every member of the cabinet was responsible for recommendations to the governor-general. Cabinet decisions were taken after free discussion. If a minister did not agree with a decision, he had the constitutional right to resign.

Mr. St. Laurent made his statements during continued debate on extension of the government's emergency powers for another year.

George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, opposed the extension on the grounds that the power would permit too much power for the government.

Joseph Noseworthy (CCF-York South) said experience of the last two years has shown the government does not need the powers.

Mr. Garson said the act is designed not for use in war, but in exigencies such as a boxcar shortage, problems of moving the crops or when Parliament is dissolved during an election.

"Boxcars, invasion and election—those are the three emergencies that are going to arise," said Mr. Diefenbaker at one stage. He felt Mr. Garson was being evasive and that there was something "hidden" in the government request for extension of the powers.

Shout 'Assassin' At Vishinsky

NEW YORK (AP)—Shouts of "murderer" and "assassin" greeted Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky Monday as he arrived for the resumption today of the United Nations general assembly meeting.

A surging, loudly belligerent throng of pickets hurled their taunts at the Russian diplomat as he and his party disembarked from the liner Queen Mary.

Policemen threw up a human barricade to hold back the crowd from shoving directly into the Vishinsky party as it climbed into waiting limousines.

Vishinsky smiled and avoided even a glance at the shouting, sign-waving pickets as he made his way to the car. He had only this to say to reporters:

"No news is the best news."

The pickets represented seven Polish groups and six Russian anti-Communist organizations, spokesmen said.

Squirrels Drove Her 'Nuts'

BUFFALO, NY (AP)—A woman with a problem telephoned city hall Monday.

She told Joseph Dominick, switchboard operator, that there were squirrels in her attic. She wanted to know what to do to drive hem out.

"Mothballs," suggested Dominick.

"Nope. Tried that," responded the caller. "It's noisier than ever. Squirrels seem to be playing marbles with them."

Dominick gave up. He told her to call the SPCA.

Jury Returns True Bills

KITCHENER (CP)—A Waterloo county grand jury returned true bills Monday in two murder charges to be heard at the spring sessions of the Ontario Supreme Court.

Kenneth Wiles, young Kitchener carpenter, is charged with shooting Marie Huras of Kitchener, who died of bullet wounds in Toronto Jan. 27. The hearing begins today.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Paepcke of Elmira are jointly charged with the murder of their small daughter, Glenis. A true bill was also returned against the couple on a charge of assault causing bodily harm.

Mr. Justice Wishart Spence will preside at the trials.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

When Akoolap Oxpert gets into a bridge game with a group of better players they cut him up three ways. Each has him for an opponent twice and only once as a partner.

So, each simply tries to lose as little as possible with him as partner. Which is not easy to do. He has an uncanny ability of prolonging a rubber with loss after loss.

If he opens the bidding it is always with a no-trump unless he has a powerful suit. If his partner responds in a suit he will make sure that it ends in no-trump where he will be declarer.

If his partner opens in a suit, he sticks in a no-trump bid fast to assure him the right to play the contract. This he proceeds to butcher with ingenious stupidity.

With the least encouragement from partner he is in a slam that goes down. His hand with a long weak suit is opened with a bid of three that keeps his partner guessing what to do about it.

If his partner makes a takeout double he decides to pass because he has a few trumps in the opponent suit. If partner comes in with a simple overcall he is there with a rescue because he lacks support.

But the classic of the session is when, after three passes, he holds the hand you see here:

♠ None
♥ A Q 9 8 6 5 3

He opens this with three hearts. It is doubled and goes down for a heap. His alibi is that he was trying for a part score. He found all the trumps stacked against him. Can he help it, he wants to know?

He has been playing bridge long before you were out of knee pants, he says. If you are a victim of distribution, take your medicine, he says.

There are 13 hearts in the pack of which he has only seven. There are 12 aces and kings and queens in the pack of which he has only two. Where did he think the rest were? Out on vacation?

Fire Destroys Five Cottages

BUFFALO, N. Y. (AP) — Fire Monday destroyed five frame summer cottage on Squaw Island in the Niagara River.

A stiff west wind fanned the flames and caused two alarms, but no injuries were reported. The unoccupied cottages were in a colony of about 20 at the north end of the island.

Fire fighters pumped water from the river to play on the flames. There were no hydrants nearby.

Fire commissioner Harold R. Becker said the flames began in one centrally-located cottage and spread in both directions to the others. He said the cause was not determined.

Becker estimated damage at $10,000.

AT THE McCARTHY—Bonar Colleano meets up with an eye-filling part of his highly romantic past in this scene from the enchanting United Artists film, "A Tale of Five Women," playing today and Wednesday at the Odeon McCarthy Theatre, 2nd feature presents Tom Ewell and Harvey Lembeck in Bill Mauldin's Willie and Joe, Back at the Front."

AT THE BELLE—Bing Crosby, Bob Hope and Dorothy Lamour once again hit the "Road" in Paramount's brand new Technicolor musical "Road to Bali," their funniest show yet—continuing today, Wednesday and Thursday, at the Belle Theatre.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Ever have the yen to be a bear hunter? Carl Switzer did, and he left behind a movie career to become one.

Movie fans will remember "Alfalfa" Switzer as the wild-haired, freckle-faced kid of the "Our Gang" series. He also appeared with Jane Withers in "Wild and Wooly" and in other pictures. [illegible] in 1940, the "Our Gang" series was discontinued and Carl found himself in the awkward age for film juveniles.

"Don't get me wrong—I didn't quit Hollywood," he said. "I would have stayed in Hollywood if I could have gotten picture jobs."

So he turned to his favorite pastime—hunting.

"I had been hunting bear since I was 14 years old," said Carl, who is now 26. "I had some of my own hounds, and I became acquainted with Roy Rogers at various dog workouts. He staked me to a set of hounds so I could go in business as a bear hunter."

Carl set up headquarters at Avery's, a tiny community in the mountains about 60 miles from Stockton, Calif. He soon had a thriving business of leading bear-hunting parties during the fall open season. He has been responsible for 400 pelts. During other seasons, he hunts for mountain lion, deer, wild boar, raccoon, etc.

His return to the movies happened because of an amazing coincidence. Recently, one of the members of his huning party was film director "Wild Bill" Wellman.

The director said he wanted him for a role in the John Wayne picture, "Island in the Sky."

Carl, here in the picture, said he would be returning to his game hunting. "I wouldn't mind doing more pictures. But I'd like to keep up my other business, too."

Clergy Visit Camp

KINGSTON (CP)—Four clergymen, invited by the army to visit Vimy camp here, have been shown the way military authorities are training 16-year-old soldier apprentices for the Royal Canadian Corps of Signals.

Rt. Rev. Kenneth Evans, Anglican bishop of Ontario, Rev. Otlis Davidson of the First Baptist Church, Rev. J. W. Houston of Cooke's United Church and Rev. J. W. Macdonald of the Pittsburgh Presbyterian Church were conducted round the living quarters and classrooms Friday by Maj. J. Wilcox Duncan, chaplain.

Maj. R. C. Bindoff, officer commanding the apprentice training squadron, outlined the training program and discipline and the clergymen talked with many of the boys.

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

FOR WEDNESDAY, FEB. 25, 1953.

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—Good day for activities that require vigor, endurance, perhaps bravery and daring. By same token, don't be unduly aggressive where finesse is needed.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus)—Not unfavorable for artistic and social matters, but difficult tasks have the more generous Mars influences. Ambition, courage, initiative high now.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini)—Your Mercury today stresses extra caution in signing important papers, agreements, doing any difficult mental work. Day encourages smart management.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer)—Mild indications today, but going to very benefic rays tomorrow. If you have initiative you will get good results in whatever you plan.

July 24 to August 22 (Leo)—You will enjoy this stimulating day but you must not mistake vigor for domineering. Keep fairness, justice in mind and you can achieve.

August 23 to September 23 (Virgo)—Same admonition as Gemini now, also same advantages. Be determined to get ahead with what is important. Today is for the doer, the soundly ambitious.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra)—Plan, work carefully on any weighty study or task; go forward bravely. Day grows better as it advances and tomorrow hold brighter prospects. Industrial trades top favorites now.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio)—Splendid indications for you who keep your sense of humor alongside your working tactics. Important how you use the stellar stimulus.

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius) — An in-between day. Business interests, all good work will return some benefits; but extra caution is stressed, mostly in legal matters, making promises.

December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn) — You handling metals, tools, machinery, lumber; doing hazardous work, railroading, ship - building especially sponsored, as are our military.

February 21 to March 20 (Pisces)—Advice to Libra and Capricorn pertinent to your sector today. Much can be accomplished if you don't worry, but keep going steadily with faith in your work and you.

YOU BORN TODAY have versatility, artistic ability. Are patient and will study a problem to get at details and all angles necessary to its thorough completion. If you properly develop your bright mind, you will seek learning and high achievement. One of your best traits is self-restraint but do not permit this to scare you from daring to try something new that has promise. Birthdate: Enrico Caruso, immortal tenor.

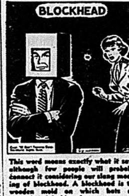
17,000 Police, Troops For Coronation Route

LONDON (AP) — Fifteen thousand police and 2,000 troops standing at five-yard intervals will line the route of the Coronation procession June 2.

The route was divided into seven sections. Ticketholders in two of these sections will have to be in their places by 6 a.m. of coronation day and others by 8 or 9 a.m. The procession itself is due to start about 11 a.m.

Five thousand Coronation police will be drawn from 122 police forces in the English provinces.

Why We Say--



This word means exactly what it says, although few people will probably connect it considering our slang meaning of blockhead. A blockhead is the wooden mold on which hats are shaped and fashioned.

Eden's Chances Of Succeeding Churchill Fade

LONDON (Reuters) — Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden's chances of succeeding Winston Churchill as prime minister have run into withering fire from the Conservative party's extreme right wing.

The weekly newspaper Recorder, voice of ultra-Conservative big business, said party back-benchers in Parliament are "horrified at the way he is following the Socialists in throwing away the Empire."

Earlier last week, Tory backbenchers and Lord Beaverbrook's empire-minded newspapers expressed dismay over the agreement Eden reached with Egypt for granting Sudanese independence.

Before the Sudan agreement was announced last week, Eden held a delicate private session with party rank-and-filers to allay their fears of a "crumbling" empire.

Yet the same fears were brought into the open later by Ralph Assheton, former Conservative minister who once served as chairman of the party's central organization. Assheton asked Eden in the House of Commons whether he appreciated that many people felt self-government for the inexperienced and almost illiterate Sudanese was only a mockery and abandonment of Britain's trust.

Beaverbrook's Daily Express charged Britain had "scuttled" from a sacred trust and said if Eden could not stand up to Egyptian Premier Mohamed Naguib, he should make way for someone who could.

The Recorder said Eden was slipping badly in the race to be the next prime minister.

Teachers Accept Offer

STRATFORD (CP)—Secondary school teachers said Saturday they will accept an offer of a $100-a-year increase in salaries offered by the board of education.

Teachers had originally asked a $200 increase in maximum salaries. But they notified the board Saturday they will accept the $100 which will bring the salary of a department head to $5,400, major specialist $5,200 and graduate specialist $5,000.

Women teachers in public schools accepted the same offer Thursday, which brings salaries of holders of first-class certificates to $3,600. Public school men teachers plan to negotiate further.

London Organist Dies of Exposure Near Stratford

STRATFORD (CP)—Maxwell A. Magee, 33, London organist and composer, died early Sunday of exposure after his car slid into a water-filled ditch and he struggled through three feet of icy water to seek aid.

The body was discovered near a haystack about 150 feet from the car. Police believe the organist made a wrong turn down a deserted lane after he lost his way.

A post-mortem is being conducted.

No decision has been reached on an inquest.

Mr. Magee left London about midnight and was believed to be en route to visit friends in Kitchener. He planned to return to London Sunday night.

Police believe he drove to Stratford, entered the city on Erie street and then decided on a short cut. He turned off on to a back road and then northerly on Dufferin street.

The car then turned along a deserted lane and slid into a three-foot ditch filled with water.

There was no indication Mr. Magee was injured in the accident. He apparently got out of the car, waded through the icy water and started to walk along the lane.

The biting wind froze his clothing "stiff as a board," police said. Shock of the cold is believed to have caused death.

Mr Magee was widely known as an organist and composer. Born in Hanover, he was graduated from the University of Western Ontario's Waterloo College in 1938. For two years he headed the history department at the Niagara Falls Collegiate.

Loggers, Miners In B.C. Watch Profits Rise Fall

VICTORIA (CP) — The fortunes of British Columbia logging and mining companies rose and fell like a barometer on succeeding days last week.

First, the province's Social Credit government announced Wednesday it will tax the profits of logging and mining companies 10 per cent —a new tax for logging and a six-per-cent increase for mining.

For a B. C. logging company making a net profit of $100,000 a year, the "old" federal tax was $49,000, leaving the company $51,000.

With the new provincial tax, the company would retain $46,200, or $6,800 less.

Then Finance Minister Abbott on Thursday reduced federal corporation taxes. This means that the B. C. company would retain $51,700 from its $100,000 net profit, ending up $700 better off.

FARM PROBLEM

LONDON (Reuters)—Poland's Communist government wants to keep the boys down on the farm The widespread drift of young laborers from the farms to the cities represents a "great danger" and must be stopped, Polish Premier Boleslaw Bierut said at a collective farm conference Sunday.

MARMORA

Machine Shed Flattened By High Wind Storm

Marmora — Most serious of damage wrought locally by the wind storm of Friday night and Saturday occurred at the barn of Arthur Fleming about five miles north of the village. A machine shed surmounted by a hay loft, collapsed about 8.30 a.m. on Saturday flattening right out and causing lumber to be scattered over the yard as well as damage to machinery and scattering of hay. A cement buttress gave way in the demolition. It is only about a year since the owner strengthened the building. Not far removed from the Fleming farm is that of Donald Shannon. A piece of the roof of his barn was torn off, the damage being minor. Limbs of several trees fell on the road between Cordova and Deer Lake. In Marmora Village a storm window of the Royal Hotel was blown off and shattered on the sidewalk below. The wind also tore off a garage door. The aerial of Jack Hermans television set was also blown down and damaged. No other damage was reported in the district.

House Urged To Defy Pact On Dardanelles

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — The Turkish Parliament was urged Sunday night to defy the international agreement controlling the Dardanelles so that American warships could enter the Soviet-dominated Black Sea.

Deputy Ali Ihsan Sabis, a retired general and First World War hero, said that U. S. ships "must be anchored in Black Sea ports" because Turkey is wide open to attacks from the north. He said only Russia and her satellites would disagree and "they are not our friends."

A number of other Parliament members, who spoke during debate on the national defence budget, also took the line that Turkey's flank, and thus the right flank of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, was badly exposed.

Turkey agreed in the 1936 Montreaux convention to restrict the passage of warships through the straits of the Bosporus and the Dardanelles.

NARCOTICS STOLEN

MONTREAL (CP)—Theft of narcotics valued at $6,000 on the illegal market was reported by the Jewish General Hospital Sunday. Police said they had one clue to work on which might result in the arrest of the thief and the return of the narcotics within 24 hours.

FIRE SWEEPS SORORITY

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP)—A $15,000 fire swept the top floor and roof of the Kappa Delta sorority at Michigan State College late Saturday. Thirty-six co-eds escaped without injury. State fire marshal Arnold Renner said the blaze apparently started from a lighted cigaret in a waste paper basket.

Someone to Love

By Irene Lonnen Ernhart

"Jenny, will you marry me?"

"Oh, Tod." She tried to think of something to say. Even though she had thought he might ask her to marry him, and had longed for the moment when he would, now she was doubtful.

"I need you, Jenny." His blue eyes, usually so reckless, were dark with gravity, and his mouth sober. "Take today for instance, the wonderful time we've had together, just the two of us. It's been more than fun. You make me feel—well, so sort of contented and peaceful. I can't think of anything more wonderful than being with you always for the rest of our lives."

"You're sure it isn't that just because Liz—" she couldn't quite bring herself to say it, but she didn't need to for he knew what she meant, and his face darkened instantly.

"You mean you think I'm on the rebound? Is that it? Well, I'm not, Jenny! This is something entirely different than I felt for Liz." He pulled her to him and raised her chin and kissed her, lightly first, then with a sudden fierce surge of passion. And Jenny clung to him, feeling surrender turn her bones to water.

He let her go at last, and they faced each other trembling with awareness. "You will marry me, Jenny, won't you!" He said it with conviction now. "Please say you will!"

—V—

"Yes, Tod." Her voice was a husky whisper. "I'll marry you."

A strange gayety caught them now. They tumbled things into the picnic basket helter skelter.

"We'll get our blood tests tomorrow," Tod said. "I'll pick you up during your lunch hour."

"I'll see about the licence, Jenny, and then, let's see, the three-day wait would make it Thursday. Would Thursday be the day for you?"

"Thursday will be wonderful, Tod. Oh, darling, I'm so incredibly happy."

Tod had a crazy idea they ought to go somewhere and celebrate their engagement, but Jenny wanted to go home. She had so many things to do.

Jenny had picked up the Sunday morning paper from the porch and brought it into the house with her and, as she thumbed idly through it after Tod had left, her attention was caught by a large picture in the society section. It was a shipboard pose of Liz and Jim Courtney. Liz, as usual, looked sophisticated and charming.

"Mr. and Mrs. James B. Courtney, III whose suprise elopement took place in March, will return next week to their new home in Shawnee Place."

What Jenny did not know was that Tod had seen the picture of Liz. All day long he had been haunted by that picture. Liz's smile, her dark mocking eyes had obsessed his thoughts all day long. And, as he turned to Jenny those first few weeks, now he turned to her for comfort again. When he had said he needed her, he was not lying. Married to Jenny he was sure he would no longer feel this sharp need for Liz, this tormented longing for the sight and touch of her.

He knew that Jenny was in love with him. In the beginning he had felt regret at the knowledge, but now he was glad.

Jenny's attractiveness lay more in her charming ways. She had none of Liz' spetulance or poutiness. He would not be a slave to Jenny, as he would have been to Liz, but he was sure they could be happy together.

His mother and Harriet and Joe would not be pleased, because they used to thing the Poleskas, Pop and the motherless Jenny, were high and mighty acting in the old days when the two families lived in the same neighborhood.

Ma used to disapprove of his being at the Poleskas so much. She had been pleased when he quit seeing Jenny altogether. Ma had always bragged about him when he was in college, and she had worked hard and deprived Joe and Harriet of things to send him extra money. They'd kept a scrapbook of clippings from the sports pages and showed it to everyone they knew. When he became engaged to Liz Conover, Ma had been half hysterical with joy.

Monday evening he came home to find Ma all up in the air. "Tod, Mr. Conover phoned you. He wants a definite answer about the job he offered you. You're goi' to take it, ain't you, hon?" Her voice was shrill with urgency. "Besides there's always the chance that Liz——"

"Look, Ma, I've got a job, and I' got other plans, too."

"What plans, son? Why do you be so stubborn when somebody tries to be nice to you?"

There was a lot more. Ma even cried. She made him so mad he almost blurted out that he was going to marry Jenny, but he didn't. He just smoothed things over and jollied Ma up the best he could. And he was sure now it was best not to tell her.

He lay awake a long time that night, torturing himself with conflicting thoughts about Jenny and Liz and the job with the Conover Agency; how he would get through that last year of college; how horrible it would be if he made a mistake marrying Jenny, hurting her. He must never hurt Jenny.

The three days passed in an exciting whirl for Jenny. The girls at the shop gave her a shower; wonderful accessories to go with the cloud pink suit in which she would be married.

Max gave her a hat, a dream, cloud pink to match the suit. She had protested, knowing the exclusive label and the price. But Max insisted.

"Just promise me one thing, Jenny darling," he said. "Don't quit the shop. You're the best model I've got."

"I'm not quitting. You needn't worry about that," Jenny said, tucking the hat into its crisp tissue paper nest in the new hatbox. "Tod's planning to finish college next winter, and he won't have a scholarship this time. I'll have to keep working."

"Fine!" Max gave her a quick hug. "I hope your Tod goes on and on with his schooling, if it means you'll stay that much longer."

"I'm not that good," Jenny protested, laughing. Everything was wonderful and so exciting.

Tod was to be out on his sales territory in the southern part of the state Tuesday and Wednesday but Thursday morning he would come by for her and they would get their licence and go to a justice of the peace. They hadn't had time to talk about the details but Jenny had expected that Tod would bring his mother with him.

She was rather surprised on Thursday morning when Tod turned up alone. He hadn't even told his family.

"But darling," Jenny said, as they drove off. "It's bound to upset your mother this way."

Tod frowned. He did feel guilty for not having told his mother. And the guilt gave rise to irritation as he said, "They'll have raised such a fuss."

"A fuss?"

"You know how they are."

"You mean they wouldn't want you to marry me?"

"It isn't that they don't like you, Jenny." Todd's hands tightened on the wheel.

"Then why should they raise a fuss? Don't they want you to get married?"

"No, it's not that exactly." Real impatience was in his voice now. "It's just—well you know how they felt about my marrying Liz. And Mr. Conover phoned wanting my answer about that job, and I wasn't there, and you know how Ma is; she got all excited, naturally. They all did."

"About what?"

"About the job. Ma got all worked up about Liz again, and got some crazy idea in her head about—" he broke off and glanced at Jenny anxiously. "This is no time to be talking about Liz, or any silly notions Ma has. In a few minutes we'll be married."

"Are you sure, Tod?" Jenny faltered.

"Sure I want to marry you?" He grinned at her, blue eyes quizzical.

She nodded, a funny lump coming into her throat.

"You silly kid." He brought the car to a stop in front of the faded red brick building with its dingy "Justice of the Peace" sign hanging above the doorway. "I wouldn't have asked you if I hadn't wanted you, would I?"

"No." She went into his arms for a moment, felt the urgency of his mouth on hers, his hand pressed against her throat. Suddenly all her doubts were dissolved.

The ceremony in the shabby garish parlor had neither dignity nor reality. Jenny always remembered the threadbare red carpet, the framed mottoes on the walls, the bouquet of dusty paper roses on the battered upright piano, the limp soiled lace curtanis at the windows.

Tod felt a lack too, and when they were back in the car he said, "I'm sorry it wasn't something better Jenny. We should have gone to a church and done it right."

Lodge Says Soviet Actively Assisting Korean Aggressors

Lists Ten Facts, Challenges Russia to Disprove Them

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., chief United States delegate, told the United Nations political committee today there was "little point" in the new UN Korean truce tries so long as the Kremlin-backed Reds were determined to continue the war.

Emphasizing that he spoke for a new Republican administration in Washington, Lodge charged that Russia is "actively assisting the aggressors in Korea on a scale which makes possible the continuance of that aggression and determines its scope."

He then listed 10 facts backing up this charge which he said the world must face [illegible] challenged Russia to disprove them.

Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky responded angrily:

"I take up the challenge which he flung and after study of the verbatim record I will answer the questions he asks."

"The rulers of the Soviet Union can stop the war whenever they want to," Lodge said in his first UN speech as chief U.S. delegate, "and Mr. Vishinsky knows it."

Driving home his point, Lodge said:

"Failure to end the fighting in Korea is not due to any lack of cleverness with words here in the United Nations. It is due to the frankly announced desire of the Communists to continue the war."

Lodge was the first speaker in the Korean debate after the committee decided without dissent to give that explosive item first place on its agenda.

Lodge called on the world to face these facts:

1. Soviet planning instigated the original aggression, which was subsequently maintained by Soviet training and equipment.
2. The North Korean forces were virtually destroyed in the fall of 1950 and later reappeared "reconstituted, reorganized and almost completely equipped with weapons of Soviet manufacture."
3. The flow of Soviet equipment is constant and steady and accounts for the increase of combat effectiveness of the enemy.
4. The Chinese Communists now are also supplied by Russia.
5. Naval mines off the Korean coast are of Soviet manufacture.
6. The Red planes used in Korea were manufactured in the Soviet Union.
7. A new Soviet plane, the IL-28, has been supplied to the Reds in Korea.
8. In spite of heavy losses the Reds in Korea now have 2,500 planes all supplied by Russia.
9. The Soviet Union replaces lost Communist planes in Korea.
10. Anti-aircraft guns used by the Communists in Korea are supplied by Soviet Union.

Immediate debate on the Korea issue was assured when a Soviet bloc spokesman backed a suggestion by Jaoa Carlos Muniz of Brazil to take it up at once.

Foreign Minister Stanislaw skrzesezewski of Poland told the 60-country political committee Korea was "the most complex, most crucial, most important issue facing us."

Munz, chairman of the committee and an influential voice in Western UN strategy huddles, proposed priority for Korea when the group met for the resumed seventh session of the general assembly.

Indian Chief Named Priest

SUDBURY (CP)—An Ojibway Indian chief was ordained as an Anglican priest Tuesday by Bishop W. L. Wright, of Algoma.

Chief Benaiswegeskik, whose Indian name means "Thundering Skies", will be known henceforth as Rev. Douglas Sissenah.

For more than 20 years he has been a lay reader in the Anglican church and chief councillor of the 600 Indians on the Spanish River reservation 75 miles west of here. He will continue to serve on the reservation.

Report 1,362,363 Visitors in 1952

TORONTO (CP)—For the seventh consecutive year, Ontario in 1952 was host to a record number of visitors.

The annual report of the department of travel and publicity, tabled in the Legislature Tuesday, showed cars entering the province at United States border points increased 20,000 to reach 1,362,363.

A summary of the year's business said this was achieved despite industrial unrest in the U.S., exchange problems, an embargo on meat imports, and a presidential election campaign which kept many would-be visitors at home.

The report said complaints about the discount on American currency were far less than expected. "Certain restrictive aspects" of the liquor laws and high prices were the object of most criticism.

Ontario Hydro Refund $30,143 For Belleville

TORONTO (CP) — Hydro chairman Robert Saunders said Tuesday that 276 Ontario municipalities will receive refunds totalling $1,879,780 from the hydro commission for over-payment of hydro rates in 1952.

He told a joint meeting of the Ontario Municipal Electric Association and the Association of Municipal Electrical Utilities that higher costs of power kept the 152 refunds below the amount paid back in 1951.

All 69 eastern Ontario municipalities will receive the rebate; 140 of the 179 Niagara system municipalities; all six of the Thunder Bay municipalities and 61 of the 65 Georgian Bay municipalities.

Municipalites listed by Mr Saunders included: Brantford, $39,066; Chatham, $13,459; Galt $25,952; Kitchener, $50,451; Sarnia, $58,624; Toronto, $228,749. Windsor, 63,971; Belleville, $30,143; Bowmanville, $25,636; Brockville $36,739; Kingston, $81,434; Lindsay, $29,599; Oshawa, $179,096; Ottawa, $96,560; Peterborough $64,611; Smiths Falls, $23,153; Owen Sound, $34,596; and Port Arthur $55,113.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO. (CP) — Synopsis: Pleasant mild weather continues over Southern Ontario today, although temperatures are a little cooler than the high forties recorded on Tuesday. In northern regions of the province temperatures are near the 38 mark, milder than normal for late February.

A weather disturbance extending from northern Manitoba to Colorado on this morning's weather map is moving rapidly eastward and will cause a band of snowflurries as it moves through Northern Ontario tonight and Thursday. In southern regions showers are forecast with the passage of this disturbance

OPPOSITION SAYS BUDGET DOES NOT HELP INDIVIDUALS

Investors, Corporations Only Assisted Is Claim

OTTAWA (CP)—Spokesmen for opposition groups in the Commons said Tuesday the government's 1953-54 budget will provide greater tax relief for corporations and investors than for individual taxpayers.

J. M. Macdonnell, chief financial critic for the Progressive Conservative Opposition, said 75 per cent of Canadian wage-earners will receive little or no benefit from income tax reductions in the budget.

M. J. Coldwell, CCF leader, said Finance Minister Abbott had presented the country with a "rich man's budget" Feb. 19.

Solon Low, Social Credit leader, said Mr. Abbott had allocated $120,000,000 out of a total of $250,000,000 in tax relief to corporations. Healthy corporations were needed but the accumulations of Canadian corporations since 1940 probably would top $6,000,000,000. He asked if Mr. Abbott did not think these adequate.

Mr. Macdonnell and Mr. Coldwell both moved motions of non-confidence in the government. Mr. Low was prevented by House rules from presenting a similar motion until later in the debate.

Will Collect More

In his motion, Mr. Macdonnell said the government plans to collect more in taxes than ever before. Yet it had taken "no effective steps" to deal with "waste, extravagance and administrative inefficiency;" to give tax relief "to those who need it most;" to offer encouragement to Canadian farmers; or to permit an independent inquiry into administration of the defence department.

Mr. Coldwell's motion noted that tax reductions were made retroactive to Jan. 1 for corporations but not for individuals; exemptions for corporations were doubled while those for individuals were unchanged; credits allowed to shareholders for dividends were doubled, but no comparable credits were given to those whose work produced the dividends.

Much-Married Tommy Manville Has 12th Licence

GREENWICH, Conn. (AP) — Much-married Tommy Manville today had his 12th wedding licence —to marry Mrs. Lillian Bishop Alvear, 29-year-old divorcee.

Early today Mrs. Juanita Patino, reported to police she found her twin sister Mrs. Anita Frances Roddy-Eden Manville, unconscious on the floor of Anita's fashionable New York apartment. Mrs. Patino said Anita, Manville's wife No. 9, had taken a sedative.

The 58-year-old asbestos heir and Mrs. Alvear, mother of two children, obtained the licence here yesterday after being turned down earlier at New Rochelle, N.Y.

The reason for the New Rochelle turndown was a suit brought at Juarez, Mex., by Anita, willowy blonde dancer and song writer, whom Manville married at New Rochelle, last July 10. Anita is seeking to invalidate a divorce she obtained at Reynosa, Mexico, last August, a month after the wedding.

Girl Plucked from Runaway Steed By Trucker as Horse Hurdles Gates

WILMINGTON, Mass. (AP) — A speeding train, lowered crossing gates, a quick-witted truck driver and a courageous 13-year-old girl astride a speeding horse figured in a hair-raising thriller Tuesday.

Sandra Dupras was plucked from her runaway steed by a speeding truck driver after the animal—in a five-mile dash—had hurdled the railroad gates in front of an oncoming train.

The wild dash of Sandra's horse began when a saddle strap broke, whipping the animal on at top speed.

The truck driver, Ernest R Burns, took off after the horse and rider. His pursuit was interrupted momentarily when the frightened steed bounded over the lowered crossing gates just before the train flew by.

Picking up pursuit again at 50 miles an hour, Burns overtook the horse and rider, after the animal had made another hurdle—over the hood of an automobile.

Finally he managed to get abreast of horse and rider, and, reaching out, snatched the girl from the tiring horse. Neither the truck driver nor the girl suffered a scratch.

Affairs of 1,250,000 Persons Under One Municipal Council Planned in Metropolitan Bill

TORONTO (CP) — A 40,000-word bill designed to end the disjoined growth of the Greater Toronto area was submitted to the Ontario legislature today.

The bill, termed "an immense document by Premier Frost would stablish a metropolitan council with sweeping powers over the basic community services of almost 1,250,000 persons, one-quarter of the province's population.

The legislation is the outcome of four years of study by government experts and hearings by provincial and municipal boards. Government expenses in connection with the bill total about $1,000,000.

With two major differences, the bill follows closely recommendations contained in a report last month of the Ontario municipal board drafted after a hearing on an application for amalgamation of Toronto and 12 adjoining municipalities.

The main functions of the council, which would come into effect Jan. 1, 1954, were outlined by the premier:

Overall Powers

1. Prepare and adopt an overall plan of metropolitan development, including public housing, water works, sewage treatment plants, arterial roads and metropolitan parks.
2. Provide public transportation for the area, incorporating the facilities of the Toronto transportation commission and any transportation companies operating in the suburbs whose services are considered necessary.
3. Equalize the property assessments in the area on a uniform basis and collect from the individual municipalities their proportionate shares of the total cost of the council's operation.
4. Assume all debentures outstanding against the municipalities for schools, sewage, water works, roads and other assets governed by the council.
5. Raise funds on the credit of the municipalities for any capital construction, such as schools or roads, within the fields controlled by the council.

The council would consist of 12 representatives of the city of Toronto and one each from the municipalities. They would be the mayor, two members of the board of control and nine aldermen from the city, and the mayor or reeve of each suburb. For the first year, a chairman would be appointed by the government. After that he would be elected from among the council.

This represents one of the major variations from the municipal board's report, which recommended an appointed council. The other difference was in the jurisdiction of school construction and maintenance.

The municipal board suggested that school policy should be directly governed by the council. This was criticized by the Ontario School Trustees Association, which said school policy should remain in the hands of elected trustees. The government's alternative is to set up a central board of education, controlling school planning throughout the area and operating with the council much the same as the system in effect in each of the municipalities. Separate schools would not be affected.

Former Belleville Resident Escorted from Massey Hall For Questioning 'Red' Dean

TORONTO (CP) — Rev. Hewlett Johnson, the "Red" dean of Canterbury, Tuesday night praised the Soviet Union before a Massey Hall audience of 2,700 persons, mostly members of the Canadian-Soviet Friendship Society and Communist sympathizers.

About 50 police outside the downtown auditorium forced University of Toronto students and other pedestrians to keep well back from the area.

Officials of the society stopped selling tickets early in the evening when it became apparent that many anti-Communists were trying to get into the meeting.

Batches of tickets were then smuggled out to the street through the back door and distributed only to those known to be sympathetic with the rally.

A police official said that a Communist strong-arm squad was inside the hall to make sure everything went off as planned. The previous night in London, Ont., the hecklers prevented Dr. Johnson from speaking.

Only twice did this squad go into action. The first time two engineering students who had managed to get tickets opened a side door of the hall and there was an onrush of students wishing to gain entrance.

The second time was when the dean was speaking of Russia's peaceful intentions. Farley Faulkner, a Toronto business man, stood up to object. Mr. Faulkner, a native of Belleville, is a son of the late Dr. J. A. Faulkner, former Ontario Minister of Health.

The squad pounced on him and also on several newsreel cameramen trying to get pictures of the scuffle. Although Mr. Faulkner objected he was escorted from the hall.

While the speeches were going on inside the hall, students equipped with sirens and cow bells lined up on the sidewalk opposite the hall and began throwing eggs.

They chanted: "We want Red," threw eggs at the front door, narrowly missing a policeman, then shouted "Go back to Russia." Police forced the students away from the area.

Conversion Cost Will be Greatly Above Estimates

TORONTO (CP)—Hydro chairman Robert Saunders said Tuesday conversion of urban areas from 25 to 0 cycles to the end of 1952 has cost hydro $104,454,871 plus $24,964,938 for equipment and materials on hand for future conversion work.

He told a joint meeting of the Ontario Municipal Electric Association and the Association of Municipal Electrical Utilities that the final cost will be substantially higher than the $191,000,000 predicted in 1948.

Reasons for the increase were greater population, increased costs of materials and labor and a higher standard of living reflected in the number of articles to be converted.

But Mr. Saunders also predicted that the accrued benefits of conversion during the next 20 years will pay for the total cost, whatever it may be.

Industrial consumers should save $38,000,000 in the next 10 years because of the lower cost of 60-cycle equipment, he said, and in the following 20 years the saving is estimated to be $250,000,000.

At the end of the conversion program about 1961, saving to municipal and rural systems in the capital cost of generation, distribution, transmission and transformation would be $60,000,000 and a further $270,000,000 in the following 20 years.

W. E. Honey of Waterford criticized what he called different policies for paying for the conversion. After Mr. Saunders said costs of the rural frequency standardization amounting to $517,032 have already been recovered out of rural rates, Mr. Honey said: "Rural people are subsidizing the urban conversion. There's one policy for the rural program and another for the urban centres.

Outlaw Communists

ATLANTA. (AP)—The Georgia legislature Tuesday passed a bill which outlaws members of the Communist party and any other persons who engage in subversive activities. The bill sets March 1 as the deadline for anyone now belonging to a subversive organization to resign or leave the state. Violation of this particular section of the bill carries a fine of not more than $5,000 or imprisonment up to five years, or both.

PLAN $50,000,000 IRON PROJECT IN STEEP ROCK AREA

Inland Steel Announces Northern Ont. Program

By FORBES RHUDE
Canadian Press Business Editor

TORONTO (CP) — Inland Steel Company of Chicago, eighth-largest steel company in the world, today stepped decisively into development of iron ore in the Steep Rock Lake area of Northwestern Ontario.

It stepped in with an initial seven-year $50,000,000 program through a Canadian subsidiary, Caland Ore Co., Ltd., which has leased properties from Steep Rock Iron Mines, Ltd., a producer in the area since 1944.

Announcement of the agreement was made in Toronto by M. S. Fotheringham, president of Steep Rock, and in Chicago by Philip Block, vice-president of Inland. It follows more than three years' examination of the properties by Inland and lengthy negotiations which saw Inland take up more property than it had originally optioned.

Under the 99-year agreement, Inland will pay Steep Rock royalties based on a percentage of the ore which Inland ships.

Inland will pay Steep Rock $8,000,000 at once as an advance on royalties. Inland will get a reduction in the amount of royalties in the earlier years of production until the sum is taken care of.

The amount of the royalties was not announced. However, they are described as "substantially higher than the average royalties for high-grade ore."

This is interpreted as meaning more than $1 a ton, possibly considerably more.

The amount of the "early-year" royalty reduction to take care of the $8,000,000 advance is understood to be relatively small.

The advance is without obligation on the part of Steep Rock. If, by any chance, Inland's leases don't go into production, Steep Rock has no obligation to return the advance. And the agreement provides that if the leases are not in production by 1960, Inland will pay a certain minimum amount to Steep Rock.

Lease covers 1,200 acres in the Falls Bay area of Steep Rock Lake and is known as the C ore body.

It is one of several large bodies made accessible since 1943 through diversion of the Seine river, and dewatering of the lake.

Inland plans to continue drilling and exploration this winter and the first phase of mining operations will be removal of overburden. Inland expects a shipping volume of 3,000,000 tons annually when full-production is achieved.

Steep Rock Mines has been producing from its B ore body in the middle section of the former lake since 1944 and, in addition, is developing a large A ore body and a newly-discovered G body. In 1952, Steep Rock shipped 1,275,000 tons of ore and it aims ultimately at 10,000,000 tons or more annually.

Police Trap Catches Suspect Selling Bonds in $150,000 Loot

MONTREAL (AP) — A well-dressed man who tried to cash some negotiable bonds in a bank here was held today by [illegible] for questioning in connection [illegible] $150,000 Remembrance Day robbery of a bank of Nova Scotia branch at Maxville, Ont., in 1948.

They took him into custody Tuesday at the Sherbrooke street-Decarie Boulevard branch of the Royal Bank of Canada when suspicious accountants turned in an alarm because they thought he tallied with the description of a man who cashed bonds with a forged signature in another branch Monday.

Henry Woods, special investigator for the Canadian Bankers Association, told reporters later that the man had fallen into a rap laid more than a month ago by the association and Montreal police in co-operation with city banks. He did not elaborate.

Police declined to say how much money was involved in the bonds, beyond saying it was "very high," but said they expected other arrests would follow.

In the Maxville robbery, four men broke into the bank branch and used acetylene torches to crack the vault and safety deposit boxes. They were reported to have fled by car to this city, 75 miles east of the Ontario town.

Bank officials said the man arrested Tuesday approached accountants C. G. Mackenzie and H. E. Turner and, speaking with a French accent, asked them to cash some bonds. They referred him to manager R. I. Findlater, meantime touching off the bank's police alarm.

Though the man produced identification papers, Mr. Findlater noticed that the serial number of one bond corresponded with one of the Maxville bonds. As Mr. Findlater turned to telephone bank investigators, the man fled only to be caught by the manager before he could escape. Police then arrived and took him to headquarters.

Belleville Gets $2.50 Per Capita Under New Plan

No Strings Attached To Spending by Councils

TORONTO (CP)—Premier Frost today introduced a bill in the Ontario legislature to give municipalities a $9,000,000 increase in grants. But he injected a word of caution that the province's generosity has about reached its limit.

The bill was submitted along with two others repealing the police and fire department grants, under which municipalities last year received $3,573,000.

The new grants, to be paid on a per capita basis, would total about $12,000,000 and could be spent any way the municipalities wanted. The existing grants are specifically for expenditures on police and fire departments.

"From the very beginning the fire and police grants have been criticized as an infringement of local autonomy and as a subject properly to be financed by local taxation," the premier said.

"The new grants to begin in 1954 may be used by each municipality for any purpose suited to its local needs. There will be no inspection or regulation by the province and no strings of any kind attached."

The additional grants would raise the province's total contribution to municipalities in assistance of all kinds to about $130,000,000, more than 40 per cent of the government's revenue.

"There is a limit to our capacity to go on increasing these grants without imposing additional taxation," the premier said. "And I am sure everyone will agree this is not the time to increase taxation."

The new grants would be paid on a graduated scale, with the largest communities getting the largest per capita aid. A town of under 2,000, for instance, would receive $1.50 for each person. The Toronto metropolitan area, if it becomes unified as the government proposes, would receive a $4 per capita contribution.

The premier said the scale was devised because larger municipalities pay more in proportion to their population for welfare services than small communities. In many cases small towns receiving a lower rate would benefit more. When a community's population rose seven per cent it would be given an adjustment in the rate.

The scale proposed for cities, towns and villages and townships:

For cities of more than 750,000 population, $4 per capita; 400,000 to $750,000, $3.50; 200,000 to 400,000 $3.00; 75,000 to 200,000, $2.75; 75,000 and under, $2.50.

For towns and villages more than 10,000, $2.25; 7,000 to 10,000 $2.00; 5,000 to 7,000, $1.75; 2,000 to 5,000, $1.60; 2,000 and under $1.50.

For townships more than 20,000, 15,000 to 20,000, $2.00; 1,000 to 15,000, $1.85; 5,000 to 10,000, $1.75; 2,000 to 5,000, $1.60; 2,000 and under $1.5.

Swindler May Get 501 Years

MINEOLA, N.Y., (AP) — A business woman, accused of swindling a Mineola bank of $478,000, pleaded guilty Tuesday to 50 counts of forgery and a single count of conspiracy. She faces a possible maximum sentence of 501 years.

The woman, Mrs. Lillian B. Robinson, 47, entered her plea as she and three other persons, including the bank's former president, were called to trial.

Resorts Protest Lack of Grading

TORONTO. (CP)— The Ontario Association of Tourist Resorts Monday adopted a resolution protesting Premier Frost's cancellation of the star system of grading for Ontario tourist accommodation. It asked the system be kept in force.

The motion said association members are "disappointed" with the scrapping of the system. It said that members were consulted before the grading system was established and that operation of the system for the first year was "most satisfactory."

The premier said he decided to abolish the system because the province might be held responsible in case of fire, for instance, in premises approved by provincial authorities.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., (AP)—Eugene Lloyd Morrell, 18, escaped from the federal correctional institution Tuesday. Four hours later he flagged down a car and asked for a ride. Local Engineers Hear Advice On Wise Investment

Members of the professional development course of the Belleville Branch of the Engineering Institute of Canada were hosts Monday night at an open meeting to all branch members, held in the Kiwanis Centre.

The speaker for the evening was Colonel Arthur A. Bell, Toronto broker, who gave an enlightening address on Personal Investment Policies for the Young Engineer.

Col. Bell regretted that Canadian firms appear to lack the foresight to invest in development of Canadian natural resources with the result that development is being undertaken by outside firms. The speaker stated that everyone today should have funds available unless they make commitments beyond their means. Among the rewards from these savings are elimination of worry of losing job, independence of mind and opportunity to lead a better cultural life.

The main factors to consider before investing money, said Col. Bell, are general soundness of the industry, management of the concern, record of earnings over several years, competition, vulnerability to government action (tariffs' etc.), current financial position, and market ability. The best source of advice on these factors is a reputable broker.

Col. Bell spoke briefly on speculation, mining and oil stocks, investment trusts and new issues. Col. Bell reminded the group that it was each individual's responsibility to play his full part in the politics of our country to see that non-desirable factions do not gain control and thus jeopardize our freedom to invest as we see fit.

A lively discussion period followed in which the speaker clarified many points brought up by the Engineers.

Col. Bell was introduced by T. E. Flinn and thanked by Alan Argue.

Camera Club Holds Meeting

The regular monthly meeting of the Belleville Camera Club was held at the Corby Public Library recently with a good attendance.

Bill McCormick opened the meeting, his subject being, "What is a Picture?" This was the first of a series of talks on "How to take a picture" and developed into a most constructive and informative discussion.

The second feature of the evening was a talk by Johannes Holmboe on "color photography", explaining the various types of color films with their respective merits and demerits. Mr. Holmboe's remarks on the different types of films were borne out further with illustrations of his own transparencies.

All members joined with great gusto in the ensuing "any questions period." From this, much useful information was gained.

The meeting ended with the showing of the Canadian General Electric film "Family Album", featuring lighting techniques for home photography.

The next monthly meeting is scheduled for March 20th which will be an exhibition of members' photographs.

Leading Airwoman Audrey Atkinson On Way to France

From the shores of the river Moira to the beaches of Normandy is slightly over 3,500 miles, and at noon today, a young local woman left the city on the first lap of this journey. Miss Audrey Atkinson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter H. Atkinson, 186 Station Street, is scheduled to embark aboard the luxury liner, "Ascania" on Sunday for France. Leading Airwoman Atkinson is part of a contingent of 50 airwomen, which will be the first group of R.C.A.F. women to serve overseas since the war.

The 22-year-old airwoman enlisted in the R.C.A.F. in August of 1951. On enlistment she was sent to manning depot at St. John's, Quebec, for an eight-week period. Following this, she was posted to R.C.A.F. Station, Clinton, (40 miles from London, Ontario), where she began a three-month course. Graduating from the teletype school at Clinton, Miss Atkinson was transferred to the R.C.A.F. station at Rockcliffe, near Ottawa, where she has remained until this time.

On January 29, Miss Atkinson began 30 days furlough, 14 days of it was embarkation leave and the other 16 days was left from her 30-day annual for 1952. She will be eligible for another 30 days after the first of April and expects to return home to Canada at that time. When asked how she planned to get home L.A.W. Atkinson said, "fly . . . what's the use of being in the Air Force if you can't fly."

Worked at N.E.

The young airwoman attended Queen Mary School and Belleville Collegiate Institute. On leaving school she worked for some time with the Northern Electric and later was employed as a switchboard operator at the Trenton R.C.A.F. station.

On Thursday, she must report to the embarkation officer at Lachine, P.Q., for final documentation and lectures, which particularly emphasizes conditions and customs where the airwomen will be stationed.

Later she will leave with the rest of the contingent on February 28, for Halifax and embarkation on the first of March.

The R.C.A.F. began recruiting women for active service in July 1950, and now has more than 3,000 officers and airwomen engaged in over 30 varied trades. During the Second World War, more than 17,000 women served with the R.C.A.F., 1,300 of these served overseas.

Leading Airwoman Audrey Atkinson will be stationed with the R.C.A.F. No. 2 Fighter Wing, stationed at Grostenquin in Normandy. It is expected a second contingent will leave later in March to serve at Air Division Headquarters at Metz, France.

Some shanty fishermen have heeded nature's warning. Black looking ice has extended from the river well out into the bay and part of the large fishing village is sitting on the rotting surface, wasting away under a strengthening sun and above freezing temperatures.

Tourney Opens Friday

The annual Central Ontario Badminton tournament gets underway here at the sports' hangar at the Trenton Air Station at 7 p.m. Friday night with teams from nine centres competing in both singles and doubles competition. The meet winds up on Saturday night with an added attraction featuring men over 40 in doubles play. The prizes will be presented in the recreation centre.

Belleville's racquet club is sending 24 players to the tourney.

Distemper Reported

Dog owners have been warned to keep a close eye on their pets while more than the usual number of distemper cases have been reported for this time of the year. Changeable weather is blamed for the spread of virus infection among canines.

The first stages of the dreaded disease causes the victim to cough in spasms. In the last stages violent shaking and shivering gives the animal considerable stress.

Some dogs are known as "carriers" and infect other dogs on contact.

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP) — Trading slowed slightly in forenoon stock market dealings today and prices slipped a little.

The penny boom continued, however, and volume for the first hour totalled 1,573,000 shares, slightly below Tuesday's first-hour volume.

Low-priced mining issues forming the bulk of the trading weakened slightly. The market generally showed minor losses. Industrials, base metals and western oils each dropped less than half a point on the exchange indexes while golds held firm.

Saskatchewan uranium prospects and New Brunswick base metals turned lower. Gunnar, a uranium leader dropped 75 cents and New Larder U, the most active trader, moved 122,000 shares to lose 10 cents. Northern Ontario rare metal prospects weakened.

Industrials weakened on losses in papers, steels and foods. Higher-priced base metals gained and Western Oils showed a majority of small losses. Senior golds showed a few moderate gains.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO (CP) — Early cattle sales were steady today at the Ontario stockyards. No sheep or lambs were received. Receipts: cattle 270; calves 50; hogs 300; holdover from Tuesday, 350 cattle.

Legion Members Recently Visit Sister Branches

The members of the Belleville Branch of the Canadian Legion recently visited two sister branches in this zone. Last Thursday evening, a party of legionnaires, accompanied by their wives, carried the friendship bell to the Deseronto Branch. Friday evening another group journeyed to Consecon to spend an evening with the Quinte Branch.

On both visits, the local branch enjoyed pleasant social evenings. President William Bailey of the Belleville Branch presented the friendship bell to the Deseronto branch president, A. F. McVicker on Thursday night.

The friendship bell was fashioned from metal taken from a German bomber, which crashed during World War II and was donated to Zone F-3 of the Canadian Legion. According to a pre-arranged plan, the bell was to be passed from branch to branch and each time the presentation of the bell to another club was made, a social evening was to be held with the receiving branch acting as host.

Lauds Influence Of Weekly Press

OTTAWA (CP) — Associate Defence Minister Ralph Campney said Tuesday night he believes weekly newspapers exert greater influence on their readers than dailies.

The newly - appointed minister from Vancouver Centre spoke at the semi-annual meeting of the board of directors of the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association.

Mr. Campney, after reciting the duties of members of Parliament, said weeklies can do much to make Canadians appreciate the work of the average member, because "they are closer to their readers."

"Of course," he added, "daily newspapers perform a very necessary and useful function too. But like the radio while broadly informative and a part of all our lives today — they are nevertheless impersonal and apart.

"It is the local newspaper which really makes friends and influences people."

INFLATION PROBLEM

THE HAGUE (Reuters) — Holland is not anxious to accept a U.S. flood relief offer of $52,700,000, because of the danger of inflation, Finance Minister J. van de Kieft told parliament Tuesday night. "We must be extremely careful of inflationary tendencies. The government will consider very seriously before accepting the offer," he said.

PRODUCE MARKET

TORONTO (CP) — Churning cream and butter print prices were unchanged today.

The egg market was steady and prices were unchanged in quiet trading. Quotations for graded eggs in fibre cases were: A large 47; A medium 45; A small 43; grade B 40; grade C 37. Wholesale to retail: A large 52; A medium 50; A small 48; grade B 45; grade C 42.

OPPOSITION SAYS

Mr. Low said the income tax reductions are meagre and not effective until July. There was no guarantee they would not be increased again next year if the Liberal government were returned to power in a general election.

Timed for Election

Mr. Macdonnell said the government timed the tax reductions - - an election, expected later this year. However, voters would find little to cheer about after studying the budget.

Under new income tax rates a married man with two dependents and an annual income of $5,000 would be $18 better off. A man with $3,000 would be $4 better off and a man with $2,400 would receive the "magnificent relief of $1 a year," said Mr. Macdonnell.

The majority of income-taxpayers earned less than $3,000 a year.

He welcomed as "long overdue" the $97,000,000 reduction in corporation taxes and abolition of the $2.50 annual licence fee on radios.

Far greater tax reductions could have been provided, said Mr. Macdonnell.

In general terms, we in our party say that if a sharp economy ax was used instead of a blunt pen-knife we could have relief for those who are to benefit under the present budget and also for those who have been ignored."

Mr. Coldwell said his party believes most Canadians would gladly give up the "few minor concessions" in the budget for a country-wide health insurance program.

Could Use Differently

"The reductions in taxes given to corporations and shareholders," Mr. Coldwell said, "could have been used to promote this program, thereby assisting . . . Canadians from one end of the country to the other."

The outside total of reductions for Canadians making $5,000 or less in 1953-54 would be $75,500,000. The wealthier would receive reductions amounting to $167,500,000, or a proportion of about 70 to 30 in their favor.

The principle of taxation in accordance with ability to pay had been applied in reverse by Mr. Abbott.

"There has been no reduction in the general sales (10 per cent) and special excise (15 per cent) taxes which bear so oppressively on the lower-income groups," Mr. Coldwell said.

Riding War Horse

Mr. Low, former finance minister in the Alberta Social Credit government, said Mr. Abbott has been "riding a war horse since 1950." That horse had "taken him and the country with him to a false prosperity, one that is based on rotten foundations."

"I would be interested in knowing how well the minister could ride a peacetime nag," Mr. Low said.

He challenged Mr. Abbott to say how he would handle the situation if peace suddenly came in Korea.

"Just what specific program would the minister follow to distribute the extra $2,000,000,000 worth of consumer goods that could surely be made available to the people in Canada if peace comes:"

City Will Get $8,500 More Under Frost's Grant Plan

Payment of provincial grants into the general fund rather than having grants designated for a particular purpose will mean more careful handling of the tax-payers' money, Alderman Charles Hyde stated today.

The observation was made by the city finance chairman after his learning of Premier Frost's announcement that provincial fire and police grants, starting in 1954, would be on a per capita basis with no strings attached.

"When provincial grants are designated for a particular purpose there is a tendency to overspend," Alderman Hyde pointed out. "I think the change will be a good thing. Also we will get a bit more in grants."

In 1952 the city received a total of $40,671 from the province in police and fire grants. Under the new system announced by Premier Frost the city would receive $2.50 per capita. Based on a population of 19,600, the provincial grant for Belleville would amount to $49,000 annually. This would be an increase of approximately $8,500 over that received last year.

Brother Kenneth Lawson, Edmonton, Grand Exalted Ruler of the Elks Lodge, who made his annual visit Tuesday to Belleville Elks.

Expect Early Opening Of Lake Navigation

DETROIT (AP) — Ice conditions on the Great Lakes indicate an early opening of the navigation season, the U. S. weather bureau reported Tuesday.

W. W. Oak, chief of the bureau, said "opening dates of navigation at the lower lakes ports will probably be governed by operators' convenience and desire rather than ice conditions."

Winnipeg Man Jumps to Death

WINNIPEG (CP)—A 22-year-old man jumped to his death from the eighth floor of the downtown grain exchange Monday.

The man, a recent inmate of the Selkirk, Man., mental home whom police refused to identify, slipped to his death from the grasping fingers of a would-be rescuer. It was his first day on a new job at the exchange.

The falling body narrowly missed a pedestrian.

Alex H. Jack of Winnipeg, manager of the federal grain company, said he entered the lavatory on the eighth floor and saw the man perched on the window sill.

"What the heck are you doing?" said Jack.

"I'm just going out," was the reply.

Jack said he shouted to him and seized the man's hand as he pitched forward but the window fell squarely on his fingers and his grip was broken.

Police said no inquest will be held.

SALUTE TO A WORTHY CAUSE

All across Canada, this week is being observed as VON Week. Unlike so many "weeks" sponsored by interests of various kinds throughout the year this one comes without any special appeal for financial help. It is a week devoted to informing the public about the work that the VON is doing.

To countless thousands of Canadians, of course, the work of the Victorian Order of Nurses is a familiar story and one that many of them have personal reasons to remember. As a home nursing service it has been functioning in Canada since 1897. It is the only service of this kind that is national in its scope. In Belleville it has been a community institution for almost three decades.

For all its long years of home nursing activities, in good times and in bad for more than half a century, it appears as a striking fact that the work of the VON has never been of more importance than in recent years. Lack of adequate hospital accommodation on a national scale has been a serious problem. That it would have been a much more serious one but for the services of the VON to thousands in their own homes has been recognized by health authorities.

Nursing care is, of course, the chief function of the VON and at a time when hospitals are crowded and private nurses are extremely hard to secure this service has become invaluable. Home care includes nursing service for medical and surgical patients, convalescents, cases of the chronically ill and the aged, and maternity patients.

Not only does this sort of care relieve the strain on the hospitals but also on the family purse. And VON services are available to all Canadians regardless of race, color, creed or financial status. Last year it was responsible for almost a million home visits in providing care for 135,000 patients.

Nationally more than half of its cases are maternity and newborn. In Belleville last year cases of this kind were 62 per cent of the total. To meet the needs here there is a full-time staff of three nurses and part-time nurses are called upon when they are needed. During 1952 the local VON took care of 537 patients which required 3,861 home nursing visits.

In addition to these heavy demands the Belleville staff devoted time to the child welfare clinics and is still assisting with school nursing under the direction of the local public health department In all this work the VON operates on a cost basis in making its charges for services, but as the primary object is to meet home nursing care needs under all circumstances the cost of care to the patient is adjusted to the ability to pay.

The Victorian Order of Nurses is doing a worthy work throughout Canada and it is giving conspicuous service to this community. In its 29th. year in service in Belleville the VON has won countless friends who salute it in this week of national recognition.

NO TOLL HIGHWAYS?

Ontario highways have been built without tolls being imposed, was a statement made a few days ago to a Good Roads convention in Toronto. It is a statement to which The Financial Post takes pointed exception.

The Post figures that Ontario motorists are paying a toll of at least half a cent for every mile they travel in this province by way of gasoline tax. There may be very sound arguments against the introduction here of the new system of toll roads which is expanding so rapidly in the U.S., says the Post, but adds, " . . . don't let us fool ourselves about how we pay for our own highways. If the nine to fifteen cents per gallon which the motorist pays in provincial gasoline tax is not a toll for road use, then what is it?"

DOUBTFUL ESTIMATE OF TV AUDIENCE

A statistical survey organization has announced that on January 1, 1953, there were 248,000 television receiving sets in use in Canada. The survey report allocated them to various regions as follows:

Toronto, Hamilton, Niagara Falls, 132,000; Windsor, Chatham, Sarnia, 62,000; Montreal and Ottawa, 42,000; London, Woodstock, St. Thomas, 7,000; Belleville, Kingston, Brockville, 2,000; Vancouver, Victoria, 2,200; the rest of Canada, 1,200.

This purports to be a survey taken less than two months ago across the country. The most casual check this week in Belleville reveals that for this area at least the figures are far from correct. With dealers' sales as a gauge it is estimated than in this city and immediate vicinity alone upwards of 2,500 TV sets have been sold. This figure is well above the survey's estimate for the districts of Kingston, Brockville and Belleville combined.

Sales since the first of the year have not been extraordinarily heavy in volume so it would appear that survey figure of 248,000 sets for all of Canada falls far short of the actual number of sets now in use in Canada. In view of the fact that this report came from a reputable statistical research firm, it should be of interest to CBC officials to know that the range of television reception is far beyond that indicated by the figure of 248,000 sets. Furthermore it is steadily increasing.

DOING THINGS WORTH WHILE

This is doing things worth while—
Meeting people with a smile,
Being cheerful, keeping true,
Doing what you find to do,
Planting roses at your gate,
Walking head-erect and straight,
Being helpful when you can
To a troubled fellow-man.

You don't need the stamp of fame
Or its lustre on your name
To be truly useful here;
You can serve in any sphere,
Be it high or humble post;
Serving where you're needed most,
You can always play the friend,
Staunch and faithful to the end.

If the old red, white and blue
Has a loyal friend in you,
If the ones who know you best
Find you faithful to the test,
If within the home you keep,
There is little cause to weep.
If you help the world to smile,
You are doing things worth while.

Fat Cat Fed Sundays, Too

(London News Statesman)

Hundreds of people who arrive at Charing Cross underground between 7.30 and 9.30 in the morning are familiar with "Dirty Dick." He is an extremely dirty white spotted cat. He is also very fat and more ugly than any cat with whom I have ever been on stroking terms.

He usually sits on a small wall edging the Villiers street side of the Embankment Gardens, and receives parcels of food and kindly words from sentimental Londoners. First he is fed by the coffee stall where night revellers eat their final snacks; then he is presented with bits of food by early morning workers who put their offerings a little higher up the street; finally, when the clerical and typist army arrives, admirers add more bits of breakfast in paper bags.

Wandering out for a morning newspaper, I have often watched this process, but it was not until last week that it occurred to me to ask how Dirty Dick managed at the week-ends. I learned it from a stout and friendly old dame who sells flowers across the road.

She had a neat little parcel with a Lyons label when we called on her on Saturday evening. No, she said, that wasn't her bit of supper, but 11 pennyworth of fish which a lady, who fed Dirty Dick every morning during the week, bought and left with her to give him before she went home on Saturday nights.

Much interest, she said, centred round Dirty Dick. She watched a man who left food every morning, and there was a girl, too. She thought they had become acquainted as a result of their joint interest in Dirty Dick. The man was apt to loiter a little before putting down his bag, and the girl was also careful to time her arrival.

The flower-lady scented romance. She herself had grown fond of Dirty Dick, and then she added, "Do you hear that blackbird? I have been listening to him for the past three years. He sings louder than the traffic, louder than the trains at Charing Cross, even louder than the band on a summer evening; the only thing I'd never forgive Dirty Dick would be if he hurt that blackbird."

And there are people who walk through Charing Cross as if it were no more than a collection of houses and streets!

Who, Indeed?

(Winnipeg Free Press)

Writing in the Financial Post, Mr. B. K. Sandwell, with his usual wit and clarity makes the following comment on the recent announcement from Edmonton that Albreat now has more stock exchanges than any other province in the country: "Who would have predicted when Aberhart came to power in 1935 that in 1953 Alberta would have one third of all the stock exchanges in Canada?"

Break the Pots

(St. Louis Post-Dispatch)

The newspapermen accompanying Harry Truman home to Independence were so baffled by an expression of his that they had to send a note requesting clarification. What he said was that perhaps the home folks at his return would "put the big pot in the little one and break them both." We are amazed that the corespondents did not know what he meant. This is ancient and well-recognized Mid-western idiom for outdoing yourself.

Will be Poise

(Guelph Mercury)

One must have grace and dignity to wear the new frocks effectively, says a fashion expert. Well, poise will be poise.

Printers' Gremlins

(Cleveland Plain Dealer)

Reporters, editors, printers and proofreaders lead lives that are haunted by those gremlins that get into the channels of linotype magazines and put "ts" where "es" ought to be and play all sorts of tricks, regrettable and ribald, with proper names and common nouns. It has been known that some people keep little scrap books with such blunders pasted up and the book, quite appropriately, bears the title of a bad odor.

One of the greatest collection of gremlin-inspired typos, as these errors are called, was produced lately by the Tanganyika Standard, the English language weekly printed in Tanganyika colony in Africa.

It seems that the reports of a meeting of the Caledonia Society and an anniversary gathering of the local Rotary Club were printed in the same issue. The president of the society, which honors Robert Burns, addressed his fellow members on the works of the "immoral bard." True, there was some question about Burns' capers but you don't mention them before a Caledonia Society — except that, according to the Standard, this was not a society but a "Soviety."

It was with some amazement no doubt, that subscribers read of the antics of the Rotarians on this occassion which, according to the Standard, "was made still more gay by the many Rotary Club members on the tables from practically all over the world." We have heard of people at some gatherings being under the tables but "on the tables" is puzzling until you realize that Rotarians just don't do this sort of thing and it finally comes out that the word "emblems" must be substituted for "members."

Oh, well, it all adds up to the gaiety of nations, not to say confusion, and it is comforting to know that printers' gremlins inhabit Africa as well as North America.

Danish Tramps Put to Work

(Windsor Star)

A social document of minor importance could be in the making in Denmark, where a rubber sole manufacturer hopes to harness the energy of some tramps. Nothing exhaustive in the way of effort is planned. All the tramps need do is amble about 20 miles a day, wearing the producer's rubber soles.

For this service they are to be paid about $30 a week, with a food allowance as an added consideration.

If the Danish nomads were described as hoboes rather than tramps, this experiment would stand a fair chance of success. The hobo simply is a loose-footed fellow, who will work if he must. The tramp has a chronic aversion to work.

Whether a tramp can be bribed to walk 20 miles a day for any considerable time is, therefore, doubtful. There is the added chance that he would find any kind of decent footwear intolerable.

His own slashed shoes, held together with strings, have served him as well as he cares; and any infringement on that familiar discomfort might well be more than he'd care to accept, at any price.

Then there's the problem of tracking a tramp all day, to measure the distance he covers. Perhaps the manufacturer should put his rubber soles on the trackers and forget the tramps. That procedure also would roll up the social document, which probably wouldn't be very interesting, anyway.

Still Misquoted

(Chatham Daily News)

The Finnish Parliament uses a tape recorder with 70 microphones to record what the members actually say. We suppose they'll still claim they were misquoted.

'Beguile Us With Errors'

(Montreal Gazette)

Daily newspapers are "the most perishable of commodities," Gerard Fillon, editor of Le Devoir told the Chambre de Commerce de Montreal.

"Science has discovered various ways of conserving food, but not the daily newspaper. It is hardly born but it is old. Editions are like generations, the young driving the old to the grave."

He described the daily as the triumph of improvisation and the crowning achievement of speed.

Pressure on newspapers comes, be went on, not from advertisers but from readers who ask editors, as the Israelites asked Isaiah, "to beguile us with pleasant errors.

"It is rarely the people criticize errors; it's only the truth that they ask us to retract."

Strange Surnames

Letters in London Times

Sir,— Can any county claim more curious surnames than Essex? Pitchfork, Slybody, Devil, Lies, Hogsflesh, Sweetname, Juglery, Hollowbone, Stillborne, Fidge, Padge, Beatup, Wildgoose, and Whiskey are a few in the county archives that would certainly have interested Dickens.

As for the names adopted during the Puritan revolution, there can surely be none so odd as those found in the Sussex registers.

In 1632 Master Performethy-Vowes Seers, of Maresfield, married Thomasine Edwards; when his death was recorded his name had then been abbeviated to Vowes-Seers. A Heathfield wench was named More-record Standfast-on-high Stringer, of Crowhurst; Weepnot Billing, of Lewis; Fight-the-good-fight-of-faith White, of Ewhurst; Kill-sin Pemble of Withyam.

Aytoun Ellis.

Lewes, Sussex.

—Sir,— It is probable that all counties have their share of curious surnames, but Surrey must almost equal Sussex in its collection. Among those still extant in Surrey are Enticknap, Earwicker, Lanfear, Madgwick, and Windibank.

Sussex, however, has more than Mr. Ellis has found. Others are Leper, Dynot, Breathing, Handshut, Rougehead, Keilthy, Harness and Mepphom. Other Puritan names are The-Peace-of-God Knight, of Burwash, and Redeemed Compton, of Battle.

Good News For Seals

(St. John's (Nfld.) News)

With only three ships going to the ice this spring, a small sealfishery is in sight and flippers, by which the Newfoundland gourmet sets such great store, will be tragically scarce and very probably a delicacy of great price.

The trouble is that at the moment the demand for seal oil and pelts is not very strong. Outfitting a sealer is a gamble even when prices are high. It is too much of a gamble for the average shipowner when values are down and sales prospects low.

The curious thing is that there is still a shortage in the world of fats and oils but the people who want them just do not have the means of paying for them.

Thus an industry that is a Newfoundland tradition becomes a victim of the anomalous situation that now exists in international trade. The seals of course will welcome the respite and another year may bring better prospects for the seal hunters.

Strength for the Day

INDIFFERENCE AT HOME

Those of us who look back over a lifetime in the Christian ministry recall what a struggle it always was to get people out to prayer meeting. We would announce, emphasize, plead, garnish the meeting with eloquent outside speakers, and still only a handful turned out.

In every Christian Church in South Korea today the bells of the church ring at 5:30 in the morning. In every one of these churches a prayer meeting begins at 6:00 a.m. and the churches are jammed to capacity.

A terrified running for shelter when the heavens being to rain fire? Blubbering before the throne of God when the executioner stands with upraised sword? Well, only God Himself knows all the factors which draw those people into these churches every morning. There is undoubtedly a mixture of motives, some good, some bad. But we can be assured that people who are seeking God because a pistol is placed at their heads are better off spiritually than the great mass of indifferent people in our own peaceful and comfortable land who scarcely give God a thought from one year's end to another.

How can such people believe that they will have any part in a great eternal enterprise which means so much to God that He permitted the sacrifice of His own Son on the cross, that this enterprise might be established and its consummation made possible?

Personal Health Talks

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

DO YOU LET YOUR CHILD THINK?

"Oh, I couldn't tell my father and mother; they'd have a fit if I even mentioned it. They wouldn't understand."

"Our daughter doesn't confide in us. We never know what she's doing, or even what she's thinking about."

Unless our children can tell us honestly what they think and feel, without fear of disapproval and condemnation, they will have little need for us.

If we wish them to respect our opinions and ideals, we must set the pattern by respecting theirs. Although we may find their attitudes idiotic, immortal, communistic, ridiculous, or even dangerous, we nevertheless must defend their right to have and to utter such ideas. Unless, that is, we want to lose their confidence in our understanding and friendship. If we do not listen, there will always be someone who will.

"Well, but," you hastily bristle, "My son has no business taking such attitudes. Besides, he's only a child and it's my duty to teach him proper attitudes."

If your son is a Mortimer Snerd, yes, you can hand him pre-packaged attitudes. But then, if you can, so can any other effective propogandist. What then?

The most effective response you can make, after having heard him out with quiet receptivity, is to place before him for his consideration, with humble respect:

First, your own ideals and attitudes, stated with kindness and conviction, not argumentatively.

Second, the teachings of great men and women down through the ages, by means of literature, music, and the arts.

Third, the practical, visible examples of effective living in your own community — Mrs. Smith, Mr. Jones, Dr. Whoozis, Miss Whatsis.

In this way you have not ridiculed or gagged your child, or made him feel sorry he spoke to you. You have listened to him the way you hope he will listen to you, with care, with consideration for his dignity. He can go on expressing his ideas to you, "confiding" in you. You will know what he is thinking.

You never can tell. You may learn a great deal if you listen. ou may learn how to listen to your wife, your husband, your boss, your employee.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

ARE YOU LONELY?

Loneliness is largely a state of mind, and one for which an early remedy should be prescribed. It is a natural condition, common to us all, but one that can be overcome. I often think of Thoreau and the crude little cabin he built at the edge of Walden Pond. In this isolated spot he lived, wrote, observed, and was supremely happy for two years, producing a book that has become a world classic—"Walden." Apparently he was never lonely.

People with a multitude of interests and personal loves rarely get lonely. They are too much out of themselves. In books and the world of nature they see something of themselves reflected and they are intrigued to search and find. Excitement stimulates incentive and initiative, and they keep making new discoveries. And so they have no time in which to be lonely!

Go into the large reading room of a great library and note the bowed heads, in silence absorbing the thoughts of the great of this earth. No loneliness to be noted in such a place. Anyone with at least one good book near at hand can immediately dismiss all loneliness. Or go out into the world of nature, which is the choicest of all antidotes to dispel loneliness.

The loss of our beloved ones brings on loneliness, but we must bear in mind that this sorrow is something that is common to us all, and must be borne with courage and an unalterable faith. We have been bequeathed the heritage of memory, in which are concealed a multitude of happy events that keep our thoughts of these beloved forever cherished.

People with important work to do, and with a plan of life that occupies each one of their twenty-four hours, rarely complain of loneliness. It's the idle and unpurposeful who complain of loneliness most. We exist. Here we are. The great problem is to put interests and gayety into this existence — to live full days. Thus is loneliness largely obliterated. With our minds teeming with wholesome and constructive thoughts, how can we welcome loneliness?

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK.

A young salesman was describing to me the qualms he goes through as he waits outside the office door of a purchasing agent or customer. What kind of a man is he going to prove to be? Will he be one of those poker-faced, speechless characters who, on accepting the salesman's card, will sit back and stare with dead-pan? Will he be, on the other hand, affable, genial, hearty?

All salesmen have to be young once. They all have to make their first contacts. Once they have met a buyer or purchasing agent, they know him for future occasions and are prepared for the occasion.

"The worst type to discover," said my friend, "when the girl opens the door and beckons you bleakly in, is that horrible dead-pan type. Some of them just look at you and say — 'Yes?' Others don't even say that much. They just look at you. You might as well start to address a dummy or banister post. Some of them, as you open your sales talk, start to read letters on their desks, or make notes on their pads which you know right well have nothing to do with what you are saying to them. The worst one I know stares out the window all the time you are talking, softly whistling a tuneless tune.

"However, I will say this: that the other type, the genial welcoming, greeter type are the kind you seldom get any orders from. They invite you in warmly, sit you down, listen with bright eyes. And then most genially give you the air, without a word of promise, let alone an order.

"However, it isn't so much the type you actually meet: its the waiting outside his office before you meet him that is the grimmest part of a salesman's life. I think all purchasing agents should have a large portrait photograph of themselves, in a characteristic mood, hung in their outer office. Their secretaries should have a brief printed biography to hand to expectant salesmen, giving his age, hobbies, fancies and pet hates if any.

"I noticed a framed snapshot of a pretty grim old coot of a purchasing agent hanging behind his desk. I got onto fishing, since the snapshot showed him holding a large pike by its gills. I came out of there with an order for $20,000.

Veterinary Research Laboratory Spends Time on Rabies Outbreak

LETHBRIDGE, Alta, (CP)—Experts of the federal government veterinary research laboratory nine miles west of here work long hours in the fight against rabies.

The serious outbreak of the disease in northwestern Canada has spread southward and recently federal authorities extended a quarantine some 250 miles into the Prairie provinces from the southern edge of the Northwest Territories. The quarantine bans movement of dogs.

At the laboratory, a small staff of highly-trained research workers has the job of examining heads of animals found dead or which have been killed because they were suspected of being rabid. It's a dangerous job which could result in death or at the least an unpleasant treatment for a period of 21 days.

Deadly Disease

Rabies, a virus disease, is transmitted by the bite of a carnivorous animal, usually a wolf or dog. After fits of madness, it causes death in all cases. Cases have been found within 20 miles of Edmonton this year, none among humans.

To the laboratory here, headed by Dr. R. C. Duthie, has fallen the task of confirming diagnosis of the disease made in the field. Heads of animals thought rabid come in tightly packed cans of dry ice.

The work that follows is anything but pleasant. Pathologists gripping sharp knives in hands sheathed in thick rubber gloves strip skin and muscles from the top of the head. A saw removes the top of the skull.

The skull is carefully opened to get at a specific part of the brain known as the "hippocampus." This is removed and slices placed in glass slides. The resulting impression is stained and examined under a microscope.

Dr. Robert Connell, animal pathologist in charge of the rabies work, looks for "magenta-color spots" which have well-defined outlines and blue centres.

Seen in Groups

These are "inclusion bodies," collections of the rabies virus. The virus, like others, is too small to be seen with any but the most powerful electronic microscope. But it collects to form inclusion bodies which can be seen.

If the inclusion bodies aren't found, bits of an animal's brain are mixed with a saline solution and injected under the brain cover of mice. The earliest possible diagnosis in this case is 10 days and it may take three weeks.

Dr. Duthie says the variable and lengthy period of incubation for the disease is one of the most terrible things about rabies. It usually lasts from three to six weeks, but can go as long as six to nine months. Once symptoms appear nothing can be done to save the victim and every warm-blooded animal is susceptible.

Unusual behavior is the first sign of rabies, either depression or friendliness. This lasts a day or so and then the animal gets an urge to roam, gradually becoming frenzied.

At this stage it will try to eat sticks and stones. Absolutely fearless, it will attack anything which moves.

Cases have been reported in northern Alberta of animals attacking tractors.

BIG CHESS MEET

MONTREAL (CP)—The Montreal chess club has announced plans for the first Canadian open chess tournament to be held in 1954. Only native Canadian championships have been held in the past, and the biennial Canadian championship is being sponsored this year by the Manitoba Chess League.

Keys to Success Given by Speaker At Kiwanis Club

The four keys to success were offered the gathering at the weekly Kiwanis luncheon Tuesday noon in the Kiwanis Centre by guest speaker Reverend Harold Balsdon, pastor of King Street Baptist Church, Kitchener.

Mr. Balsdon, a wartime Padre, who served in Italy during the war with Canadian troops, told members: "One of the great difficulties of the world today is the fact that men and women will not dare the impossible. Nothing is impossible to the man who believes it can be done. Too often we are inclined to say, 'It can't be done,' and of course, with that attitude, it certainly cannot, nothing can, or ever will successfully be accomplished as long as you and I adopt an attitude such as this."

According to the speaker, success depends entirely upon four basic principles, the first being "vision". "This characteristic embodies seeing beyond the ordinary," he said, "seeing what others do not see. Call it inspiration, or anything else, but always remember, you will see what you habitually think or look to see. Anything is possible for all men with the vision to believe that it can be done."

One Needs Courage

"You need courage," counselled Mr. Balsdon, "I don't mean that of doing noble and lofty deeds, although that in itself is an aid. What I am striving to show, is that you require courage of your convictions, the courage of standing by your own decisions despite what others may say and despite the criticism you may come up against. Be yourself," the speaker continued, "You are on this earth to play a part, see that it is your own."

"The third quality or key to success," he stated, "is effort. It is not good enough to come out second best. Strive to be first always and aim upwards toward your goal."

"Confidence is one of the most important of all the keyes to success," the minister said. "It is a matter of what you believe you can do, again, and perhaps, it is a matter of optimism. Vision, courage, effort and confidence," the speaker concluded, "these are the keys which lead to the promised land of success."

Mr. Balsdon was introduced by the Reverend Keith Daniel of Victoria Avenue Baptist Church and the vote of thanks was tendered by the Reverend S. E. Larman, minister of Holloway Street United Church.

Spectacles Prove U.K. Fashion Fad As Frames Made to Match Gowns

By MURIEL NARRAWAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—Spectacles are Britain's latest fashion fad. There are heavy, gold-rimmed ones to go with chunky jewelry, straw-rimmed ones to match Easter bonnets and gold lame numbers worn with the latest thing in ball gowns.

Frames come in a variety of colors. One shade is designed to match a lime-green veil picked for wear in Westminster Abbey at Coronation time. Another, shown at a recent London spectacle fashion show, is an upswept "stardust" model in crystal plastic, trimmed with imitation pearls and hand-wrought silver.

Heavy, gold-rimmed spectacles also were featured at the Paris dress shows, along with wide slave bracelets and big gypsy earrings. They lent sophistication and charm to slim black afternoon and cocktail dresses.

Need Three Pairs

In London, a 20-minute fashion show given by a well-known firm of opticians emphasized that the minimum spectacle wardrobe for fashionable women is three pairs—one for day, one for evening and sports wear.

"I know of one American dowager with 84 pairs," said Lilian Whitaker, director of this firm, which dates from 1820." "One debutante has 20 and there is an Italian countess with a pair to match every room in her house, most of her dresses, and a peach pair to match her bedroom sheets."

Prices for fashionable hand-made frames range from four to 15 guineas. Shape hints are: shallow frames for a short face, a deep upsweep for a long face and a low bridge for those with a long nose.

Trouble at School

Spectacle fashions are also interesting school children over the age of 12. For more than three years opticians have been complaining that school children refused to accept nickel-framed glasses with thin frames and round lenses.

This is the only style open to school children under the free national health scheme, so more and more children are talking parents into buying spectacles with up-to-date frames. This results in quarrels due to the jealousy of those who must wear school frames.

In Wales, Glamorgan's national health executive asked for a free issue of "superior-framed" spectacles at a cost to the ministry of £1 11s 5d each. No decision has been taken.

Weddings

McGUIRE—HALL

A very pretty wedding was solemnized on Saturday February 7, at 7 p.m., at Bridge Street United Church parsonage, when Rev. Duncan McTavish united in marriage, Olive Pearl, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Almond Hall, of Point Anne, to Willis Daniel, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. McGuire, of Hopetown, Gaspe, Quebec.

The bride was becomingly attired in powder blue sheer with navy accessories and wore a corsage of red roses.

Her bridesmaid, Miss Ruth Brintnell, of Albert College, wore a similar gown in pink sheer, with pink accessories and corsage of deep pink roses.

Mr. Thomas Daley, of Belleville, attended the bridegroom.

Following the ceremony, a reception for 18 guests was held at the Dutch Mill Inn, Trenton, after which the happy couple left for Niagara Falls and Buffalo. Upon their return they will reside in Belleville.

SCRYMGEOUR—WEEKS

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized on Saturday, February 21, at 3:00 p.m., in the parsonage of Tabernacle United Church, when the Rev. R. A. Rowley, pastor of the church, united in marriage Joyce Edna Weeks, Belleville, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Weeks, to William Albert Scrymgeour, also of Belleville, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Scrymgeour.

The bride was attractively attired in pale blue net over taffeta, with matching accessories and corsage of red roses, lily-of-the-valley and fern.

Mrs. A. LaRocque attended the bride, wearing pink lace gown with matching accessories and corsage of pink roses, blue forget-me-nots and fern.

Mr. Armond Duffy, of Belleville, attended the bridegroom.

The reception was held at the bride's home, which was attractively decorated with pink and white streamers white wedding bells and cut flowers, where the bride's mother received. gowned in green crepe, assisted by the groom's mother, who wore black and white sheer.

For the wedding trip to Ottawa, Watertown and Syracuse, N.Y., the bride chose a navy taffeta dress, with fawn topcoat and brown accessories. Mr. and Mrs. Scrymgeour will reside in Belleville.

Prior to her marriage, the bride was honored by three miscellaneous showers: one at the home of her parents by many of her friends; another at the home of Mrs. A. LaRocque, when the girls of the J. & J. Cash Company also presented her with many lovely gifts, and one by the Women of the Moose.

Women's Study Guild Enjoys Film On 'Mental Health'

The Women's Study Guild met in the home of Mrs. George Wishart, 154 Dufferin Avenue on Monday evening.

The president, Mrs. W. N. Hurst, was in the chair. The secretary Mrs. H. R. Gibson presented reports from previous meeting also executive meeting.

The devotional period was conducted by Mrs. W. A. Campbell who took as her theme the 23rd psalm. Mrs. Campbell showed that this familiar psalm filled a great place in the life of everyone. David wrote it as a comfort to the Hebrew people and down through the years it has become a source of help in times of stress.

"Breakdown" Film

The program committee then presented a film with Mrs. Fraser giving the introduction. The film was called "Breakdown" and was put out by the Department of Mental Health and Welfare of Canada written and produced by Robert Anderson.

It was the story of a young woman who becomes mentally ill while holding a secretarial position. After some months of unsuccessful treatment at home, her doctor insisted she be placed in a mental hospital.

In time she responds to the treatment received there and after an extended stay was discharged and sent home to resume a normal life.

The film showed the life and different treatments used in a mental hospital, and proves that mental illness should not be less respected than any other type of illness.

Discussion followed the showing of the film conducted by Miss Elston.

Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting. The hostesses being Mrs. Hunter and Mrs. Seldon.

Princess Anne Takes First Uncertain Steps in Fashion Spotlight in Coronation Year

By MURIEL NARRAWAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—A cute little platinum blonde with cornflower blue eyes has taken her first uncertain steps into London's fashion spotlight. She is two-year-old Princess Anne, second in line to the crown her mother will wear at the Coronation in June.

When the Queen returned from Sandringham in mid-February, to plunge into a heavy pre-Coronation program, Princess Anne waved to the crowd with a tiny barrel muff that matched her velvet coat.

Already cut-out patterns have been printed in the British press—and the muff has every chance of becoming a children's wear winner. Like most royal fashions, it is completely sensible. A silk cord from the collar keeps it in place and the wearer needs no gloves. The muff curves into the wrists and has a pie-frill to match a similar frill on the coat collar.

Without Hats

It was noticed, too, that both Princess Anne and her brother, Prince Charles, wore no hats.

There is little doubt that the clothes worn by the royal children during Coronation Year will be of as much interest to the public as those worn by the Queen and other royal ladies.

Anne, an active youngster with the inquisitive mind of her brother, is fast becoming his first lieutenant in mischief. The royal couple find as much, or more, pleasure in banging tins with spoons, as playing with the beautiful toys in their nursery apartment at Buckingham Palace.

They are, of course, both fond of musical instruments—the noisier the better. Charles' latest fascinaton is tiny bagpipes found in his Christmas stocking.

The young Prince is fast becoming aware of the conduct expected when out with his mother and father. He does not realize the Queen, but does not realize the significance of royalty. But a little scene at the railway station before the royal party entered the waiting car on their return from Sandringham shows that early training counts.

Princely Dignity

Princess Anne, with the impatience of every small girl, made a bee-line for the royal car. Charles showed a marked impulse to follow but decided it was his place to shake hands all round first. In other ways, however, the Prince is just another youngster with a boy's emphatic objection to things he doesn't like.

One of these is the dental chair. Both children have their teeth checked every four weeks, and Charles recently faced his first sight of a dental drill. He raised as much fuss as any other small boy, but the dentist overcame this by placing a cotton-wool "rabbit" on the end of the drill and persuaded the Prince to watch it turn.

Although candy now is no longer rationed, the royal children still get no more than a few ounces each day. These are the Queen's orders. She attributes her own excellent teeth to similar care in her own childhood.

Christ Church C.C. Holds Auction Sale

"Going, Going, Gone!" was the phrase that set the theme for the recent meeting of the Contact Club of Christ Church. The auction sale, a favorite event in the club, proved just as popular as ever, as a large representation of members, as well as many friends, vied with each other in bidding for the attractive bargains.

The items offered for sale were many and varied, and there was something to catch everyone's eye. The skill of auctioneer Dorothy Halbert, and her assistant for the evening, Jeanne Jackson, was most entertainingly evident as they managed the bidding and cleverly kept up a swift pace.

At the end of ht esale, treasurer Mary Fletcher, who was the accountant for the auctioneers, reported that besides having an evening of fun, the club had profited as well.

At the beginning of the meeting, before opening the auction sale, the president, Florence Lennox, welcomed the members and their guests and reminded everyone that there would be a business and work meeting next week.

Afterwards, refreshments were served by the hostesses for the evening, Thelma Saunders, Evelyn Clarke, Shirley Amos, Cecella Belsey, Pauline Bishop and Alison Brunton.

Mrs. Ken Bateman then led in the World Day of Prayer program having several ladies assisting.

Mrs. C. Chambers gave a chapter of the study book and Mrs. R. Peate closed with benediction, after which refreshments were served by the hostess and her assistants.

Imagination in choosing a gift for golden wedding celebration

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Please answer this question, to settle a discussion between my husband and me. When we go to a golden wedding celebration of a couple we don't know very well, is a gift expected? Would a dollar bill enclosed with a congratulatory card be proper, or would just the card be better? And when would we present this? My husband feels that it isn't necessary for us to give any present, as people of that age generally do not need the things we would be able to buy.—M.

A golden wedding celebration is such an extremely important occasion that, to my way of thinking, a guest should, if at all possible, take a present to the "bride and groom". Money, enclosed with the card-of-congratulation would definitely not be in good taste. But I don't agree with your husband's point of view about choosing a present, for with a little money (perhaps only the dollar) and some imagination you can choose something useful to both, and have it decoratively wrapped with either white or golden wedding annivedsary paper, or with radiant gold metallic paper.

A package of lace paper dollies, for example, gold metallic; or a package or box of paper napkins —all large; or part small, part large; white—marked "The Halls" in gold letters. Or two linen or novelty-cotton napkins, breakfast-size; or two small hand-towels. Or, for a quarter or so, a golden-color desk blotter, yellow-paper-wrapped and with a big golden bow. Or, at the 10-cent store or department store, locate a gadget useful to both, and wrap it decoratively, perhaps with two yellow roses or rosebuds attached in the wrapping-knot. And present your gift when you greet the "bride-and-groom".

Correct attire for mother at her daughter's "capping ceremony"

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My daughter's "capping ceremony" is to be held soon. It is to be an evening occasion. What would be the correct apparel for me to wear?—R. C.

Correct attire for you for this evening occasion would be, I am quite sure: a black or other dark or not-so-dark dress (but not too light in color), street-length; a small, tight-fitting hat (so you won't have to take it off, but also so there will be absolutely no obstruction for those behind you), matching or harmonizing with the color of your dress, or perhaps a pert little white hat or half-hat, very fashionable this season for this type of occasion; white or light-beige gloves, wrist-length, or longer, if you wish; small afternoon purse; other accessories very carefully chosen to complete your informal evening ensemble. (But please talk over my suggestions with your daughter, after she has made inquiry as to customary attire for the mothers at this occasion.)

How long the dresses of attendants and bride's mother?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

If my finances will permit, I would like to wear a traditional white wedding gown, either floor length or ankle length. (The men in the wedding party will probably wear dark business suits, as is usually the custom here for early-afternoon weddings that are small and informal.) Whether I wear a floor length or ankle length gown, must my attendants wear the same length and type of gown I wear? If they must, will my mother be required to wear one also? She very much prefers to wear a street length dress, afternoon type. Is this permissible?—K.

Even if you wear a traditional white bridal dress, floor length, your attendants may, if you wish, wear ankle length dresses. . . or long dresses, if you prefer. For your informal wedding, your mother may wear an ankle length dress, or street length, if she prefers.

Adequate Minimum-Cost Dinners for One Week

By Mary Moore

"I see you've joined the crusaders, Mary." "I don't know what you mean, but I hope I'm not back in the twelfth century." My would-be tormentor went on "Do you think you gals ever get anywhere trying to glamorize vitamins?" At that I looked at him with a fishy eye and asked "Okay, fellah, what's your gripe?" "Aw, people don't want to be healthy. They just want something to eat that tastes good." (This, from a 225-lb. 5-ft. 9-inch gorger.) I was ruffled. "If you say any more I'll take you in tow and let you read a few of the letters on my desk that will change your tune." He soon subsided. Even reading a few letters was too hard work.

I know from the evidence of those letters that you are earnestly seeking ways of nourishing your precious broods. Some of you on incredibly low budgets.

That is why this list of dinner menus is given today. Each item is chosen for its nutritional value plus its flavor appeal plus its low cost. There will no room for recipes. If you want them let me know, and enclose stamped envelope.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Newly married sister high-hats her family

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My sister just got married. Her husband is overseas, so they have no home of their own yet, and my sister was supposed to stay with us here at home. But she won't have anything to do with any of us.

She is now pregnant, and she wouldn't even tell my mother, who heard it from my sister's mother-in-law. This hurt mother and dad terribly.

Is there any way you can think of to make my sister come to her senses?—P.

Dear P.:

Can you think of any reason why your sister should take this attitude? While she was still living at home, did there seem to be any friction or lack of understanding between her and your parents? If, as you think back over the past few years, you can see something that might explain why your sister is acting this way, then perhaps you could tactfully bring it up some-time in talking with your mother and father, and the three of you might be able to figure out a way of healing the breach.

If, however, you cannot put your finger on any cause for her aloofness, then her new status as a married woman has probably just gone to her head a bit and made her feel excessively independent. If this is the case, then I think if you all wait patiently, until she becomes accustomed to being a wife instead of an unmarried daughter living with her parents and subject to their supervision, she will in time acquire a more normal perspective.

It is only natural, of course, for your parents to feel hurt when she so ignores them, but if you can get them to look at it in the way I have suggested, perhaps they can bear with her haughty ways for a while and be content till she comes to herself.

Gray-haired at 14, it's a big worry to her

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have a funny sort of problem and I hope you can help me. I am only 14 years old and I have gray hair.

All the girls make fun of me. At first they made a joke of it, but it got so they wouldn't leave me alone, and sometimes I feel like crying. My mother tells me to keep a stiff upper lip, and I have tried to do that, but sometimes I feel I just can't take any more kidding.—I. M. L.

Dear I.M.L.:

When a girl as young as yourself has gray hair, it seems to me there might be a possibility that your nutrition could be the cause. Has your mother ever taken this up with a doctor? If not, I suggest that she do so. While I think the theory that gray hair is caused by a lack of certain vitamins has been disproved, there still might be the possibility that if your general health were as good as it should be, it might help. Ask your mother, also, to let you go to a beauty shop and get them to create a very cute hair style for you which would make you look so attractive that the other girls would envy you. It can be done, you know!

Otherwise, I advise you not to make such an effort to keep "a stiff upper lip," but just to relax and take it in stride. Of course I know it is hard particularly for the very young, to feel that something about them is "different", but try to remember that it's not our physical features that make people like us, but the kind of people we are. And the happy thing is that, while none of us can do too much to change some physical feature we have, every one of us can develop an attractive personality. If you are friendly, happy and thoughtful with all your boy and girl friends, and take it with a laugh when anyone jokes about your hair, everybody will get to like you so much that they will forget all about what color hair you have —and they'll admire you for being such a good sport.

How about trying some of these things I have suggested and then letting me know how you make out?

Fashion Flashes

A RETURN to favor at various price levels is that of the softly handled shirtwaist dress in rayon or silk surah or tie silk, and some foulard.

SOFT CLASSIC is the favored theme for new spring suits. Small brown and white checked lightweight tweed, color-flecked in orange, red and black, makes a charming model from London. The three-quarter sleeve is developed from a dropped shoulder line. The collar is of brown velvet and the lapels have rounded notches. Flap pockets are placed quite low.

SPRING RAINS will patter down on many a handsome new raincoat, such as one of rayon acetate and cotton mixture with collar and cuffs of white leather. With this one, a baton umbrella in a matching white leather case.

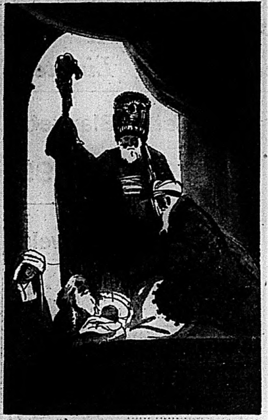
The Greatest Story Ever Told

By Fulton Oursler



THE PRESENTATION IN THE TEMPLE

Interpretation of the Rembrandt etching (1654) from the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

TWO PIGEONS, PLEASE!

The law of their people prescribed that every little boy baby must be circumcized on the eighth day of his life. Accordingly, on the eighth day after the Nativity, Jesus and Mary and Joseph and Anna and Joachim left the stable under the inn and rode their donkeys six miles up the steep heights that led to Jerusalem and the temple.

They entered that morning through the Sheep's Gate. In the shadow of the archway Mary looked down into the baby's face; his eyes were open, and there was a focus to their gaze—an intelligence that startled her; it was as if this baby mind understood his first entrance into Jerusalem, and that he would come here again, and more than once, and at last to tragical ends!

The four grownups on their mission of devotion saw the signs of wealth and pleasure on one hand and also the want and teeming discontent, unwashed pavements slippery with mortal slime and excrement, lying at the base of the rich people's glory; there was barely enough water to drink in this Jerusalem and palaces where vice played all day and all night and lanes where hunger and leprosy crouched together.

At The Temple

They were glad when they reached the outer gate of the Temple area and found a little knot of relatives waiting to welcome them: Zachary, joyous and very talkative beside the radiant Elizabeth, who had brought little John in her arms. Strutting forward and back, they found also the mocking but very friendly and companionable Samuel.

It was not the first time that Elizabeth and Mary had met since the birth of Jesus; three times in the last week Elizabeth and Zachary had made the journey over to Bethlehem. Now they all moved inside the Temple walls with happy faces and halted in the outer court to buy their ritualistic offerings. And here Mary looked to Joseph, wondering what he was going to decide.

According to the law they could purchase a one-year-old lamb for a burnt offering and a young pigeon for a sin offering, or Joseph could choose the less expensive course of buying two turtledoves or two young pigeons, depending altogether on his conscience and his purse.

Feeling that he could not afford anything better, for Gabriel and Sarah had charged them plenty for the use of the stable, Joseph decided to buy two plump pigeons. He picked out one and, Mary the other, and Joseph carried them in his hands as he proceeded toward the inner Temple. Looking about him, Joseph felt again that sense of belonging and continuity of race and history of which this Temple was the symbol. Herod might have paid for it, but the people's architects designed it, the people's labor built it, and here the people drew to themselves apart from tyrants and overlords; here they remained most peculiarly themselves, uncontaminated by any intrusion from the outer world. And here, in spite of Roman armies and puppet Arab king, they persisted in adhering to the last meticulous detail of their faith. Within earshot of Herod, who was not deaf, they came regularly not only to praise the Lord, God of Hosts, but to entreat Him to deliver them from their conquerors. That was the principal prayer raised in the Temple their oppressor had built for them.

A Startling Interruption

But as Joseph and Mary were about to cross the court, where the offerings would be turned in and ceremonies performed, there came a startling interruption.

Mary, with the sleeping Jesus against her breast, was walking a little behind Joseph, when a shadow fell across them; a withered figure swayed out from under a pillared archway, a purblind old man tottered before them in the sun.

"What's he want?" asked Samuel hastily.

But Zachary, the priest, who knew his way about the Temple, lifted his hand reassuringly.

"Don't be worried," he said, out of the side of his beard. "It's only Simeon. Everybody around the Temple knows old Simeon. He's harmless."

"He's old enough all right," agreed Samuel.

Indeed, Simeon was so decrepit that it seemed a wonder he did not fall apart, from sheer inanition and decay.

"He is a devout and just man," remonstrated Zachary, "and he tells everybody that once he was visited by the Holy Spirit. The angel promised him that before he died he was to see the Messiah in the flesh."

Samuel looked warily at Zachary. The priest's face was set in an ivory calm. The others stood back while the tall, rugged figure of Simeon crept nearer, toward Mary and Joseph with the child.

A Moment of Silence

There was a moment of curious silence as he halted and lifted up his hands and croakingly thanked God. At last, he groaned aloud, he could be allowed to die. A chill ran even in the spine of Samuel when he heard that prayer. The whole group stood still as other persons came hurrying down the courtyard; a crowd collected, all watching as Simeon leaned forward and his emaciated face of a thousand wrinkles came close to the young mother.

"This child is set for the fall!" he gasped. The sunken eyes gleamed again straight at Mary. "And for the resurrection of Israel," he went on huskily.

His bony right hand raised, the lean, misshapen forefinger pointed crookedly at the mother's heart.

"And your own soul a sword shall pierce!" he predicted.

As tears gathered in Mary's eyes, he added:

"Out of many hearts thoughts shall be revealed."

Now Simeon swayed back, waving both hands haplessly, as if saying farewell to a life he had never enjoyed; as if this moment were a tremendous relief to him and he was glad to lose himself in shadows.

A New Voice

Before anyone could speak, there came a new voice—the sound of crying—and out from under the same arcade appeared a woman crawling on her knees.

"She, too, is incredibly old," muttered Zachary. "Even older than Simeon. Her name is Anna. For eighty-four years she has been a widow. Since the day the Temple was built she has never left it."

"And what is she saying?" snapped Samuel.

"Listen!" said Zachary.

Anna was struggling to stand up in front of Mary. Looking down into the face of the sleeping child, she found her voice, so clear that even the dying Simeon could hear what she was saying:

"Here, indeed, is the deliverer of the people."

FRANKFORD

Fine Entertainment Presented by Annual Skating Carnival

FRANKFORD — The Lions Club of Frankford held its annual skating carnival in the Frankford community arena Saturday evening. There was a rather disappointing turnout, but this may be attributed to a number of factors. First, the carnival had to be postponed one night, as the ice was not hard enough on Friday, and secondly, there have been so many other events all week long that many folk who would otherwise have attended found that they just couldn't keep up the pace.

Those who did attend, however, enjoyed a fine evening of entertainment. Following a period of general skating, members of the Quinte Skating Club took over and gave a sparkling demonstration of fancy and figure skating.

Carnival Queen

One class of events was then run off. Mrs. Art Stewart was chosen Carnival Queen. Brenda Westlake won the prize for best girls' costume, under 5 years of age. Paul Duncan was the winner for the boys in this department. Linda Duncan was the winner for the girls in the 6-7 year old fancy costume group, while Joe Rabel won in this division for the boys.

The Quinte Skating Club put on another fine performance. Janet Hunt was the winner for the girls' 8-9 year old fancy costume, and Vlasta Rabel won in that age group for the best girls' comic costume. Keith Reid won the boys' fancy costume prize in the 8-9 year old group, and Garry Davis was winner for the comic costume. Jean Caldwell was the 10-11 year old fancy girls' costume winner and Sandra Morrow won the comic costume prize. Reginald Wiley was the boys' fancy costume prize winner in this age group.

Fine Performance

The Quinte Skating Club put on their final performance of the evening which was well received by the crowd. George Reid was the winner of the prize for the oldest person on the ice. Laura Jones won the girls' fancy costume in the 12-15 year old group, and Gary Harrington won the boys' fancy costume prize in this age group. Mary Cranston and Gary Steward won the best couple fancy costume prize. Linda Patrick and Carol Martel. Dick Bowman and family were the largest family on the ice, and won a special prize. Mrs. Art Stewart won the door prize, and children's door prize went to Darrel Bates.

The committee, Lions Jack Farley, George Rogers, Joe Adams, Milford Macauley, Tony Lawrence, Ray Scott, Adrian Babcock, Len Reid, Ray Moran and Bob Bates are to be commended on their well-planned and presented event.

Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Rose, were Mr. and Mrs. William Doddy and Mr. and Mrs. Everett Rose of Glen Miller.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Lohnes and Darlene and Raymond Lohnes called on Mr. and Mrs. Howard Sager and family in Belleville Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Stuckey called on Mr. and Mrs. Bob Gawley and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Gawley and family were in Marmora Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom McCann of Malone, called on Mr. and Mrs. Mervin Dafoe Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Mervin Dafoe and Billy, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Dafoe, Mr. and Mrs. Max Dafoe and children spent the supper hour Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. John Dafoe, the occasion being Mr. Dafoe's birthday.

Mr. Arthur Southworth has gone to Toronto for a special operation. Frankfordites extend every best wish for his health and speedy convalescence.

Just Fishing

Fishing has an appeal for all ages, regardless of sex and without too much regard for weather. Mrs. G. Chartrand, an elderly native of The Pas, Man., was not to be outdone by youngsters and entered the ice-fishing contest at the Northern Manitoba's Trappers' Festival. She pulled in a northern pike from the Saskatchewan River. — (CP Photo.)

FRANKFORD

United Church Holds World Day of Prayer

FRANKFORD — The World Day of Prayer was observed in Frankford in the United Church this year. Mrs. Walter Morrow, W.M.S. president, was in charge of the service, with able assistance being given by Mrs. Preston Chase of the Evening Auxiliary, Mrs. Chase of the Free Methodist Church, Mrs. Gerald Currie of the Full Gospel Tabernacle, and Miss Dench of the Anglican Church. Mrs. Holt Madill and Mrs. Raymand Rowe welcomed each one at the door of the church.

Mrs. Haggerty of the Free Methodist, offered a prayer for the young Queen; Mrs. Claude Davis of the Free Methodist prayed for the homes and families around the world. Mrs. Powell of the United Church led in prayer for increased private and family prayer and Mrs. J. M. Dafoe prayed for the followers of Christ around the world. Mrs. Mac Wilson of the Full Gospel Tabernacle for blessing on all the Christians offered as her prayer, a petition of every creed everywhere. Mrs. Gerald Johnson of the Anglican Church prayed the prayer that is on everyone's lips today, a prayer for peace.

Children of Light

The theme of the service was "Walk as Children of Light," the service having been prepared by the Angola Church of Africa. Mrs. A. E. Johns of the United Church, gave an inspiring talk, choosing as her theme, "Let Your Light so Shine."

Mrs. Richard Twiddy of the Free Methodist Church added to the service with a beautiful vocal solo. Mrs. Bert Rowe of the United Church presided at the piano with the ladies of the Evening Auxiliary in the choir.

Word has been received that one of Frankford's oldest industries has now closed its doors. Nobody knows for how long but it is hopeful that it will not be for good. Monday evening, Claude Rose, foreman, pulled the switch that ended production in the Gair Pulp Mill on North Trent Street. The Gair Company plant, and the former owners, Canadian Paper Board Company, have meant a source of income to Frankfordites for many, many years, and will be greatly missed in Frankford.

Well Suited for Space

Looking like something out of a science fiction magazine, a research engineer for a large American rubber company, checks a high-altitude space suit that may soon be used by the U.S. Navy for high-flying rockets or jet aircraft pilots. The most flexible ever designed, the suit is capable of protecting a man at altitudes of 100,000 feet (19 miles) atmosphere bordering on outer space and never before reached in powered flight. — Central Press Canadian.

CAMPBELLFORD

Home-School Assoc. Logical Liason Between Parent and Teacher

CAMPBELLFORD — The regular meeting of the Home and School Association for February heard an informative address by the inspector of public schools, Mr. Sutherland.

Beginning his talk with the statement that education is everybody's business, the speaker felt that the Home and School Association was the logical liason between teacher and parent. Tracing some of the recent changes in education, Mr. Sutherland explained reasons for the abolition of the high school entrance curriculum revision, new books. curriculum and new text books. Five to ten per cent of pupils, classified as gifted, might be capable of acceleration in the primary or junior grades, completing three school years in two.

Reading Test

More than one acceleration was considered detrimental and no acceleration was to be advised for Grade VI. Children with reading difficulties often required longer to complete a course and experienced frustration and a sense of failure if rushed. Mr. Sutherland concluded his address with a simple test to ascertain a child's reading level.

Mrs. A. C. Newman extended a vote of thanks to the speaker.

A bill was presented and passed to cover a deficit for the figure skating group. It was decided to continue the lessons which were proving so successful, weather permitting. A delegate is to be sent to the O.F.A. convention in Toronto at Easter.

The local company of Boy Scouts, with their Scout leaders, Connor and Carswell, gave a demonstration of speed and accuracy in knot tying, also in lashing and bridge building.

President Ross Jewell paid tribute to the Scout Movement which was responsible for such a program of youth training.

After the meeting was brought to a close, refreshments were served by Mrs. Cecil Lloyd and committee.

Paintings of Canadian Cities Slated for Long Foreign Tour

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada on canvas is going on an 18-month, 18,000-mile tour abroad.

Familiar vistas of 22 Canadian cities, painted by the country's best-known artists, will leave here next month for Central and South America and Europe.

The exhibition, collected by a Montreal distillery (Seagram's) is the work of 20 artists commissioned for the task through the co-operation of the Royal Canadian Academy.

Samuel Bronfman, president of the company, outlined the aims and object of the project, the longest travelling exhibition of Canadian paintings.

He said:

"We seek to bring to the peoples of the world some glimpse of the Canadian landscape and skyline. We hope, in this fashion, to establish abroad a familiarity with our urban civilization and thus evoke a deeper understanding between ourselves and the people of other lands."

Ottawa Preview

The exhibition will make its debut in Ottawa March 12 at a special preview. It will be open to the public for two days and then it will embark on the long journey, stopping in such countries as the United Kingdom, France, Italy, Switzerland, Sweden, Mexico and Brazil.

It will go first to San Juan, Puerto Rico, and end in Stockholm. Other cities en route include Havana, Mexico City, Caracas, Rio de Janeiro, Sao Paulo, Paris, Geneva and London.

Returning from abroad late in 1954 the collection will start a cross-Canada tour, being shown at the 22 cities it represents. At the conclusion the collection will be broken up and each painting presented to the city it depicts.

New Brunswick Smokers Still To Pay 37 Cents For Package Of 20 Cigarets

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

New Brunswick smokers will continue to pay a four-cent tax on a pack of 20 cigarets.

Provincial Secretary - Treasurer Donald Patterson, bringing down the first budget of the new Progressive Conservative government Tuesday, said a bill will be introduced to change the method of computing the tax. Under the proposed legislation, a pack of 20 cigarets will cost 37 cents.

Mr. Patterson said that if such action is not t[illegible] the province will lose 25 per cent of its 10-per-cent tobacco revenue as a result of the action of manufacturers in cutting the retail price of cigarets by two cents.

Mr. Patterson estimated revenue for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1954, at $49,334,380 and expenditures at $49,221,893 leaving a surplus of $112,487. The surplus for this fiscal year was not expected to exceed $1[illegible]3,539.

Attorney-General Lucien Maynard of Alberta said he will defer enforcement of the Criminal Code where it concerns bingo games, effective at once.

He was replying to a written query after the legislature passed a resolution asking the province to defer action on bingo games until the federal government has amended the Criminal Code in respect to bingos.

He said people cannot understand why the law allows the type of gambling that is common at the Calgary and Edmonton midways and does not allow old-age pensioners to hold bingos.

Denials and accusations flew in British Columbia following charges in the legislature by a Social Credit member that children are taught immorality in B. C. schools.

J. A. Reid of Salmon Arm said children's minds are being poisoned by "sex text books." Quoting from a document prepared by A.J. Clotworthy, a retired Salmon Arm school teacher, Mr. Reid said school children are becoming thieves, robbers, dope addicts and prostitutes.

While Mr. Reid's resignation from the legislature was demanded Tuesday by the CCF Opposition, Mr. Clotworthy announced his resignation as secretary of the Social Credit group at Salmon Arm.

He said he has resigned because the party repudiated his brief.

Vancouver teachers denied they taught intimate sex details in school and termed the accusations "screwball."

Manitoba municipalities can expect increased aid from the provincial government this year for social welfare, public works and "other municipal costs." This forecast was contained in the throne speech read at the opening of the legislature by Lieutenant-Governor R. F. McWilliams.

Other points outlined in the speech were larger educational grants, a larger public works program and major capital expansion of the Manitoba telephone system.

Henry Hicks, Nova Scotia's education minister, said further provincial financial assistance for the provinces universities and colleges will soon have to be "seriously considered."

Speaking in the legislature, he called for a more equitable distribution of federal government grants and charged that Nova Scotia is not getting a fair deal.

In the Saskatchewan legislature, a government back-bencher, R. H. Wooff (CCF-Turtleford) urged provincial backing for a co-operative program of building market roads for farmers.

Reds Testing Blockade Set-up

BERLIN (AP)—Russian sector police slammed controls on elevated train traffic at the Friedrichstrasse station today in what appeared to be the test of a set-up that could be used for a new blockade of West Berlin.

The elevated was split at that main station in East Berlin. Travellers moving in each direction were forced to alight, undergo checking and take another train.

Other truck lines of the elevated were not affected.

Communist work crews have been hammering for weeks on platforms, turntables and switches that clearly point to some master plan for snipping the inter-sector traffic at a moment's notice.

KOJE TROUBLE AGAIN

PUSAN, Korea (AP) — Allied guards Monday forcibly cleared a Koje Island prisoner compound of fanatic Reds who defied two showers of tear gas, the UN prisoner-of-war command reported today. One North Korean prisoner was killed. There were no Allied casualties. The POW command said the Reds had refused to form ranks for a head count.

Connelly Said 'Irresponsible' Using Public Funds on House

OTTAWA (CP)—Brig. Alan B. Connelly was identified officially Tuesday as the officer adjudged "irresponsible" in the use of public funds in $15,000 worth of repairs made to a house in Regina in 1951 when only $800 was authorized.

The Commons defence committee finally got that information on the record through a last-minute CCF question after tip-toeing around the issue with elaborate caution.

Brig. Connelly, a 44-year-old engineer from Calgary, was retired by the army last fall on the grounds that there was no further employment for him.

Opposition members have charged that he was fired to appease government "embarrassment" over the dispatch of Canadian troops to Koje Island, off Korea, to guard Red prisoners. They say he was let out because he wrote rather than wired, the information he got as liaison officer in Tokyo and because the government learned about the move after it was on the way.

The Regina issue is separate from Koje. It came up in the committee on the basis of summarized reports to the defence department's auditor about various irregularities in army administration.

One consisted of expenditures of between $10,000 and $15,000 on the area commander's house in Regina. The auditor-general, in an earlier report on the same incident, said $15,000 was spent although only $800 was authorized by higher authority.

Army comments appended to the report said ". . . a board of officers convened to investigate this matter and it was found that there had been a degree of irresponsibility in the use of public funds. . . The area commander concerned is no longer in the service."

It was obvious that every member of the 26-man committee knew the identity of the officer but it remained for E. W. Herridge (CCF—Kootenay West) to bring it to a head in the last minute when he asked whether the officer under discussion was Brig. Connelly.

Elgin B. Armstrong, assistant deputy minister of defence, said he was. In reply to a question Mr. Armstrong said he does not know whether Brig. Connelly ever lived in the house. He would obtain the information.

Eaton's Planning New Expansion

TORONTO (CP)—John David Eaton, president of the T. Eaton Company, Limited, said Tuesday his company is headed for further expansion soon in line "with the growth and prosperity of Canada."

He told the firm's annual meeting that, in the year just past, an all-time sales record was set, surpassing "by a substantial margin" the previous high [illegible].

Mr. Eaton announced appointment of J. Ross Jenkins as a vice-president of the company, replacing R. S. McCordick who has retired. D. M. Allan and B. E. Mercer were appointed to the board of directors, replacing Mr. McCordick and J. G. McKee, who also retired.

Advance Party Forming Plans To Top Everest

NEW DELHI (Reuters)—A two-man advance party of the British Everest expedition left here Tuesday night for Nepal to start preparations for the 11th attack on the world's highest mountain.

All but two of the previous attempts were made by Britons. The last two, both in 1952, were Swiss.

The expedition is expected to last four months.

The two men, Alfred Gregory and Charles Evans, will trek into Kathmandu, capital of Nepal, from the last railhead on the Indian border.

There they will meet Tensing, head Sherpa guide, who last year reached a height of 28,215 feet—within 800 feet of the summit—with the Swiss expedition.

With his aid, they will start recruiting 200 porters to carry equipment up to the base camp. Mountaineering circles here say the British expedition is the best-manned and best-equipped ever launched against Everest.

123,000 Enrolled In Civil Defence

KITCHENER (CP) — Maj.-Gen. F. [illegible] Worthington, Canadian civil defence co-ordinator, said Tuesday night that civil defence in this country is "getting on a firm footing."

He said that as Sept. 30 last Canada had 123,000 persons enrolled in civil defence. He added: "It is vital to the security of our nation that as many communities as possible have an organization because it is the communities that have not been subjected to an attack who will save the day, particularly if mass destruction weapons are used."

The general spoke at the opening of the new headquarters of the Waterloo county civil defence group in the Goudie Building.

Civil defence representatives from Galt, Guelph, Hamilton, London, St. Catharines, Preston and Stratford attended.

Congressional Hopes For Sharp Budget Cut Jolted Through Evidence of Dulles

WASHINGTON (CP)—Congressional hopes to make a big slash in federal spending by drastically trimming the multi-billion-dollar U.S. defence and foreign aid program were reported today to have received a rude jolt from top Eisenhower administration officials.

Testifying at a private session of the Senate banking committee, State Secretary Dulles was quoted as saying that world tensions will bar any severe reduction of defence and foreign-aid spending. He hopes the international situation will not require even bigger government spending in the next 12 months.

Committee members said Tuesday that in general Dulles sketched a grim, long-range outlook in the cold war with Russia, reflecting much the same atmosphere that prevailed at a White House briefing of congressional leaders last Thursday.

The committee is considering whether to provide authority for standby economic controls after April 30, when most controls expire.

Defence Secretary Charles E. Wilson was quoted by a member of the House of Representatives appropriations sub-committee as "looking askance" at suggestions of big defence cuts.

Wilson started presentation of the defence department's fiscal 1954 needs before the sub-committee, also meeting in private.

"I don't see how the defence budget can be cut much, if at all," this member said. "Mr. Wilson didn't point out any places where it could be cut, and I got the impression he didn't think it can be cut."

The reported testimony of Dulles and Wilson once more underscored the belief of top administration officials that while no sudden crisis is expected, it would be dangerous to cut taxes or make deep slashes in defence expenditures at this time.

Hopes for lower taxes and a balanced budget rest largely on trimming military and foreign-aid outlays.

The budget submitted to Congress last month by former president Truman called for expenditure of more than $46,000,000,000 by the defence department during the 1954 fiscal year, which starts next July 1. It called for new appropriations of approximately $42,000,000,000. It is this figure which Congress must work on, since the $46,000,000,000 of estimated outlays for next year will come largely from money appropriated in past years.

Senator A. Willis Robertson (Dem. Va.), after hearing Budget Director Joseph M. Dodge, said it would be difficult to balance the budget in the next fiscal year, and impossible to do it for fiscal 1955 if $8,500,000,000 worth of annual taxes are allowed to expire on schedule.

Another War Seen Changing Site of Papacy

VATICAN CITY (AP) — A Jesuit publication said Monday that another war might drive headquarters of the Roman Catholic Church to another country. But it added the Pope would still be "Roman."

Civilta Cattolica, authoritative bi-weekly publication of the Society of Jesus (Jesuits), recalled the period the papacy spent at Avignon, France, beginning with Pope Clement V in 1314.

"The Pontiff did not cease at that time to be 'Roman,'" it said, "just as he would not cease to be (Roman) if Divine Providence should dispose that he be compelled to abandon the sacred ground of the city of Rome."

Churchill Thanks Russian Envoy

LONDON (AP)—Prime Minister Churchill invited Soviet ambassador Andrei Gromyko to his official residence Monday and thanked him for Russia's £90,000 flood relief gift.

The Russian gift was the third instance of generosity toward a non-Communist country in a week.

Western diplomats speculated it was part of a new "friendship offensive" by the Soviet Union. They wondered if it was intended as a bid for closer relations with western nations, particularly where there are hints of Allied disunity.

The apparent warmth of Churchill's response quickly caught the attention of the diplomats.

The Soviet embassy announced Friday—after many generous contributions from Canada, the United States and other western nations to flood sufferers in Britain, The Netherlands and Belgium—that it had turned over a cheque for £90,000 to the lord mayor of London.

Clark Denounces Charges as False

TOKYO (AP)—Gen. Mark Clark Tues. blasted Communist propagandists for their "fantastic and utterly false charges" about germ warfare and angrily accused the Reds of extorting "confessions" from captured Americans.

The UN Far East commander said in a statement the Reds apparently have revived germ warfare charges to hide their failure to cope with expected new epidemics in war-ravaged North Korea.

The blistering denunciation was inspired by renewed germ charges by Red China's official Peiping radio. Sunday the radio sparked its news propaganda drive with an alleged confession by a captured U. S. marine pilot. The flier, Col. Frank H. Schwable of Arlington, Va., was quoted as saying the U.S. joint chiefs of staff had ordered a "contamination belt" strewn across Red Korea.

Zoo Gorilla Accepts Kitten as Companion

A rare friendship is that of Sumaili, a four-year-old gorilla of the Bronx, N.Y., zoo, and Tuffy, a six-months-old kitten. Sumaili towers over Tuffy when the 100-pound ape stands upright, but Tuffy shows no fear of the strength that could snuff out her life in a moment. The gorilla has learned that Tuffy likes to have her ears scratched, so while the kitten purrs contentedly on a zookeeper's lap, Sumaili gently strokes her neck. — Central Press Canadian.

First Operation To Let Child Eat Said Successful

KINGSTON (CP) — The first part of a two-stage operation to allow Rickey Orton, 3, to eat solid food for the first time since his birth was completed successfully Monday, an official at Kingston General Hospital said Tuesday.

The boy's condition was not disclosed nor did the official say how successful the first stage of the operation had been.

Rickey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Orton of Lombardy, about 50 miles north of here, was born with his stomach in the chest cavity above his diaphragm. His gullett, which should be about 10 inches long, is only about six and too narrow to pass solid foods.

The operation is to give the boy a normal gullet and replace his stomach. The second stage will be completed next week.

WOODSTOCK (CP)—City Council Monday night formally ratified a mill rate of 77.1. The record-shattering rate was an increase of 7.6 over last year's rate of 69.5. Council also gave tentative approval for a six-room addition to Woodstock Collegiate at an estimated cost of $141,600.

TO BAN SALE OF GAME

QUEBEC (CP)—The Legislative Assembly Monday gave first reading to a government bill prohibiting purchase, sale and possession for sale of deer, moose and caribou meat. Penalties for infractions would be from $50 to $300 in costs or jail from eight days to two months in default of payment.

U.S. Built Jets Said Sabotaged

COPENHAGEN (AP)—Saboteurs damaged four United States-built jet fighter planes on Denmark's biggest military airfield early today, it was officially announced.

It was the second incident of sabotage reported this year on the airfield at Karup.

The Danish armed forces' press office said the speedometers of four F-84 Thunderjets were found damaged during a routine check.

It was reliable reported that the speedometer tubes placed in the front part of the planes to measure the speed through wind pressure were twisted.

Three Thunderjets were sabotaged in the same way Jan. 30. At the time it was reported that the lives of the pilots would have been endangered if the damage had not been detected.

Omemee Author Passes Praise To Ghost Writer

OMEMEE (CP) — Omemee, a village on the Pigeon river 14 miles west of Peterboro, Tuesday found a third prominent writer among its population of 742 persons.

The Saturday Evening Post, on the newstands tomorrow, carries a first-person story under the name of garageman Wally Wollerman, who tells how he left Toronto for Omemee and why he wouldn't go back to the big city.

The community's other writers are Scott Young, internationally-known author, and Robert Thomas Allen, magazine writer and humorist.

But Wally spoils the story by insisting he's still a garage mechanic and not an author. He says Allen wrote the story for him and insisted on using the Wollerman byline.

Ambition That Got Mother Jailed Realized by Young Detroit Girl

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Jill Hollingsworth has won a movie role, a chance which cost her mother a long term in jail.

Jack Broder, an independent producer, said Monday night he signed the 18-year-old Detroit girl for a part in a picture, "Steel Bayonets" on which production is scheduled to start March 4.

The film will star John Ireland and Lon McCallister. Broder said Miss Hollingsworth's part may run only a few minutes but will be the principal feminine role.

"She may earn only about $500, but she'll be getting a chance," Broder said.

Jill's mother, Mrs. Beatrice Hollingsworth, 47, last Friday was sentenced in Detroit to five to 14 years in prison for embezzling $25,000 from a Detroit manufacturing firm for which she was a bookkeeper.

Mrs. Hollingsworth said she took the money to take her daughter to Hollywood and groom her for "a chance in show business I never had."

Miss Hollingsworth, who also won a television job as one of Ken Murray's "glamor lovelies," has said she will work all her life, if necessary, to repay the money taken by her mother.

Butler Slashes Operating Costs In New Budget

LONDON (AP)—The chancellor of the exchequer, R. A. Butler, disclosed Monday he will move forward in his next budget to one of the Conservative government's big targets—slashing government expenditure.

Butler published budget estimates for 1953-54 slicing some £145,500,000 ($407,400,000) off the cost of governing Britain compared with 1952-53.

That budget prediction includes savings of £254,000,000 on the civil ministries and the cost of the defence ministry. But mounting rearmament will increase the cost of the army, navy and air force by £109,000,000.

Butler said he will ask £2,457,401,323 for the civil ministries, revenue departments and defence ministry for the fiscal year beginning Easter Sunday.

The army, navy and air force will cost £1,493,000,000.

The estimates do not necessarily mean that Butler plans to make just about the biggest budget cut

It is normal to introduce supplementary estimates after the financial year has started, and the pre-budget estimates do not include the money Butler thinks he will need for servicing the national debt. That is disclosed only on budget day. But debt costs likely will be higher this year than in 1952-53, since interest rates have been rising.

Says Cabinet Should Study Magna Carta

OTTAWA (CP)—George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, suggested in the Commons Monday that the government should get a copy of the Magna Carta and study it.

He mentioned the ancient document of human rights and freedoms and quoted part of its sections endorsed in Britain in 1215 as he opposed extension of the government's Emergency Powers Act for another year.

Mr. Drew said the document sets out that no free men shall be imprisoned or outlawed or exiled nor in any way harmed except under law.

The government's emergency powers made it possible to arrest a person under secret order.

'Timeless Value' Gives Newspaper More Effect Says Psychologist

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Old-fashioned door - to - door political campaigning is outmoded and impractical in large-population areas, a psychology professor says.

"News columns of the daily news paper are the most effective information medium that can be used in any campaign," said Dr. Floyd L. Ruch, University of Southern California faculty member and president of Psychological Services, Inc., a psychological research concern.

"Word of mouth was once one of the major ways of spreading information," Dr. Ruch observed. "But the voter no longer depends upon his lodge master or union leader for 'the word'. He gets the information direct and makes up his own mind."

Dr. Ruch said the newspaper has a "timeless value" because it can be read at any time during the day while news and TV broadcasts must be heard at set times.

He said the daily papers' news columns "have the most profound effect of any medium in influencing group attitudes."

Copyright Fees' Decision Upheld

OTTAWA (CP)—The Exchequer Court Monday upheld a 1952 decision of the copyright appeal board doubling the copyright fees charged privately-owned radio stations in Canada.

Mr. Justice J. C. A. Cameron ruled that the three-man board had acted within its powers in basing the fees on the gross revenues of the stations rather than on the number of licensed radio sets in Canada.

T. J. Allard, general manager of the Canadian Association of Broadcasters, announced the judgment will be appealed to the Supreme Court of Canada.

The fees involved were paid by private stations to the Composers Authors and Publishers Association of Canada for use of music in its repertoire.

Until last year the fees were based on the number of licensed radios in Canada. The private stations as a group paid seven cents a set and the publicly-owned CBC an equal amount.

FRANKFORD

Receives Jewel

FRANKFORD — Franck Lodge No. 127, AF and AM, held its regular meeting Monday evening in the lodge rooms on Mill street. A special occasion marked the meeting, as Bro. Aeneas McAllister was presented with his 50-year jewel, in recognition of his 50 years as a Mason. Wor. Bro Ed Nelson made the presentation.

Bro. McAllister responded most fittingly, reminiscing a bit, and telling of events, and the work of the lodge in his time as a member. Citizens of Frankford join with the members of Lodge 127 in wishing Bro. McAllister many more years of health and happiness.

Arrangements have been completed by the 3M Young Adult Club' to present "Video-ettes" in the Community hall on April 8. They will be accompanied by a singing team who are well known in Toronto on radio and television.

Re-Dedicate Lives

Nearly 400 crowded the Frankford United Church and Sunday School Hall Friday night for the closing meeting of the current evangelistic services, with guest evangelist Rev. Lindsay Vogan, D.F.C. Mr. Vogan's closing sermon was "God's Call Today."

Following the regular service, over 100 people remained for a special covenant service of rededication, at which the sacrament of the Lord's Supper was taken.

The services were indeed most successful, and a great deal of credit is due to the many members of the four points of Frankford pastoral charge who worked so hard to make it so. Thanks is due to all Protestant denominations of the village who supported the mission so well.

Sorry to hear that Mr. Sid Martin is ill at his home.

Mrs. Clifford Smith called on Mrs. Rombough Friday.

The Frankford fire brigade had a busy time Saturday, as high winds caused chimney fires in number within the village. The fire engine got called out of the village early in the morning to the home of Harold Kemp, which was completely destroyed by fire.

In her address she said prayer is the world's greatest need today and explained how prayer affects the individual life. She also stressed the need of the power of prayer in the church and quoted verses from the Bible that applied to these days of unrest throughout the world.

Mrs. Earl Armstrong sang a most appropriate solo, "How Can I Help But Love Him," accompanied by Mrs. Hulin. The hymn "The Day Thou Gavest Lord" and the Aaronic Blessing made a fitting closing for this year's World Day of Prayer.

Irvin Threatens Dire Measures To Stop Leafs 'Putting Clutch' On Habs

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

"It was without a doubt one of the worst exhibitions I ever saw and that is not meant as an alibi for the defeat." It was Coach Don Barrett, of the Junior Black Hawks, speaking, referring to the 3-2 loss absorbed by his charges in Lindsay the other night.

"In that wild and woolly third period practically every rule in the book was broken and while the referee tried hard to keep the situation under control it was only a reasonable fascimile."

Barrett said that at one time the manager of the Lindsay club charged out on the ice to dispute an official decision and nothing was done about it. Players were charging one another in the centre ice zone and apparently a jolly old time was had by all.

However, the Hawks' coach said he was confident the "feathered" crew would take the Warriors tonight albeit he is not selling them short. "The boys haven't got over that defeat and the rough passage they had the other night, and this evening they will be flying. We've got to win this one."

You said it, bub. Lose tonight's tilt and your backs will be through the wall not up against it.

WIN THIS ONE!

Meanwhile the Glens trek to Kingston where they take on the Goodyears in the first of what should be a thriller-diller of a series. The Glens realize the importance of winning the first tilt and Coach "Red" Doran has the boys keyed up to fighting pitch. A large crowd of supporters will make the junket to Roddenville and the Glens won't be without plenty of vocal and moral encouragement.

Manager Don McNevin has arranged for two buses with accommodation for 66 passengers and overall tickets can be secured at the Glen Roy Creamery. The price is three bucks which includes bus fare and a reserved seat ticket to the Kingston Community Centre.

Tickets for the second game of the series, scheduled for Memorial Arena Friday night, are now on sale at Bill Cook's Cigar store and fans are urged to get their pasteboards right away. It looks like a sell-out from here so you'd better get 'em but quick.

MINOR HOCKEY!

The bantams, midgets and juveniles of the Belleville Minor Hockey Association swing into playdown action here tomorrow night, taking on Kingston teams in all three classifications in a triple-header, the first game (bantams) starting at seven o'clock. The banties won their first game in the goals-to-count series and they should tuck the round away tomorrow evening. The midgets and juveniles, however, went down to defeat and they have rather stiff goal margins to overcome. A little support at the box office would help the youngsters no end.

There will be no peewee hockey games at the Arena Saturday morning next due to the fact the Quinte Skating Club will be readying the ice surface for their colorful extravaganza slated for the evening. The peewees will play tomorrow afternoon instead, with two games scheduled, the first starting at 4.30 and the second following immediately. Red Wings and Canadiens start off the semi-final twin bill.

Doug Patterson, OMHA executive member of Stirling, announced today that the winners of the Kingston-Belleville minor playdowns will meet the winners of the Peterborough-Oshawa series. In midget "C" Stirling meets Bracebridge or Burks Falls, while in juvenile "C" Stirling or Wellington meets Richmond Hill or Bobcaygeon. In bantam "C" Wellington clashes with Cannington.

SPRING TRAINING!

There's quite a piece in the current Saturday Evening Post by John Lardner regarding "Spring Training." Lardner says the players don't like it, the owners don't like it, but it has become a custom no one dares to stop. He cites the cases of Monte Irvin and Billy Martin, injured a year ago in the spring grind, but go on and read the rest of it. It's mighty entertaining.

NICE ONE TO WIN!

The Belleville Moiras came from behind in brilliant effort to get the nod over the powerful Peterborough Marines in the first game of their points-to-count second round OABA intermediate "B" playdowns last night. The Moiras struck their stride after spotting the Marines a fair margin and went on to win. They take an eight-point margin to Peterborough with them on Friday night.

Says He Will Sew Fish Hooks On Hab Uniforms to Prevent Leafs 'Hooking and Holding'

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Is the Toronto Maple Leaf hockey club a going concern or just a holding company?

Dick Irvin, who would qualify as a disinterested party if his Montreal Canadiens weren't due to play a home-and-home series with the Leafs, claims the Toronto club does more holding and hooking than anyone else in the National Hockey League.

On the eve of his departure for tonight's game at Maple Leaf Gardens, the Montreal coach threatened to sew fish hooks on the Canadiens' uniforms to trap anyone putting the clutch on his boys.

"They won't be able to wiggle off the barbed hook and the referee will see what they've done."

Both Need Win

Both clubs can do with a win. Montreal is eight points off the pace-setting Detroit Red Wings. The Leafs are in third spot, only one point ahead of Boston Bruins who meet the cellar-dwelling New York Rangers tonight.

The Leafs welcomed back Ted Kennedy to their workouts Tuesday. It was Teeder's first ice venture since suffering a shoulder separation New Year's Night. He and Max Bentley worked out alone after the regular team practice, but Kennedy still isn't ready for league play.

The Bruins are hoping for a change of luck tonight as they meet the Rangers in New York. The Broadway Blues have beaten them five times in seven starts, largely on the efforts of a former Bruin, Paul Ronty. The Ranger centre scored five times against his old teammates, two of the goals bringing defeat to the fourth-placers. Wally Hergesheimer and Neil Strain will be flanking Ronty on the top ranger line.

'Reeky' Hopeful Kiner on Hand By March 1st

HAVANA, Cuba (AP)—"Meester Reeky" sat on a folding chair, not far from a mechanical baseball pitcher. Beads of perspiration were on his face.

Manuel, a Cuban groundkeeper, flicked away imaginary bits of paper with his foot, walked up to the chair and said:

"You hot man, no, Meester Reeky? This sun, she very hot. The hot, she worry you, Meester Reeky?"

Branch Rickey, the boss of Pittsburgh Pirates, grinned, shook his head vigorously.

"No, No! This hot—I mean heat—it is just what we need. That's what it takes to get a ball club going in spring training—good weather. The weather is perfect."

Manuel smiled.

"The first 10 days in a training camp are just arms and legs."

Manuel looked puzzled, and Rickey hastened to explain:

"The arms and legs," he said, waving his own, "need to be free and easy. Exercise in warm weather makes them so. We could do the exercising in a gymnasium in Pittsburgh, but without the weather, it wouldn't be the same."

"Bueno, bueno, I glad you like hot. I wish Pirates do good this year. They be better, maybe so?"

"Yes," Rickey said. "They have to be better this year. That's because they can go only one way—up." Manuel got that one, laughed.

"Last year's club was at best a 'hope so' club," Rickey went on. "This year it's an 'on the way' club."

"A pennant, maybe?" asked Manuel.

"No, even if we click, we're not likely to be good enough for pennant competition, but we're better all the way around."

Rickey said there was "no news" about Ralph Kiner, the $90,000 holdout hitting star, "but I'm hopeful he will be here by March 1."

Galt Defeats Teepees 4-2 In Last Clash

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Two teams assured of playoff positions in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series met Tuesday night for the last time in scheduled play this season.

St. Catharines Teepees, in fourth place, lost a 4-2 decision to Galt Black Hawks, who assured themselves of fifth place with the home-ice victory.

The win for the Hawks gave Galt a 3-2 edge in season's play with St. Catharines. The clubs played one 3-3 tie.

Yet with Galt's edge in games over the Teepees this season, they trail St. Catharines in the standings by nine points.

In the night's other game Kitchener-Waterloo Greenshirts struck for two goals in the final period to down Windsor Spitfires 5-3 in Kitchener.

The victory gave the Greenshirts a 3-2 edge in season's play with the Spitfires. Both played one 3-3 tie.

Windsor is in eighth place while Kitchener trails in ninth and last place by four points.

Moe Mantha, Ken Wharram, Hec Lalonde and Minnie Menard scored for the Hawks. Brian Cullen notched both for St. Catharines.

Grieg Hicks blasted three for Kitchener and picked up an assist to jump from fourth to second place among the scoring leaders.

Buddy Horne and Glen Cressman scored the others for the winners in a game that saw 21 penalties. Windsor marksmen were Bob Louttit, Bob Brown and Ron Graham.

In the first playoff activity in the Northern Ontario Hockey Association's Junior A series Timmins-Porcupine Combines, winners of six NOHA Junior A championships in succession, came from behind to score a 5-3 overtime victory over Falconbridge Combines.

Barry Flyers travel to Guelph to meet the Biltmores in the only OHA Junior game tonight.

'Allie, Mickey' Sign Contracts

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP)—New York Yankees announced Tuesday that pitcher Allie Reynolds and outfielder Mickey Mantle have agreed to baseball contract terms for the 1953 season.

There was no official announcement of the figures but reports were that Reynolds will draw $38,000 and Mantle $18,000.

Reynolds, who won 20 games last season and was a World Series standout, quit camp Monday after he had failed to reach agreement.

He demanded $40,000, the salary paid last year to pitcher Vic Raschi and shortstop Phil Rizzuto.

Mantle, batting star of the last World Series and Joe DiMaggio's replacement in centrefield, is expected in camp early next week.

Meyer Deal 'Flabbergasted the 'Lip'; Giants Unhappy Over Recent Trade

By GAYLE TALBOT

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)—It took only a small amount of scratching beneath the surface to uncover the fact that New York Giants are not happy over the recent deal through which Brooklyn obtained the services of such a starting pitcher as Russ Meyer, previously one of the bulwarks of the Phillies staff.

Four clubs were involved, and a quantity of secondary talent. The Phils wound up with first-baseman Earl Torgeson of Boston Braves, who hit only .230 last season, and Cincinnati Reds were supposed to have pocketed $50,000, which was tossed into the kitty by the Phils.

Brooklyn gave up no first-line strength, surrendered no player who conceivably could have been counted upon to help in the coming race, and yet obtained a sure-fire starter, a potential 15- or 18-game winner, just when it sorely needs same. The Phils gave up their third-best pitcher, along with cash, and got an infielder who is supposed to be downgrade.

Tried to Trade

"All I can tell you is that the deal flabbergasted me," said manager Leo Durocher of the Giants. "I know that Brooklyn got itself a pretty good pitcher out of the deal. I've heard a lot about Meyer having a temper and being a hard loser, but I never saw any sign of it.

"I tried to talk trade with the Phils' manager, Steve O'Neill, at the winter meetings out here. I told him I was interested in some of his pitching, and that I wasn't talking about Curt Simmons and Robin Roberts. I told him I knew I couldn't get them but would be happy to talk about his third best.

"Steve asked me who that would be, and I got a consensus of the other National League managers right there. They said he might be willing to deal me Meyer for Bobby Thomson. I told him not to be silly, and before it was over he was telling me he wouldn't deal Meyer even-up for Thomson.

"That's how much Steve thought of Meyer, and all he's got to show for him now is a first baseman who hit five home runs last year for Boston."

It was obvious in the last World Series that the Dodgers had only one serious shortage — depth in their pitching staff. There was only one thing Charlie Dressen's team needed to pick up during the winter—a solid starting pitcher. It has obtained one in a deal which defies ready explanation.

Moiras Defeat Peterborough 64-56 In Thrilling Basketball Playoff

By ED MACDONALD

Take fast breaking plays, add deadly shooting and good blocking, stir well with mild hysteria, and season with a near lynching, and what have you got? Why, you have last night's thriller-diller of a basketball game between the Belleville Moiras and the Peterborough Marines, that's what you got, son! The Moiras managed to come through on top of a 64-56 score in this first of OBA playdown home and home total point series played in the BCI gym, but it was no rout by any means.

The Petes supplied the fast-breaking plays and a good part of the accurate shooting. Good blocking and the balance of the deadly shooting was the Moira contribution. A houseful of fans provided the hysteria, and some of their number did not see eye to eye with the referee and as a result were in a mood to lynch that hard working gentleman for real or fancied injustices.

Grab Early Lead

Peterborough jumped into an early 14 point lead before the Belles caught onto their fast break, and for a few horrible moments there were some dark clouds on the banks of the Moira. But the locals tightened up their defence and fought back with a full head of steam and had cut the margin to two points at half time. At the intermission the Petes held a 33-31 bulge. The final half was a ding-dong battle, with the Moira defence providing the locals with the edge they needed.

Johnny Batchelor stole the show with his deadly pot shots, scoring 20 big ones for the Belles. As usual Ed McClay showed a strong two-way game and despite a tenacious defence, managed to sink 17 markers. Defensively, Batchelor, Dousett, Garrow and Muirhead did yeoman service. John Hayman celebrated his recent 'blessed event' with 7 points. Stewart and Edgar were top men for the Marines with 14 points each. They both uncorked some dandy hook shots at times that were beautiful to see. Stewart fouled out during the last quarter, which was a good thing as far as Bill Spaffords' charges were concerned. These Peterborough types are not going to be a pushover in the second game to be played on their home floor Friday night. The winner of this series goes against Oshawa Saturday in Oshawa. Should the Belleville hoopsters knock off the Petes then there will be more excitement up and coming in the BCI gym. Watch for particulars and keep your tonsils at the ready, son!

Lineup:

Belleville Moiras: Batchelor 20, Soules 5, Dousett 5, Garrow 1, Muirhead 9, McClay 17, Pappas, Massey, Fitzpatrick, Hayman 7.

Peterborough Marines: Dibben 6, Stewart 14, Edgar 14, Northcott 4, Smith 6, Fry 4, Gillespie 3, Burns 5.

Port Arthur To Represent North Ontario

PORT ARTHUR (CP)—A Port Arthur rink with a wealth of curling experience will represent Northern Ontario at the Canadian curling championships at Sudbury March 2-6.

Leading the rink, first from Port Arthur to compete in the classic, is a Manitoba-schooled skip bearing one of Canada's best known curling names: Grant Watson, whose younger brother, Ken, is widely known as "Mr. Curling."

Grant, 49, who is spending his first winter in Port Arthur, came here from Winnipeg to set up a business. In company with Ken, he has played on three Canadian championship rinks in the 23 years he has been curling.

Two other members of the rink, Don McEwan and Archie Grant, gained their curling experience in neighboring Fort William where they formerly lived.

McEwan, 32, is the youngest member of the rink although he has been curling for 18 years. Playing third, he was recruited as a replacement for Lorne Wakefield who was unable to accompany the rink to the Northwestern Ontario Curling Association championships at Madsen last year. He has been with the foursome ever since.

Second stone is Frank Sargeant, one of the Lakehead's best exponents of the game. The oldest member of the rink, he took up the game 36 years ago.

Sargeant, 50, has missed representing the Port Arthur club only once in the six years the Northwestern Ontario championship has been held. On a rink with McEwan, he won the NWOCA championship four years ago, but lost in Northern Ontario playoffs.

The Port Arthur rink won the right to enter the Canadian championships by winning a three-rink round-robin competition at Kirkland Lake last week. A Haileybury rink skipped by Dick Fleming represented the Timiskaming and Northern Ontario Curling Association and Milt Moran's Sudbury four represented the Northern Ontario Curling Association.

Golfers Plan Bumper Season; Elect Mylrea

By W. R. WHEATLEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

MONTREAL (CP)—The Royal Canadian Golf Association at its 54th annual meeting recently elected A. J. Mylrea of Toronto president and laid plans for a bumper golf year featuring the Canadian Open at Toronto Scarboro and the Canadian Amateur at Montreal Kanawaki. Mylrea succeeds Colin Rankin of Montreal.

The executive officers also got in some long-range work aimed at the next Americas Cup competition which brings together teams of amateurs from Canada, the United States and Mexico.

The biennial tournament had its inauguration at Seattle last year, the U.S. winning. The 1954 venue will be at an Ontario course not yet selected.

The dates were set for Aug. 12-14, preceding the 1954 triple-title Canadian amateur competitions — the provincial team matches and Canadian junior championship Aug. 14 and the Canadian amateur championship Aug. 16-21.

No action was taken regarding a one-day conflict in dates chosen for this year's gathering of Canadian amateurs and the new, recently-announced $15,000 Labatt open tournament—both events at Montreal courses.

The conflicting date is Saturday, Aug. 22. The Labatt open is scheduled for Aug. 20-23 at Montreal Summerlea. Saturday is usually set aside by the RCGA for Willingdon Cup play by provincial teams and for the Canadian junior championship. Sunday is an off-day. The amateur proper begins Monday and continues through the week—Aug. 24-29 this year at Kanawaki.

The RCGA expects a strong representation of ranking U.S. money-winners at the Canadian Open in Toronto July 8-11. The 1954 open will be held at the Point Grey course in Vancouver.

The board of governors for Ontario includes Robert Abbott of Peterborough. Special appointees named by the board include George T. Honer, Kirkland Lake, and C. Ross Somerville, London, Ont.

MARMORA

Norwood Loses To Marmora By 9-4 Score

Marmora—Marmora won their second game with Norwood in the play offs of the Northern Section of the T.V.L. on the former's ice on Monday evening by the score of 9-4.

The ice was in fair condition but play was slow. It was also clean, only seven penalties being issued and these for minor offences.

Top scorers for Marmora were Doran and K. Trumble each having three goals and an assist to their credit. Smith, Mantle and F. Stewart were the other scorers. Although not scoring, E. Trumble got four assists and Darrah three.

Norwood did not draw blood until the second period, the veteran Creighton getting the opener on Williams' assist and Williams scoring unassisted before the period closed.

Landon got both goals for Norwood in the third scoring on assists from Stewart and Tompkins, who stood out for aggressiveness throughout the encounter; 550 watched the game. Weather conditions permitting, the third game will be at Norwood on Wednesday evening.

Norwood: Goal, Nicholls; defence, Wootton, Tompkins; centre, R. Stewart; wings, Brickton, Landon. Alternates, Scott, Williams, Creighton.

Marmora: Goal, Killian; defence, E. Trumble, Leonard; centre, Darrah; wings, Doran, K. Trumble. Alternates, Maynes, Mantle, Smith, Jones, Loveless, F. Stewart, Gray, C. Trumble.

Referees: P. Scarrow, Trenton; V. Goyer, Belleville.

PLAN NHL TOUR ABROAD

TORONTO (CP)—Montreal Canadiens and Chicago Black Hawks of the National Hockey League plan a 12-game exhibition tour of Europe this spring, Montreal coach Dick Irvin announced Tuesday night. It will be the first time that two NHL teams have made a tour of Europe since the Canadiens and Detroit Red Wings journeyed overseas in the late '30s.

FRANKFORD

6 RD Defeated In First Game TVL Playoffs

Frankford — Frankford carried their season-long domination of 6 RD into the first game of the playoffs, as they handed the airmen an 11-6 setback. The game provided a lot of good hockey with tempers flaring a couple of times. Referees Cain and Williams, however, kept things well in hand and the boys settled down to the game.

Foster scored first for Frankford, with Cooke picking up an assist, and half a minute later, Meloche scored from Schmidt to tie the count. Rankin put the locals ahead again, Graham getting the assist. Three minutes later the same combination duplicated the feat. Bone scored for Frankford, from Rankin and Graham, before 6 RD could counter again, Melchoe teaming with Schmidt again. Foster scored for Frankford, from Cooke and Courtney, Watson from Rankin, and Rankin from Graham. The first period ended with Frankford leading 7-2.

Watson scored from Graham at the start of the second period for Frankford, and Meloche countered with his third goal for the airmen, this one a solo effort. Watson scored again, from Graham and Rankin. Attrill got the second goal of the period for 6 RD, and that period ended with Frankford ahead 9-4.

Scoring was even in the third period as well. Graham scored from Watson for Frankford, and Hood from Farmer. Attrill teamed with Meloche for 6 RD, and Brill scored from Lomax and Graystone.

Frankford's powerhouse line was the Rankin-Watson,-Graham combination, which was in on eight of the eleven tallies. Rankin and Watson are known as slow, but methodical skaters, and, as one spectator put it, "All Graham had to do was slow down to their speed, and they had a passing combination that was out of this world." Meloche played his usual fine game for 6 RD, and that was their big gun.

Penalties:

First period—None.

Second period—Bone, Graystone, Lomax, Cooke.

Third period—Pukancik, Meloche, Schmidt.

6 R.D.—Goal, McGinnes; defence, Chevis, Schmidt; centre, Attrill; wings, Cowick, Lomax, alternates, Bailey, Meloche, Graystone, Daigle, Brill, [illegible].

Frankford—Goal, Foshay; defence, Bone, Pukancik; centre, Courtney; wings, Foster, Cooke; alternates, Graham, Carey, Stephens, Hood, Farmer, Wright, Watson, Belford, Rankin.

Highmame, owned by Madame J. Boucher of Drummondville, Que., took an easy double-heat triumph in the featured class A trot, sixth in the harness program.

Barons Swamp Hershey 10-2

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The league-leading Cleveland Barons Tuesday night swamped Hershey Bears 10-2 in an American Hockey League game. At St. Louis, Syracuse Warriors defeated St. Louis Flyers 8-5.

Ike Hildebrand and Eddie Olson paced Cleveland with three goals apiece. Glen Sonmore scored two for Barons and singletons were chalked up by Ray Ceresino and Ray Ross. Hershey's two goals were by Lorne Ferguson.

Sid McNabney paced Syracuse with two markers.

Urges Quebec Clubs to Stick By Association

QUEBEC (CP)—Frank Byrne, owner of Quebec junior Citadelles, said Tuesday he supports the Quebec Amateur Hockey Association's decision that Ron Atwell should play for the rival Montreal junior Canadiens—but not until next season.

"I believe Atwell belongs to Canadiens," said Byrne, "but I don't think the kid should play this year."

Nevertheless, Byrne said he urged all Quebec clubs to stick with the QAHA, which is threatened with suspension by the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association if it stands on its decision to allow Canadiens to use the 18-year-old right-winger.

The CAHA claims Atwell is not eligible to play in the QAHA branch because of Ontario Hockey Association draft rules. The Quebec body claims Atwell is eligible under the free-agent clause because he stayed out of hockey a year.

The CAHA has called a meeting to deal with the case Saturday in Montreal.

"The case is too important and too complicated to be settled at an emergency meeting," said Byrne.

He suggested it be postponed until the CAHA meeting next spring. Meanwhile, Atwell would not play.

Belleville Service Darts League

The Big "A" team edged the league-leading Hasty Pees team by a 6-5 score at the weekly session of the Belleville Service Darts League.

In the other games the ANAF's whipped Corbins 9-2; Mail Carriers nudged the 9th Anti Tank Regiment 6-5 and the Brewers drew the nod over the CNR with a similar count.

Stan Melbourne, Big "A" and R. Winstanley, Hasty Pees were top scorers with a three-dart toss of 120 points.

The standing: Hasty Pees, 166; Big "A" 153; 9th Anti Tank 121; ANAF 106; Brewers 97; Mail Carriers 93; Corbins 88 and CNR 86.

Savoie, Carter In Title Fight

WASHINGTON (AP)—Col. Harvey L. Miller of the National Boxing Association said Tuesday another challenge has been issued to lightweight champion Jimmy Carter of New York.

Miller said he has received a cheque for $2,500 from Emile Gautier, chairman of the Montreal athletic commission, as a guarantee for a fight between Carter and Armand Savoie of Montreal.

Gautier told Miller the Montreal promoters would guarantee Carter at least $30,000.

MONTREAL (CP) — The International League announced today a 154-game schedule for its 70th season.

Brantford Reds Even Series With Mercurys

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Finalists in the Northern Ontario Hockey Association Senior A southern group were decided Tuesday night.

Sudbury Wolves advanced to the finals by defeating Sault Ste. Marie (Mich.) Indians 3-2 in Sudbury while North Bay Trappers swept their best-of-five series with Sault (Ont.) Greyhounds in three straight games. The Trappers won 8-3 on home ice.

In the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A semi-finals, Brantford Redmen, who finished the season in fourth spot, tied the best-of-seven series with the league-leading Owen Sound Mercurys at one game each with a 6-4 victory.

At the Sault Sudbury needed an overtime session to win and take the best-of-five series, 3-0. In the extra time Tatter McLellan scored the winner at the 35-second mark. Other Sudbury marksmen were Gordie Heale and Mauno Kauppe. Lumley and Peterson scored for the Indians.

North Bay had little trouble with the Greyhounds, NOHA champions for the last three seasons. They rolled into a 4-2 first period lead, made it 2-1 going into the third and added two more in the last.

George Gosselin, Chick Cecchini and Don Hogan fired two each for the Trappers. Frank Ringler and Rick Hogg added the others. Hec Bozzo notched two for the losers and Johnny Offidani scored the other.

Brantford and Owen Sound were tied 1-1 going into the second period and 2-2 going into the third but the Redmen outscored the Mercurys 4-2 in the finale.

Don Oberholtzer and Jackie taylor paced the winners with two goals each. Bill Shill and Sam Kennedy tallied the others.

Buck Forslund, Tom Burlington, Ralph Hoskings and Harry Kazarian scored for Owen Sound.

The third game of the series will be played in Brantford Friday night.

Suspend Davey's Mgr., Trainer

CHICAGO (AP)—Boxer Chuck Davey's manager, Hector Knowles and trainer Issy Kline were suspended for 30 days Tuesday by the Illinois athletic commission for "loose talk" after the Davey-Gavilan fight Feb. 11.

The commission made its decision after reports were published that Davey was not in good physical condition for the welterweight title bout with Kid Gavilan.

Gavilan was awarded the bout on a technical knockout after Davey failed to answer the 10th-round bell.

Knowles had appeared before the commission Feb. 16 and testified that "I may have said that Davey three weeks previously had a slight cold." But he added that Davey was "in excellent shape" for the fight.

Form New Club At YMCA

As a result of a meeting recently of a group of weightlifting and body building enthusiasts with physical director Di Diamantides at the Y.M.C.A., a "Y" weightlifting and body building club" was formed. During elections, Bill McMurter was elected president of the club, Ray Scott secretary and Ken Carr-Braint as treasurer.

The aim of the club will be to promote weightlifting and body building in Belleville and will be open to both advance and novice members. Regular workouts will be held two or three times weekly; monthly gatherings of all members will be organized with speakers on health, and body-building topics; and intramural and inter-Y contests will highlight the year-round program.

The group studied the possibility of moving the present body building facilities in the Y to a larger room and adequately furnished in the basement, as it was the general feeling of the group that a large number of men in Belleville would want to take advantage of this opportunity.

The board of directors of the Y, after recommendation by the physical education committee, have approved of the change, and members of the weightlifting club donating of their time and labor are changing a part of the old bowling alleys, which, when completed will be an up-to-date weightlifting and body building room.

Body building with the help of weights is a fast growing activity in Canada, and clubs are now functioning in every city from coast to coast.

FORT WILLIAM (CP) — The Lakehead has had more than one unusual note in February. Patsy Gammond, 7, arrived home with an armful of pussy-willows, and other people reported sighting a robin and a crow.

MOOSE JAW, Sask. (CP)—It was a timely departure for Jack Johnstone. A few hours after he had handed over his long-time home to a new owner, a careening truck wrecked the fence and front porch.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

It was a rough night. We got vulnerable right off the bat. As dealer, my partner then opened with three hearts. This was doubled and we went down five tricks for a loss of 1400 points.

Next hand was opened by me with a diamond. My partner jumped to two no-trump. Next opponent bid three hearts and I passed. My partner jumped to six diamonds and we went down doubled for 800.

Next hand was opened by my partner with a bid of one club. My conservative response was two clubs. My partner bid four no-trump and I bid five clubs in reply; the signal for showing no aces.

It is true that my reply was untrue, because I had an ace and two kings. But my hope was to slow down my partner and maybe win the rubber. But partner bid six clubs; down 800.

Partner gave me a sour look and remarked: "You keep underbidding all the time and I am trying to make up for it." So, I apoligized. What else could I do?

Next hand was opened with a spade by opponent and I stuck in a simple overcall of two hearts. Maybe I should have kept my mouth shut. But it did not look dangerous with the hand shown here:

♥Q J 10 7 6 4
♦None
♣A Q J 5 3

Furthermore, a simple overcall is warning to partner that my hand is not strong in high card strength; that he should leave it alone; that my bid is based on my suit being trump.

If a defender has a good hand he can ask partner to bid. This he does by saying double; a signal known as a takeout double. A simple overcall, therefore, denies such strength.

But my partner had six diamonds to the jack and decided it was better in his suit. He was doubled and went down another 1400. It was all my fault. I should have "stood" in bed.

Jim Arness, right, is seen in an important supporting role. Ryan is cast as a renegade who attempts to establish a Western land and cattle empire and is brought to justice by his brother, played by Rock Hudson.

AT THE BELLE—Bing Crosby and Bob Hope sing and dance as only they can in Paramount's "Road to Bali," their funniest show yet, and their first in Technicolor, Dorothy Lamour is co-starred with the funsters, and features six song hits. The film is continuing today and Thursday at the Belle Theatre.

Mustangs Win Third Straight

HAMILTON (CP)—Western Mustangs Tuesday night won their third straight game of the senior intercollegiate basketball season by defeating McMaster Marauders 76-64. Chris Ellis with 22 points and Roy Truant with 21 paved the way to victory.

FIORE FLOORS CANADIAN

BROOKLYN (AP) — Carmine Fiore, 146¾, of Brooklyn turned tiger Tuesday night to stop Marcel (Rocky) Brisebois, 146½, of Montreal in 1:41 of the first round of a scheduled 10-round fight at Ridgewood Grove. Fiore, a slight 8-5 favorite, rushed from his corner at the bell and floored the Canadian with a left hook to the head and a right to the jaw for a count of nine.

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

FOR THURSDAY, FEB. 26, 1953

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—Be most diplomatic in your acts and speech. A. M. indications could be "rough' if you are not on your guard. Circumstances tend toward irritation.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus)—Nothing really excitable in day's outlook. But don't indulge things that could be misconstrued, provocative. Use the winning smile!

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini)—A day that will match your best. Be alert, but not too aggressive. Above all, avoid strain, excessive forcing.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer)—Planetary influences favor business, military interests in general; not frivolities, pointless pleasures. Try to get regular rest, relaxation.

July 24 to August 22 (Leo)—You may be tripped by false judgment, deductions or leads from others, so think well before acting. It's no reflection on your own intelligence to take good advice.

August 23 to September 23 (Virgo)— Friendly aspects all day, particularly for things that are directly your concern, family and money matters. Enjoy your work; don't make a fuss over minor things.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra)—Stars in mixed configuration as to value for your day. If you are not too demanding or positive, you can garner some gains. If not, watch your step!

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio)—Rays now indicate you can expect new benefits from well managed effort in proper channels. However, you may overestimate your ability. Take care!

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius)—Whatever the demands on you today, aim to be pleasant, agreeable about it. Charm, smile and co-operation are unbeatable.

December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn)—Be on guard in early hours, especially in financial and business matters. Stars urge more minute study, planning before acting. Be extra conservative.

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius) — Rather non-stimulating period. You will need utmost effort to progress. Special interests need extra study, preparations. Could be big day if handled rightly.

February 21 to March 20 (Pisces)—Like Aquarius now, you are partially out on the limb alone. Don't saw yourself off! You can avoid that if you know what is best before acting.

YOU BORN TODAY: Your planet favorable most of day. Your chart indicates good things in store for worthy efforts. Neptune — indicating emotionalism, artistry, enthusiasm and a keen sense and intuition—should guide you on your way to greater gains. Avoid being too self-effacing. Cultivate self-confidence. Birthdate of: Victor Hugo, French novelist, dramatist, poet.

READ

READ — Mr. William Callaghan, an aged and highly respected resident, passed away on Friday evening at his home on the 5th Concession.

The pupils of S. S. No. 20 enjoyed a holiday on Friday and Monday due to the sickness of the teacher, Miss Jean Hopkins.

Mr. Lorne McKenny of Oshawa spent the week-end at his home here.

Mr. Owen McAvoy, a former resident of this locality, passed away at his home in Albany, last week.

Many friends of the late Mr. George Jarrell were sorry to hear of his death in Belleville, on Friday last.

Many residents are confined to their beds with an attack of the influenza.

Why We Say--

BLACKMAIL
9-30

. . . False tax

This word always has had an underhand meaning — originally, though, it was a tax (mail means tax in England) paid by Scotch and English farmers living on the border between these countries during the border warfare. The mail or tax was paid against government consent and was finally banned or "blacklisted" by law.

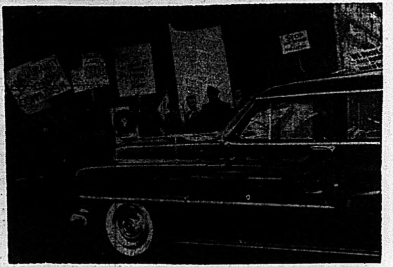
Any Excuse is Good Enough to Celebrate

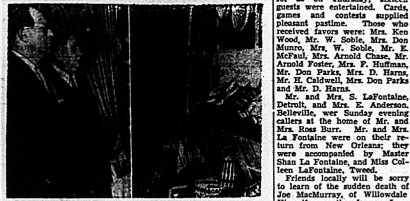
February marked the celebration of the New Year in South Korea, and these youngsters forget the war and the untold hardships it has brought for a happy moment to mark the occasion. In a see-saw contest, the youngster at right looks like a sure winner. — Central Press Canadian.

Reception Committee Has No Welcome for Vishinsky



These pickets were on hand to greet Russia's Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky when he arrived in New York to attend the U.N. General Assembly. The black limousine in foreground was carrying the great man from the pier when the pickets from various Russian refugee organizations waved their signs and tried to rush the car. Police kept them back. One of the signs reads: "U.N. is no place for Vishinsky. Prison is his place." — Central Press Canadian.

Canadian Envoy Admires Norwegian Crafts



Norwegian handiwork is admired by the Canadian minister in Norway, J. B. C. Watkins, right, as the Travellers' Club celebrated its 25th anniversary. President of the club, Egil Christensen, conducted the Canadian minister through the show. — Central Press Canadian.

Someone to Love

By Irene Lonnen Ernhart

"It doesn't matter really, Tod," Jenny whispered. "It isn't the ceremony —but the years that come after it that matter anyway. I hope they'll be good years for us both and last the rest of our lives."

"I hope so too," Tod said slowly. He felt a little shaky, wishing all the time that he had never known anyone but Jenny, that he had never been in love with anyone else. "Well," he said rather grimly, "from now on we'll do it right, at least. Bridal suites and champagne and stuff."

But whatever Tod meant by "champagne and stuff", there was very little luxury on the honeymoon trip.

They had meant to reach Chicago by evening, but something went wrong with the car, and they were stranded in northern Indiana.

Of their honeymoon Jenny remembered more clearly than anythings else the cramped little tourist cottage where they spent the night together; the sleazy blue spread on the chipped white enameled iron bed, the old insurance calendar on the wall, the fly-specked light bulb, the smoky cracked mirror on the dresser; and the smell of frying hamburgers from the all-night truck stop restaurant nearby mingled, with the country smells of hay and clover and honeysuckle and dust; the roar of traffic pounding by on the state highway, plus the sound of music from the jukebox in the roadside tavern.

—VII—

Jenny and Tod had planned to settle down in the house on Catalpa street, at least until they were adjusted to each other. But they returned from Chicago to find thef inal eviction note waiting in the mail box.

"Well," Tod said lightly, "if worst comes to worst we can always live in Ma's apartment. I'm paying the rent for it anyhow till they can find something cheaper. After all, Joe could sleep on the couch in the living room."

"But Tod, you know what they says about living with your in-laws."

Tod laughed and gathered her in his arms and kissed her. "Goose," he whispered, "what difference does it make where we live as long as we're together."

"No difference," she whispered back, the words coming out muffled. "I'd live in a tent."

"Maybe it's a good thing," he pointed out. "I'd hate to live here anyway. It's an undesirable neighborhood."

Jenny stiffened ever so slightly. "Well," she admitted, "perhaps it is, but Pop and I lived here so long it seems like home to me."

"That's just it darling. You're used to it and don't really see how sordid and shabby it really is. I'd hate for any of my old friends to find me living in a joint like this."

There was a short silence, and Jenny, realizing they could very easily quarrel, put her hands on either side of his face and said softly, "It's silly to discuss whether we should stay here when we can't anyway."

It was the first hint of a certain queer streak of stubbornetao i queer streak of snobishness in Tod. She changed the subject. "I suppose we ought to go over and see your family right away."

"No!" The word came out sharply, but the surprise in her face seemed to embarrass him. "I didn't mean to sound so abrupt Jenny, but I'll go around and see Ma first and sort of smooth over her feelings before I take you to see her."

You mean she'll really be angry because you've married me?"

"Well," he parried, "it'll be quite a surprise. But I can needle Ma into almost anything. She'll come around. Only—well you can see how it is. She ought to be prepared."

The girls at the shop welcomed her back gaily the next morning, and she fell back into the easy routine of her work. But all day long a feeling of dread seemed to snowball inside of her.

Nina had kindly offered to store the furniture that Jenny wanted to keep from the house on Catalpa street, a solid walnut bureau with acorn handles a cherry table and a ladderback chair. Nina also offered some advice. "I'd go live in one room somewhere before I'd settle down with the Duncan's Jenny. I don't care how nice people are, that sort of thing just never works out."

"But it's only temporary, Nina, and I'm sure they'll try as hard as I will to make the best of it."

But as she and Tod drove toward the Duncan apartment that evening, she felt anything but calm.

Joe, sprawled on the davenport reading the paper, did not bother to rise as they came in. He glanced up and spoke, but it was obvious he was miffed at having been shunted out of his room.

Ma had washed her hair and Harriet was winding it up in pin curls for her.

"Here's Jenny, Ma," Tod said, as they stepped into the kitchen Jenny started forward but the grim look on Ma's face stopped her.

"You might as well get it straight right now, Jenny," she said, "Tod made a perfect fool of himself gettin' married just to spite Liz Conover."

"Now, Ma." Tod's face turned crimson.

"You know it wasn't anything else than that!" Ma went on. "You just wanted to show Liz you could get married too. But I never thought a son of mine would be dumb enough to cut off his nose to spite his face."

Harriet paused in her work, and there was a smug expression on her dark face as she put in her nickle's worth. "Liz probably won't even see that little old notice stuck in with all the other marriage licences, so I don't know what good it done you."

"Cut it out!" Tod said. "I didn't marry Jenny to spite Liz. This is certainly a fine way to welcome us."

There was a long chilly silence. Harriet began twisting strands of Ma's gray hair into pin curls again. After a moment or two Ma spoke again sullenly. "Put your stuff in the bedroom. Joe got his things moved out. Where he's goin' to hang his clothes I don't know, 'less it's in the pantry."

"Ma, apologize to Jenny."

Ma ignored him. "I ain't got time to get any fancy breakfasts for anybody either. It's enough to get my own and Harriet's and Joe's 'fore I go to work."

"I expect to help around the apartment with the work," Jenny said, her first words.

Ma's plump face didn't soften in the least. "I don't want anybody messin' in my kitchen neither, after I've got things red up and gone to work!"

'Come on, Jenny," Tod said. She followed him into the living room where he picked up their suitcases. He motioned her into the bedroom, set the suitcases down and shut the door, and then turned to her.

"Tod, we can't stay!" Jenny whispered.

"They'll get over being hateful. Don't pay any attention to 'em."

—VIII—

One day Jenny asked Tod how much the apartment was costing him.

"I don't ask you what you do with your money, Jenny!" he said, flaring up.

"But Tod, we ought to pool our resources. You are going back to college this fall. That'll take money. You said Markwood costs more than the State University. I asked about this apartment, because when we moved in you said your mother was looking for something less expensive."

"She is looking. Places are hard to find." They were in the tiny bedroom. Jenny was sure the rest of the family could hear them. She lowered her voice. "Are we going to go on living here, with no privacy and no feeling of permanence?"

"What's wrong with this apartment? I'm paying $150 a month for it. It ought to be good enough for anybody. That's quite a chunk of money."

"Of course it is, darling, and that's the point I'm trying to make. When you quit your job and start to school, how are we going to pay that much? I only make $40 at the shop—"

"I've been thinking about it."

"Why doesn't Joe get a job?"

"Ma's been trying to get him on at the tire factory. I spoke to her about Joe the other day, if you must know." He walked to the window now and stood there sullenly looking out into the darkened street. His broad shoulders sagged a little and his hair was rumpled.

The sound of traffic floated up from the street below. The muted blast of Joe's radio came out of the living room, and water was running in the bathroom adjoining, where Harriet was washing out some things.

"If we live here this winter I don't know how you'll be able to study," Jenny said, "and besides—I just hate it!" She really hadn't meant to tell him that, but it had burst out of her before she thought.

"For heaven's sake," Tod cried in exasperation, as he turned about, "this heat is bad enough without your needling me all the time! Don't you suppose I hate it too!" he shouted. "I despise the cheapness of it all, the whole tawdry commonplace way we live! There's no fun in it anywhere. This wasn't the kind of life I planned to have. I hate my job, this apartment, having nothing to look forward to."

Jenny stared at him in shocked disbelief, and then she whispered hoarsely, "Go on—say it." She clung with one hand on the foot of the hideous waterfall bed. "You're sorry———"

Jenny's brown eyes swam with quick tears.

Tod's eyes softened and he came toward her and put his arms around her and held her close. "Never, never," he whispered, rubbing his chin in her hair, "think I'm sorry I got married, Jenny. You'll have to forgive my temper. I didn't mean half the things I said. It's the heat."

Jenny fell into the habit of staying in town quite often with Nina on those nights when Tod was out of town. They would cook a quick supper at Nina's apartment, and then they'd go to a show, or spend the evening together. If she didn't stay all night at Nina's it would be late when she got home. And one Sunday morning she heard Ma talking about it to Tod.

"Sometimes it's 11 o'clock, and she don't say a word about where she's been or nothin'. And I sometimes wonder when she says she's stayin' all night with that Nina."

"Ma, cut it out. Jenny's not that sort."

"Little you know about what sort she is."

"Cut it out, I said! If Jenny wants to go someplace in the evening—"

"Mark my words, you'll find out what kind she is!"

Jenny had slept late, but she threw on her robe and came into the kitchen where they were eating breakfast.

Tod shoved back his chair and came around to Jenny, put his arm across her shoulders and said grinning, "Hello, sleepyhead!" He pulled out a chair for her, got the coffee pot and poured her coffee. Jenny felt her anger melting. She had intended having it out with Ma and Tod then and there, but the way Tod bustled around looking after her comfort and the way Ma got up and flounced into the other room. made it impossible.

Then came a Thursday evening in August, and Tod was not due home until Friday. Nina had suggested that she and Jenny really splurge—have dinner at a nice place and then take in a new show. Jenny even had a new dress, a sheer black crepe she bought cheaply from Max because summer was almost over. And she had found a hat to go with it, a Dutch bonnet with a lacy brim.

They were to dine at Greenbriar, the swankiest place in town, soft lights, dreamy music and wonderful cocktails. They had just been seated when Jenny, happening to glance toward the door, saw Tod.

Frantic Mother Fails To Rescue 3 Babies In Fire

Struggles With Firemen As Montreal Home Detroyed

MONTREAL (CP)—Three small children burned to death despite their mother's frantic efforts to rescue them when fire destroyed their small, wooden, 1½-storey home on the south shore of the St. Lawrence Wednesday.

They were Marjolaine Lamoureux, 5, Pierre, 4, and Monique, 2.

The children had been left alone in their house at Brosseau Station, near Laprairie, Que., while their mother, Mrs. Yvette Lamoureux, went out with a six-year-old son, Laurent, to mail some letters.

Mrs. Lamoureux returned to her home to find it in flames.

Eyewitnesses said she tried to smash a window with her hands in an effort to enter the house. She then ran through the flaming arch of the front door into the living room.

Patrick Pierotte, a fireman, ran after her.

"She ran into the house screaming her babies were dying," he said. "I went after her and had to wrestle her out of the house while the flames raged round us."

District firemen found the house blazing "like tinder" and concentrated on saving nearby homes.

Handicapped without nearby fire hydrants, they formed a bucket-chain using snow as well as water to pour on adjoining roofs.

Two hours later, only charred embers and a stone chimney remained of the four-roomed home.

Police said the cause of the fire was an oil-burning stove on the first floor.

The children's father, a 28-year-old Korean veteran, was working at nearby Longue Pointe army depot when the fire started.

The death of the three children brought Montreal's 1953 fire-death toll to 22.

Churchill Quip Deflates Scot

LONDON (Reuters)—Winston Churchill Wednesday de-fused an explosive Scots question asking him to have the Queen named Elizabeth I of Scotland instead of Elizabeth II.

Scottish Labor member Emrys Hughes — referring to strong feeling in Scotland which recently caused nationalists there to blow up a postal pillar box—asked: "Will you not try to do something to remove this strong resentment?"

The prime minister replied: "I shall be glad to hear from Mr. Hughes if he will put his question in the pillar box."

The House of Commons rocked with laughter.

Police Seeking Kidnapper Of Baby Girl

BATTLE CREEK, Mich. (AP)—Police today searched for a mysterious blonde woman who kidnapped a 10-week-old baby from her crib Wednesday and then abandoned the little girl in a parked car three blocks away.

Rebecca Ann Elliott, daughter of Cpl. Rowland Elliott, 21, a Korean war vetern and his wife, Elizabeth, 21, was found unharmed in a car by a returning shopper, less than two hours after the child had been reported missing.

Mrs. Elliott was awakened from a nap and found Rebecca was missing from her crib.

Two youngsters, who had been playing in front of the Elliott home, told of seeing a young, heavy-set blonde walk up the Elliott's driveway, disappear into the home, and emerge minutes later with a bundle wrapped in a pink blanket.

Abbott Ready To Run Again

MONTREAL (CP) — Finance Minister Abbott says he is "looking forward to running in a fourth election."

Speaking Wednesday night at a dinner given by a group of Liberal women's organizations, Mr. Abbott said:

"I've held the position of finance minister for seven years now and it's rather overwhelming. I should indeed like to be given another cabinet post. . ."

Mr. Abbott quashed rumors, current since he brought down last week what he has termed his last budget, that he would retire.

His comment: "I am looking forward to running again."

Mr. Abbott, 53, successfully contested the elections of 1940, 1945 and 1949. Another election is expected following the Coronation this June.

Police Discover Store Operator Clubbed to Death

HAMILTON (CP) — Charles Askew, 70 was found beaten to death today in his living quarters at the rear of his confectionery store and restaurant in central Hamilton.

Police said they believe his head was battered with a blunt instrument.

Det.-Sgt. Clifford Dean, conducting the investigation, said an attempt was made to crack a safe in the store.

He conjectured that the would-be robber, surprised by the proproprietor, struck the elderly man and fled. Askew lived alone.

At noon, police reported that the murder weapons were heavy iron bars which had been used in the attempt to crack the safe. The body of the victim was found beside the vault, bound hand and foot.

Discovered Body

It was also reported that Mr. Askew had called his brother, Henry Askew, of the harbor patrol, at 10 o'clock Wednesday night. Not hearing from him again, Henry went to the little confectionery store this morning and discovered the body.

Policewoman Pinched in Beauty Parlor By Operator, Legally Pinches Him

CHICAGO (AP)Rita Meany, an attractive policewoman, got pinched, illegally she says, in a massage parlor—and it hurt.

Later, with the aid of three policemen, she legally pinched the man she said pinched her.

Mrs. Meany was sent to a massage parlor Wednesday to investigate complaints made by several women customers.

The policewoman said on arrival at the parlor she was told by the operator, William A. Kritinar, 31, to undress and was given a sheet to wrap around her. She said she asked to be treated for a "pain in the neck."

"He proved to be a pain in the neck," Mrs. Meany commented. "He seemed to have as many hands as an octopus has feelers. He pinched me, and not on my face, either. Then he had the nerve to charge me $3.50 for the 'treatment.'"

Mrs. Meany, 38, whose husband is a policeman, reported her "treatment" to officers who wese waiting outside. She returned with them to the parlor and arrested Kritinar.

"I was glad I pinched him," Mrs. Meany said. "One good pinch deserves another."

MAN CONFESSES TO KILLING WOMAN ONE WEEK AGO

Claims She Murdered Wife Two Years Ago

MONTREAL (CP) — Investigation into an unsolved two-year-old murder has been re-opened here following a police announcement that a 34-year-old man confessed to slaying Marie-Paule Langlais, 23, whose nude and battered body was found on nearby Ile Bizard last week.

This came to light Wednesday night when Det.-Lieut. Ubald Legault, head of the Quebec provincial police homicide squad, said Roland Genest admitted in a verbal statement to killing Miss Langlais "because she murdered my wife."

No Charge Laid

No charge was immediately laid against Genest who, Legault said, claimed Miss Langlais had attacked him with a baseball bat, that he wrested it from her and struck her over the head.

Mrs. Genest, 23, was killed in Genest's Montreal apartment May 29, 1951, by an unknown assailant who set fire to her bed in an attempt to hide the crime. She had been bludgeoned to death.

Lieut. Legault said Genest told police he bought an iron bar at a hardware store and gave it and an apartment key to Miss Langlais, whom he had known for three months, with instructions to kill his wife.

Led to Scene

Lieut. Legault said that following the statement Genest led police to Rawdon, Que., 45 miles from here, where Miss Langlais' half-burned clothing was found.

Lieut. Legault said the woman was beaten into unconsciousness in a suburban Rosemount garage.

"She definitely was not dead when she was taken by car to the lonely island," the officer said. "When he found she was still alive, Genest stabbed her with a knife.

The woman's body was found last Thursday on Ile Bizard by a farmer and his son. An autopsy established that her death occurred the previous night. She had been beaten about the head and stabbed more than 30 times on the neck and chest.

Lieut. Legault said that while on Ile Bizard, Genest stripped the woman's body of all clothing in an attempt to conceal the victim's identity.

U.S. Ceilings Off, Prices Going Up

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Republican administration removed price ceilings Wednesday from another $12,000,000,000 worth of goods including cigarets, nearly all groceries still under control, and copper and aluminum.

Price rises, some fairly sharp, are foreseen by the office of price stabilization.

OPS officials figured that rice might go up 20 per cent, cigarets one or two cents a pack, and cereals, crackers and candy by unestimated amounts.

The American Tobacco Co. announced a price rise of 38 per cent per thousand for its leading brand of cigarets, Lucky Strike. This means a probable retail price rise of at least one cent a pack.

Prices vary according to state taxes but in New York state a pack of 20 retails for 22 cents.

Half-Million Housing Units Needed House Told as M.P's Urge Loans to Aid Building

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's housing shortage, estimated at 500,000 houses and apartments, is a national problem of immediate concern, the Commons was advised Wednesday.

Both David Croll (L-Toronto Spadina) and George Hees (PC-Toronto Broadview) said action should be taken at this session of Parliament to allow more Canadians to own their own homes.

Mr. Croll said he believes the present government housing-loan legislation would permit the building of a record 125,000 units in 1952—as against an estimated 73,000 houses last year. But there was a need for lower down payments and easier terms.

Plan Neglected

Industries should permit their workers to take advantage of special low down-payment provisions by applying for classification as "defence industries." The fact this was not being done to the full extent was a "display of human callousness" on the part of employers.

Workers in industry defined as "defence industry" can get a $10,000 home-building loan from the government on a 10-per-cent down payment. Other Canadians make a 20-per-cent down payment for the same loan.

Mr. Croll suggested that if industries concerned with defence took full advantage of that provision the government "may decide to extend the provision to other people of the country."

Mr. Hees said Canada can build 125,000 to 130,000 housing units a year. But she was not even keeping up with new family formations. He urged aid to the municipalities to encourage house-building, lower down payments on ordinary government loans and a shorter amortization period.

Rents Too High

If the government follows its present course, he said, the housing headache will continue to grow and families with four or five children will continue to pay $60 a month for a single room.

Main speaker in the budget debate was Jean Lesage, parliamentary assistant to Finance Minister Abbott. Specifically replying to charges of opposition groups that Finance Minister Abbott had presented a "rich man's budget" for 1953-54, he said Canadian income tax rates are the lowest in the world and the exemptions are the highest. That was true despite the fact Canada had "one of the best systems of social security in the world."

Crisis Over Single-Uniform Army of 2,000,000 to Defend Europe Eased But Not Ended

ROME (AP)—The crisis over plans for a single-uniformed 2,000,000-man European defence force was eased but not ended today.

At Wednesday night's close of a two-day meeting of the foreign ministers of France, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, The Netherlands and Luxembourg, France still was tying strings to participation of her troops.

Foreign Minister Georges Bidault of France did show willingness to compromise, however, after he ran head-on into the combined opposition of the five other Allies and the expressed desire of President Eisenhower's administration for speedy creation of a European Army.

It remained to be seen whether the French Parliament would back him up.

What Decided

Behind the cautiously-worded communique issued at the meeting's close, here is what informed sources say was decided at the conference:

1. All six ministers will go home and press for speedy ratification of the European Defence Community treaty. Although the pact was signed last May, none of the six countries has yet ratified it.

2. The ministers sympathize with France's feeling that self-survival necessitates the right to withdraw troops from the European Army if she needs them in such stormy

King Baudouin Is Storm Centre

BRUSSELS, Belgium (Reuters) The government weathered a shouting, name-calling attack by anti-royalists in the Chamber of Deputies today with a vote of confidence in the renewed political turmoil over the monarchy.

Premier Jean van Houtte won a 107-to-95 vote in a confidence test in which defeat would have meant resignation for his Catholic party administration.

The victory brought respite at least temporarily in the political warfare rising under a throne already the shakiest in Europe.

Today's debate opened in pandemonium.

The Socialists had demanded the immediate debate on the government's handling of the current "affaire Baudouin."

The fight is over a newspaper story carried by the biggest paper in France, France-Soir, in which the 22-year-old king was quoted as saying he was cutting short a Riviera vacation because of "scandalous" attacks at home.

The Socialists were rapping him at the time on the grounds he should have stayed home during the Belgian flood disaster.

Expect McCarthy Will be Halted

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Eisenhower administration may be getting ready to throw the brakes on Senator Joseph McCarthy's investigation of the state department.

Administration officials saw signs of this today in several recent moves, particularly the appointment of Robert W. S. McLeod, former agent of the federal bureau of investigation, as the department's "boss of security" with new policing powers.

In announcing McLeod's appointment Wednesday, assistant state secretary Carl W. McCardle pointedly called attention to President Eisenhower's remark in his "state-of-the-union" message that:

"The primary responsibility for keeping out the disloyal and dangerous rests squarely upon the executive branch. When this branch so conducts itself as to require policing by another branch of the government it invites disorder and confusion."

Reds Refuse To Accept Relief Packages

SEOUL (AP) — The Countess of Limerick, vice-chairman of the British Red Cross, said today the Communists have refused to accept relief packages for British and other Allied prisoners of war, despite her intensive pleas.

"We've asked them. We've begged them. . . .but they just ignore us," she said. "When we bring up the subject, they pretend they don't understand English."

Lady Limerick is inspecting UN hospital facilities and attempting to find out what the British Red Cross can do to aid South Korean civilians.

Safe-Cracking Pays Off

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Safe-cracking in Windsor and Leamington paid off in loot of more than $1,400 Wednesday night.

At the Metropolitan store in Leamington, the safecrackers got away with more than $1,000 after peeling the door from a strong box. More than $400 was taken overnight from the G. and R. Zakoor Company warehouse, Windsor, by thieves who completely wrecked the warehouse safe.

In both cases, entry to the buildings was gained through the basement.

SINCERITY VITAL IF EISENHOWER TO MEET STALIN

Kremlin Attitude Must Change Before Meeting

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower and Prime Minister Stalin may eventually meet at a cold war peace conference, but all evidence here indicates that Russia's world intentions first will have to undergo a clear change.

That was the import of Eisenhower's press conference comment Wednesday on a possible meeting with the Soviet leader. It also is the word that comes from U.S. diplomatic authorities.

Proof Needed

To hold a meeting in the absence of prior proof of Soviet sincerity, authorities here feel, would be to court two grave dangers:

1. If the U.S. and Allied western powers were committed to make the session successful but Russia was not, then success could be bought only at the price of new concessions to Russia.

2. If, on the other hand, the U.S. and its Allies as well as Russia went into a conference cynically expecting only to make propaganda against the other side, then the resulting failure to realize world hopes for peace would almost certainly increase the danger of a world war.

Former president Truman habitually replied to questions about a meeting with Stalin by saying he would be glad to see the Soviet leader in Washington. No one expects Stalin to come here.

Would Go Halfway

Eisenhower's position, as stated Wednesday, was that he would be willing to meet Stalin halfway—presumably between Moscow and Washington. In the past, the Russian prime minister has shown no willingness to go beyond the limits of Red Army power. Such top level talks have been held at Tehran, Yalta and Potsdam.

At Eisenhower's press conference a reporter recalled that last Christmas Stalin had written a New York Times correspondent that he would regard favorably steps looking toward a meeting with Eisenhower. The President was asked for his reaction.

He said he would meet anyone anywhere provided certain conditions were met: (1) He would have to believe that the meeting would do some good for the cause of peace; (2) It would have to be in keeping with what Americans thought suitable for their President; (3) It would have to be at some reasonable place; (4) It would have to be held with the full knowledge of U.S. Allies as to what was to be talked about.

Absolved of Negligence

CHATHAM (CP)—A coroner's jury Wednesday absolved Joseph Gaunt of nearby Sebringville of any negligence in the highway death of Jean Janssen Jan. 17.

Mr. Janssen was walking along a country road about 1½ miles south of Chatham when Gaunt's car hit and fatally injured him, police said.

Britain Speed Work on Torpedo Boats Capable of Destroying Modern Subs

LONDON (CP) — Britain is rushing work on a fleet of high-speed torpedo boats powered by jet-like engines and capable of destroying the most modern submarines

An admiralty announcement today also disclosed the Royal Navy is building minesweepers on a "super-priority" basis to strengthen British coastal defences and guard ocean lifelines. It showed clearly that Britain is girding against any all-out attack by Russia's vast submarine fleet which includes speedy long-range craft of the latest design.

The announcement was made by J. P. L. Thomas, first lord of the admiralty, in connection with the admiralty's request to Parliament for £239,500,000 for the next fiscal year.

Thomas said Britain had made steady progress in providing adequate defence against the threat of [illegible] type mines, modern submarines of high underwater speed and range, and against aircraft.

"Anti-submarine weapons, both shipborne and airborne and far more effective than anything known during the last war, are becoming available," he said.

Thomas said "efficiency of the propulsion machinery of ships and submarines has been greatly improved." He added that work now in hand "will lead to marked advances in the immediate future and improved machinery of steam, internal combustion and gas-turbine type will be available during the next few years."

An admiralty spokesman said gas turbines similar in effect to jet engines have already been installed in two fast new patrol boats.

Thomas said "most of the seaward defence boats and fast patrol boats on order should be completed before the end of 1953-54."

20 Cases Known, Suspect Hundred, Couple Arrested

Police Allege Prominent Doctor, Lawyer Involved

TORONTO (CP) — Investigation of an alleged international baby-selling ring may lead to charges against a prominent Toronto doctor and a lawyer here, police said today.

Investigators say they have uncovered what they believe is a baby-smuggling system operating on a large scale between Toronto and United States cities. One official said at least 20 babies have been spirited across the border in the last three months and possibly 100 in the last year.

Couple in Court

The case broke Wednesday night when a 29-year-old married couple from Brooklyn, N.Y., Mr. and Mrs. Jack Shinder, was arrested on a charge of obtaining a birth certificate by false pretences. The arrest came at a time when detectives were quietly investigating reports that babies born in Toronto were being sold for $250 each.

Held in custody overnight, the Shinders appeared in court today and were remanded a week on bail of $5,000.

The Shinders, carrying a four-day-old boy in a meat basket, were stopped by U.S. immigration men at nearby Malton airport as they were about to board a plane bound for New York. An immigration inspector became suspicious, feeling that a mother with a child four days old would not be travelling so soon after the birth.

Were at Airport

The Shinders were scheduled to leave on an 11 a.m. flight Wednesday. They said they both had been born in Brooklyn and had come to Toronto Feb. 17.

The inspector turned them back, telling them to bring further proof of the birth of the baby with them in time to catch the afternoon flight. They did not return.

U.K. Ministers Sailing for U.S.

LONDON (CP) — Two of Britain's top ministers sail for Washington Friday to present what amounts to a Commonwealth analysis of world trading problems.

Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and treasury chief R. A. Butler will place before President Eisenhower and his aides proposals agreed on by Commonwealth countries at the London economic conference last December.

The British visit to Washington in effect represents another step in a concerted effort to broaden the base of international trade. In their discussions, the ministers will seek to create conditions for greater freedom — something similar to an "economic" North Atlantic Treaty Organization, covering not just the Atlantic area but all countries outside the Iron Curtain.

Teacher's Baby Born in School

NEW YORK (AP)—Teacher Sandra Fendrick left the schoolroom Wednesday after warning her 33 first-grade pupils:

"Be good. There is something I must do."

In a nearby room, Mrs. Fendrick 21, gave birth to her first child, a five-pound boy. Her husband, Bertram, a fifth-grade teacher in the same Manhattan public school, was summoned in time to pace the corridor like any other expectant father.

Mother and baby were reported doing fine but the new father had to be sent home for the rest of the day.

Planes Making Daily Flights Over Islands

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — The Argentine Air Force announced today its Antarctic task force planes are making daily flights over Deception Island and other Antarctic areas which have been the centre of an angry diplomatic dispute with Britain.

The semi — official newspaper Democracia said the flights prove Argentina exercises sovereignty over Antarctic skies.

The air force announcement made no reference to the Feb. 15 incident when a British force destroyed Argentine and Chilean installations on Deception Island and deported two Argentines found there.

Chile and Argentina long have challenged Britain's claims to the Falkland Islands and its dependencies, of which Deception is one. Britain has offered to put the dispute before the International Court of Justice but both Latin American countries have rejected the proposal.

Says USSR Gave Invasion Order

SEOUL (AP)—Clarence Ryee, director of the Republic of Korea information office, said today a confiscated Red document proves Russia ordered the North Korean invasion in June 1950.

Ryee said the allies seized two documents in the Red Korean capital, Pyongyang, in late 1950 in their abortive drive to the Yalu river.

Once, he said, "proved" Russia ordered the North Korean invasion but he could not elaborate at this time.

Safe-Crackers Obtain $650 In 2 Break-ins

Safe-crackers entered two garages on Dundas Street, West, last night and after prying the doors off the safes escaped with approximately $650 in cash.

Entered were the Patterson Service Station where about $50 was taken from the safe, and the Elliott Motors, where the safecrackers got about $600.

Police discovered the two business places had been entered, while they were checking doors during their night patrol. A window was found smashed at Patterson's, while at Elliott's an inside door was noticed opened, which had been observed to be closed during an earlier check. Entry at Elliott's had been gained by breaking the lock of a side door.

Police said the intruders apparently used the driveshaft of a car to wreck the door of the safe at Elliott Motors.

This is the second time within a year that the Elliott Motors has been entered and the safe smashed. Last year the door of the safe was pried off and a quantity of cash taken.

Ruled Accidental

SUDBURY (CP) — The highway collision death last December of Alex Antoine, 34, hitch-hiking passenger in one of the vehicles involved, was ruled accidental Wednesday by a coroner's jury.

The jury listed three contributary causes for the accident: poor visibility, due to weather conditions; the speed of the car driven by Gordon Smith, of Levack, in which Antoine was a passenger, and the lack of tail lights on a truck driven by Rene Larocque of Chelmsford, which police said the car hit.

Larocque said he knew nothing of the accident.

Car Returned After Being Driven Over 100 Miles

Joy Riders last night stole a late model car owned by A. H. Cook, 50 West Moira street, and after taking it for a 100-mile drive left it parked in a private driveway on John Street. The stolen car was located this morning, when the householder found his driveway blocked.

Mr. Cook said he had left his car parked near his home after driving from Trenton, where he works. He discovered the vehicle had been stolen shortly after midnight and notified police.

A check of the vehicle showed it had been driven about 100 miles. The gasoline tank, which had been just filled was little more than half full when the car was recovered.

Woman Recovering

VAL D'OR, Que. (CP)—A 28-year-old woman, charged with attempted suicide, is recovering in hospital here.

Police identified the woman as Annette Chouinard and said she tried to kill herself Wednesday by firing a cartridge from a .22-calibre rifle through her chest. Police said they found four letters, one of them addressed to police, but did not divulge the contents. The woman was believed despondent over the death of a friend.

8th Belleville Scout Troop Holds Father-Son Banquet, Receive Awards

The 8th. Belleville Scout Troop and Cub Pack held its annual father and son banquet on Monday night in the new, spacious Masonic Temple.

The fathers turned out in full force to enjoy the delicious turkey dinner arranged by the Ladies' Auxiliary.

Mr. Flindall, group committee chairman, welcomed the guests and 250 Cubs, Scouts and fathers, with a special warm welcome to Mr. Lepore, of Holloway Pack, and his Cubs and fathers, who were guests of the 8th. Rev. Everett Smith asked the blessing and Mr. Don Allen, assistant district commissioner of Boy Scouts, gave an interesting and informative talk on Scouting.

A recitation entitled "The Cub Alphabet," was given by Wayne Flindall and enjoyed by all, as was the duet that followed by Stephen Wilson and Laird Regensburg.

The fathers joined in the sing song as heartily as the Cubs, and before the evening was over could "Patsey Atsey Orey Aye" with the best. They weren't as fast to pick up "Love Grows Under a Wild Oak Tree."

If any Belleville business men are noticed clapping their hands and snapping their fingers don't be alarmed as it will probably be the fathers of the 8th. keeping in practice for the next banquet. Police department please take note!

Puppet Show

The puppet show put on by Sonny Choy, of the Scouts, was enjoyed by everyone.

Mr. Phillip Allcorn, assistant district commissioner of Wolf Cubs, explained to the fathers the different stages a Cub goes through from a new chum, to a new Cub, and then on to be a first star and a 2-star Cub. He then presented 44 badges, six first and 9 second stars.

The large and varied display of handicraft by the Cubs was examined carefully by father and son alike. This display proved to be a major attraction of the evening.

Mr. Allcorn called special attention to Bob Avery and Wayne Flindall for having earned the complete set of 12 badges possible to a Cub, and to these fine boys gave his hearty congratulations.

Nehru Shouts 'Lie' To Red Charges Of West Alliance

NEW DELHI (AP) — A Communist charge that Lady Mountbatten is visiting India to bring the country into the Western-proposed Middle East defence organization brought shouts of "lie" and "falsehood" from Prime Minister Nehru in Parliament today.

"It's a falsehood. It's a lie. It's an insinuation of the vilest type," Nehru shouted as Red parliamentary leader Puchalapalli Sundarayya charged Lady Mountbatten was in the country either to enlist India for the defence organization or to get India not to oppose Pakistan's joining the organization.

Lady Mountbatten, whose husband, Admiral Earl Mountbatten was Britain's last viceroy and first governor-general to India, has frequently visited the country. She has been here this time since early this month. It was officially announced on her arrival that she had come to recover from an illness in Malta.

In London last month, an official source reported that the United States and Britain had agreed to invite Pakistan to join the defence alliance and that the Pakistan government was weighing the idea favorably though they had not reached a decision.

HONEST MAN

SENECA FALLS, N.Y. (AP)—Frank Kukiela, restaurant operator, walked into a bank Wednes and handed over a $1,000 bill. He said the bank had given him the bill by mistake for a $100 and he hadn't noticed the error. "It worried me all night because I had never seen a bill that big," Kukiela said.

Changes in Oath Will Not Require New Legislation

LONDON (CP) — The government has decided that changes in the Coronation oath will not require legislation to amend the Coronation Oath Act of 1689.

Prime Minister Churchill told the House of Commons Wednesday he has been advised that proposed changes in the oath, to cover certain alterations in the Queen's styles and titles, can be made without legislative sanction.

Churchill said it must be remembered that the Queen will be crowned Queen not only of the United Kingdom, but also of other self - governing countries of the Commonwealth. The form of oath now proposed had been outlined to these countries — which would include Canada — and none had any objections.

Churchill's statement put an end to a matter which had been reported causing some concern in court circles.

Oddly, the only published call for new legislation has come from Churchill's son Randolph, who wrote recently that if changes are made without it the Queen would be forced into an "unlawful" role at the June 2 Coronation.

LITTLE MURDER INC.

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico's secret service says it has uncovered a low-priced Mexican "Murder Inc.," which killed its victims after first taking out insurance policies on them. Two men were arrested. One of the men was an insurance agent. Officials said several persons had been killed by the gang, which collected between 1,500 and 2,000 pesos ($172 and $230) for the death of each victim.

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP) — Trading slowed in forenoon stock market dealings today. Prices of the active low-priced mining issues slipped slightly but the market as a whole was firm.

Volume for the first hour totalled 1,383,000 shares — about half of last Friday's record first-hour volume.

Industrials weakened slightly but golds showed a small gain and western oils added more than half a point on the exchange index. Base metals were mixed.

Leaders in uranium, New Brunswick and Northern Ontario rare metal prospects weakened. Gunnar dropped a fraction, New Larder U lost 25 cents and Inspiration lost 40 cents.

Banks were strong in the industrials list but textiles and refining oils weakened. Senior golds showed small gains and higher-priced base metals were mixed.

Firm gains in leading issues buoyed western oils.

CRISIS OVER

parts of her overseas territory as Indo-China or her North African protectorates.

3. French protocols to the EDC treaty requesting this and other rights are referred to an interim commission in Paris with instructions to seek a palatable solution within the framework of the EDC treaty. Changes in the treaty that would lead to further delay in ratification however, are ruled out.

4. Bidault and German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer are staying over today and part of Friday to attempt further reconciliation of their conflicting views. They are being aided by Italian Premier Alcide de Gasperi.

The Bidault-Adenauer talks also were expected to touch on such thorny problems as the future of the Saar. This tiny, coal-producing state was a part of Germany before the Second World War but now is linked economically with France. Both countries would like to control it.

The big concrete achievement of the ministers' conference was a unanimous decision that someday Europe must be one great common market. How gradually to reduce tariffs and other barriers to achieve this goal was referred to economic experts of the six countries.

The most optimistic of the ministers after their meeting was De Gasperi who said "if all continues to go well" the EDC treaty may be ratified by all six countries this spring.

Burley Tobacco Acreage Cut By 20 Per Cent

CHATHAM (CP) — A 20-per-cent cut in burley tobacco acreage, contingent on purchases by Britain, was made Wednesday at a meeting of the burley tobacco marketing board.

Announcing the acreage allotment to growers for 1953, directors of the board said that it had been set at 80 per cent of the 1952 figure. They said that the allotment was contingent on Britain's allocation of dollars for the purchase of tobacco.

Growers were allotted 2415.83 acres for burley tobacco during 1952. The 1953 acreage allotment will bring the number of acres down to 1932.66.

The allocation of British dollars for the purchase of tobacco could change the allotment. The board said it will be several weeks before it would be advised of the British allocation.

Deny Jap Charge Red Planes Evade U.S. Interceptors

TOKYO (AP) — A former Japanese prime minister today claimed Russian planes have flown over Tokyo on spying missions and evaded swift United States interceptors.

A U. S. Air Force spokesman immediately denied it.

Hitoshi Ashida, now a leader of the major opposition party in the government, said American radar has tracked red reconnaissance planes over the capital. He didn't say where he got his information.

Ashida told the English-language Nippon Times he presumes Russian planes have been taking photographs of Tachikawa and other air bases in the vicinity of Tokyo.

Ashida did not explain how Russian planes could fly 1,000-1,600 miles untouched through several U. S. air screens.

Ashida was prime minister in 1948.

Dutch Contribute

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — Dutch families here have donated 1,000 guilders (about $259 in Canadian funds) for Dutch flood relief, a bank manager said today. Others have contributed about $700 to the flood relief fund.

The bank manager said donations from Dutch people in the district average about $15 a family.

Carlings Breweries Ltd. recently presented the Belleville Campaign Committee for the Building Fund of the National Institute for the Blind with a cheque for $100.00. 20 CASES

Toronto police were looking for them when Shinder, accompanied by a lawyer, walked into police headquarters. Then police learned the baby was with Mrs. Shinder at a west-end home.

Officers said Mrs. Shinder told them the baby, named on the birth certificate as Martin Shinder, was not born to her. The child, which appeared in good health, was taken to Toronto's Hospital for Sick Children and will remain there for the present.

Police are reported in possession of a letter signed by a doctor who said he was in attendance when a woman registered as Mrs. Shinder gave birth to a boy at St. Mary's hospital Feb. 20. The mother gave a west-end address but a check with persons living at that address showed she is not known to anyone there, police said.

Officers found in the Shinders' possession the letter written on a doctor's stationery.

Police have not yet found the actual mother of the baby. She has been released from hospital.

It was reported she was attended by a private nurse provided by the doctor.

There was no immediate explanation of the release of the baby by the hospital to Mrs. Shinder. A woman is reported to have obtained a formula for the baby at the hospital after the Shinders were turned back.

The system believed used in getting possession of the child is the same method used in Montreal last year. Police cracked the baby racket in that city with the arrest of an unwed mother and a doctor.

This similarity strengthens the investigators' belief the ring is the one which worked in Montreal.

Police say Mr. and Mrs. Shinder applied in Brooklyn to adopt a child. Their application was turned down because Shinder, a haberdashery salesman, was not earning enough money in the opinion of the authorities and because their three-room flat was considered too small to accommodate a child.

"Someone learned they wanted a child and the New York representative of the Toronto ring contacted them," a police officer said. "They were told they could have a child for $250, plus the hospital expenses in Toronto."

Police say the arrangement worked this way:

Shinder applied to the Toronto hospital for a room for his wife. Meantime, the woman who was to give birth to the child was registered in the hospital in Mrs. Shinder's name by a doctor. The doctor notified the Shinders of the approximate date the birth was to take place and the Shinders flew to Toronto to be on hand when the time came. Thus, as far as the hospital was concerned, the baby was born to Mrs. Shinder. The doctor notified vital statistics officials at the provincial parliament buildings to that effect and Shinder picked up the birth certificate.

Co-operating in the investigation are the RCMP, the United States federal bureau of investigation, U.S. and Canadian immigration agents and the municipal morality squads of Toronto and New York.

ANOTHER SIDE TO THE STORY*

There is nothing more natural than that some American taxpayers wonder why, and for how long, their country is to be cast in the role of the "rich uncle" for a large part of the world. Many of them have wondered, quite reasonably, whether it is paying off, what they get for their money.

Since the end of World War II, the U.S. has pumped some $7,700,000,000 in aid into Britain's economic bloodstream. This is a lot of money but there are some Americans who see that there is another side to this story of debt and that it cannot be told in terms of dollars. One impressive glimpse of it through American eyes comes from Charlotte and Dennis Plimmer, in this month's Coronet.

It is an eloquent answer to the cynics and one which deserves repeating to quite a few Canadians who have much more reason to remember—but are quite as ready to forget as some Americans—how much the world and Anglo-Saxon peoples, particularly, owe to Great Britain.

"They face a crisis today," these writers say, "but crisis is nothing new, for they are the people whose tiny ships rolled back the menace of the Spanish Armada. They alone smashed the Continental might of Napoleon, and hurled defiance at Hitler while all the world wondered. Since the Roman invasion 2,000 years ago, crisis has achieved an almost jaunty normalcy for the British people in their island fortress only a few miles from Europe's stormy mainland.

"It was Britain from whom we received the title deeds of our democratic heritage: Trial by jury, habeas corpus, freedom of assembly, representative government, religious freedom, freedom of thought and the keystone of justice, equality before the law.

"Our stake in Britain—the stake our dollars help to preserve—is those tangible intangibles necessary to a world which wants to live without fear of secret police or concentration camps. Our stake is the Mother of Parliaments, the peace and beauty of an English village, the great voice of Churchill and the language of Shakespeare, the scream of the jet plane, the pages of Dickens, God's mighty houses of Westminster and Canterbury, the vast breathing sprawl of London, the quiet downlands and the grey seas which British seamen have guarded . . ."

Fortified by this magnificent tradition there is no sense of defeatism in Britain. Others may well take inspiration from her example, rather than balance cash loans on paper.

FRIENDS IN SOUTHEAST ASIA

The western democracies need all the friends they can find among the peoples of southeast Asia. That is why the Colombo Plan of the Commonwealth countries is an important one for more reasons than the compassionate sentiment which grouped the British partners in this undertaking.

It was through the Colombo Plan that Canada announced this week that $5,000,000 worth of wheat would be given to Pakistan to relieve a serious food shortage there. But in more ways than this Canada is winning new friends among the Asians.

One of the great needs of the whole of the southeast Asian area is men and women trained in various technical skills. Canada gives $400,000 yearly to technical assistance work under the Colombo Plan and $850,000 a year to aid the United Nations in its work in this field. Another part of the technical assistance work is the training of students in Canada.

One group of twelve Pakistan men has just completed a study in Canada of the administrative operations of government which will equip them for civil service work in their own country. These men started in Ottawa with an interview with Prime Minister St. Laurent, who told them something of his job. They saw members of the cabinet and gradually, by interview and lecture, they went into all the ramifications of Canada's federal government system.

Leaving Ottawa they toured the provinces. In Quebec they were particularly impressed with the manner in which Canada has handled the two-language problem because at home they have the problem of many languages in one state. They dug deep into municipal problems. From one end of Canada to the other they had the opportunity to study the workings of a democratic country. These young Pakistan civil servants go home well-equipped to take over positions of responsibility.

They made many friends while here and back in Pakistan we can be sure that they will make more friends for Canada.

WELL, TRY IT ANYWAY

Next time the boss bawls you out for coming in late to work, just tell him you dawdled over a third slice of toast in order to increase the company's efficiency. To back you up, there is a report in the N.Y. Journal of Commerce that hasty and inadequate breakfasts result in the loss of an estimated 166 man hours per day per thousand employees, and a $48,000 annual loss to the firm that employs them.

SPORTSMANSHIP

Play the game
But play it fairly.
Fight to win
But meet men squarely.
Tackle hard
And hit the line,
Do your best
But don't you whine.

Play to win,
But every inning
Keep in mind
There's more than winning.

Victory's sweet,
But, good or ill;
An honest name
Is sweeter still.

Reach your goal
By hard endeavor,
But by trick
And cunning never.
Win or lose,
Though bruised and lamed,
Let night find you
Unashamed.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

SOUNDS AND NOISES

The never-ending rumbles and noises of the city have no charm for me. But on my small summer island retreat I find every sound clings eagerly to every echo in my heart. The wind in the pines, the wash of the waves from the lake, the pleasant chirps, calls, and songs of the forest birds, and the whistle of the distant trains, all have a wistful whispering to them. They give to me a sense of peace, and fill me with wonder.

W. H. Hudson, the naturalist, told of an East End boy on vacation to just such a spot, who exclaimed: "How full of sound the country is! Now in London we can't hear the sound because of the noises."

Hudson commented that it was these rural sounds that found an echo in the one who loved his out-of-doors in the country. At such a time he wrote: "I sometimes feel in a mystic mood, even as a religious man in a like mood feels that he is in a heavenly place and is a native there, one with it."

When all is nearly silent, in that island retreat of mine, I love to listen for the last calls of the birds near dusk, as though each call were a happy Good-night to the forest and to me. There is a sense of peace that takes possession of one in the lap of nature. You hear sounds, not noises, in the forest.

On a farm, as a boy, I early learned to love the sounds of the countryside. The song of every bird was magic to me—the thrush, the robin, the song sparrow, the wren, the mourning dove, the warblers, the whippoorwills, the killdeers, and Oh, so many others. And then there was the distant echo of the cowbell in the meadow—nostalgic, if ever sound could be!

Musical sounds that come from the harp, the violin and the flute, stir me as none other. There is something unearthly in each one. They seem so akin to the human heart. But to nature we must always return for the sounds that stir the soul—the winds, the birds, and even the insects. The Summer shower, the silent snowfall. The mocking bird: The nightingale. The cricket's churr. All God's voices of sound in the world.

Squirrels Can Swim

(Ottawa Journal)

We are left with the familiar empty feeling of the uninformed by a series of letters in the Times of London, the sounding board of experts on the most unusual subjects. Our misfortune is that we did not see the original article which caused this correspondence but we gather it was headed "But Squirrels Can Swim" and was written by "A Naturalist."

If we had seen this article we would have read it carefully, even the words we did not understand, for the aquatic skill of squirrels is a question which interests us, once it is brought to our attention. As it is we are left, trudging in the argumentative debris, with sober reflections on the way those who take pen in hand can be deflected from a subject.

We would have hoped the letter writers would have added to the information on the squirrel swimming, instruct us on whether it uses the tail as a rudder and has a stroke similar to the Australian crawl. But no. These disappointing letter-writers have ignored the swimming aspect and march out their own ideas on food, Gertrude Greaves of Winnipeg being interested in having "Naturalist" send her a good recipe for grey squirrel pie, and Lilian J. Rees Wright of Halifax reporting, voluntarily, that the squirrel should be cooked like a rabbit or roasted stuffed with a good onion-and-mushroom stuffing.

Times' readers around the world no doubt will enthuse over these morsels about cooked squirrel. For ourselves, we remain intrigued by the picture of a squirrel swimming the Ottawa and the prospect of a squirrel on a plate leaves us dull and depressed over the way we so often wonder if the beautiful is edible.

Skating Champion

(New York Times)

There is that extra emotional heart tug in the story of Tenley Albright, 17-year-old Boston girl, who has just brought the women's world title in figure skating to the United States for the first time. In 1947 she had polio. She not only skated herself back to health, she skated herself into a world championship.

This is the sort of thing that gives new confidence and hope to those who are trying to overcome physical handicaps to make a success of living.

Her father, a Boston physician, says that she is not planning a professional career at this time. She has another profession in mind, medicine, an' a college career ahead of her.

In other words, she is not the over-emphasized "athlete" but a healthy American girl who plans to lead a healthy American sort of life and a useful one.

Honor For Col. Kennedy

(Windsor Star)

Something of a precedent has been established in the Ontario Legislature. A private member occupies a seat on the Cabinet benches — and immediately to the right of Premier Leslie M. Frost. He is Col. T. L. Kennedy, former minister of agriculture.

This, of course, is a fine tribute to Col. Kennedy, senior member of the Conservative Party in the Legislature and one of the most popular members of the House. He no longer is in the Cabinet, but Mr. Frost is keeping him handy for his sage advice.

Catching Opinions

(Wall Street Journal)

Manufacturers may have a new "ear to help them hear what candid customers say to their wares.

That's the import of an untold tales of 12 silent visitors to the recent New York playing of General Motors' big auto show. The visitors were 12 tiny sound recorders carried in the clothing of GM opinion samplers mingling incognito among the crowds. The samplers engaged views in conversation, elicited candid comments, pro and con, on the cars. The unseen recorder took it all in on little spools of magnetic wire. The recordings were sent back to Detroit — where GM officials could listen and ponder.

The recorder weighs in at 2 pounds, 7 ounces and measures 6 5-8 by 4 3-8 by 1 3-8 inches. It will record continuously for 2 1-2 hours.

The $289.50 price covers a tiny microphone to be worn in the coat lapel. For $35 extra you get a simulated wrist watch "mike."

Your Own Thermostat

(By Dr. J. J. Randey in Coronet Magazine)

Did you know that your body is equipped to handle low temperatures—if you give it a little sensible help? In my long experience as a family.. doctor, I have been amazed at the way people ignore this basic fact.

To help nature do its job of keeping you comfortable, remember that your body is like a furnace. You stoke it with food to produce heat, and your main objective is to prevent that heat from disappearing into thin, cold air. In other words, clothes don't make you warm—they just keep you warm by preventing body heat from escaping.

In Winter, men can keep warm by wearing a sweater under a jacket, then a fairly lightweight coat. The clothing layers are not bulky, can be shed if the weather changes, and successfully keep body heat where it can do the most good. Women can do the same with fur coats—fur-lined wool ones. If children play outdoors in the snow, be sure their snow-suits are water-repellent. They needn't be too heavy — particularly if the youngster wears slacks and light sweaters underneath. These provide the layered effect, and the outer covering prevents moisture and wind from cooling the body.

Don't try to keep feet too warm though. Even in a warm room, your feet are normally about five degrees cooler than your body. Wet feet, however can be dangerously cold when the temperature outside is as high as 70 degrees. The evaporating moisture takes away heat, and may cause chilblains and frostbite.

For constant outdoors exposure, men can wear waterproof overshoes which do an insulating job far up the leg. For ordinary wear, lighter-weight rubbers or galoshes will do—so will waterproofed shoes which need no extra covering. Women can stay stylish—and be prepared for bad weather all the time—with a pair of easy-to-fold-and-carry boots. They provide an extra protective layer without looking clumsy. For watching winter sports I advice fleece-lined boots. They keep feet warm without exercise.

One of the best ways to keep warm is to exercise. If you have to stand still outdoors in cold weather, wiggle your toes, flap your arms and do some obtrusive foot-stamping—all this increases circulation. And don't sit with legs crossed—this will keep blood from getting to your feet, and make them icier than ever.

Winter sports are fine, too, if you don't get overheated. Have you noticed that skiers usually wear a lightweight, wind-and moisture-proof jacket as their chief protection against bitter weather? They have learned the basic lesson that all the body needs is a little understanding help—and it will keep itself comfortable.

Ethopia In Korea

(Christian Science Monitor)

Reports from Korea tell of the heroism and tough, tenacious fighting qualities of an Ethiopian battalion serving the United Nations cause.

There is something stirring in the thought of soldiers from Haile Selassie's country going halfway across the world to help in a collective stand against oppression. How different the course of history might have been if the free world had taken a comparable stand at the time of Mussolini's Ethopian aggression.

It is not surprising to read of the daring courage of these dusky fighters, but we are particularly struck by the reported remark of one American captain who spent some time with the Ethiopian battalion:

You know what they do when they go on pass to Tokyo? They spend all day going to the museums, looking at the sights, and listening to the opera — all the things good little American boys should but don't do.

Though there may be more "good little American boys" with a taste for learning than this sardonic comment admits, it at least should give pause to anyone who tends to dismiss Ethiopian heroism as merely the recklessness of "savages." In the perspective of history it will be the black shirts of Mussolini's gangsters rather than the black faces of Haile Selassie's warriors that will stand out as the badge of barbarism.

No Chimes

The crowds that jammed in to hear George S. Currie testify before the Commons defence expenditures committee considered the performance a complete flop. So state reports from Ottawa.

Personal Health Talks

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

MORE COFFEE, LESS BOOZE

A little soft soap goes as far with me as a free fill for my borrowing pipe. So I snatched this letter from the belt conveying the mail to the chucker:

Dear Dr. Brady:

I know from the days when your column ran in newspapers which I edited that the readers believed implicitly in your advice while disregarding my editorials completely.

I am certain that if you will tell party goers and party givers (the letter came before Christmas) that their chances of arriving home safely from holiday affairs will be enhanced by making the "one for the road" coffee—with lots of sugar—a great many people will do what you say and you will be giving to some the most precious Christmas gift of all—life itself,

Sincerely yours,
(Signed)

Yahbut I never knew you cared —when you were chopping the heart and soul out of my stuff—you know I'm only kidding. It took many years of struggle, but I learned, the hard way, that, for all his pompous air or weighty pretense an editor is even more restricted in his work than I am. Nowadays when mangled portions of my column come through in almost unrecognizable condition it doesn't occur to me to cuss the editor.

Notwithstanding the former editor's flattery, I doubt that any considerable number of party goers or party givers, at Christmas-New Year's holidays or other seasons pay any attention to my advice about their drinking. If they know or infer that I am a teetotaler they dismiss my view of the question as the narrow notion of a crackpot. Especially when they are under the influence of the first drink or two.

The former editor continues: "You are aware of course, of the studies conducted at Cornell University by Drs. Strongin and Winsor, showing that sugar taken either before or after drinking has a sobering effect. The number of errors made by one under the influence of alcohol was substantially reduced when sweetened coffee was taken after drinking."

For years I have advocated the establishment of huts, shacks or kiosks, in every city or town, where good coffee would be available 24 hours a day, and I mean good coffee, not the dismal brew commonly served as coffee. The attendants or dispensers in the coffee kiosks I have in mind would be scientifically trained as experts in the art of making coffee.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

Television has a long way to go, apart from the things you already have chalked up against it. In the first place, it is single-faced. You have to be sitting in front of the machine. I am told that this is already altering the architecture of the country. Everybody building a new home wants one long, narrow room for televising. Within the next few years, the country is going to be dominated by houses as long and narrow as the fenced fields of Old Quebec.

Already, television has not only altered but mastered the dining room traditions of United States wayside eating places. Most bars and many hotel dining rooms have television sets installed, and in clubs, they are the rule. The tables facing the television set are now honored with the rating formerly assigned to ringside tables. This accounts for only a handful of the diners in the room. The rest of us have to eat our dinner to the incredible scratch and squawk of television, without being able to see anything of what is on the screen. The juke box used to be the bete noir of people who wanted to eat in comfort and reasonable silence. But the juke box was a sheer blessing compared to the television set which only a handful of those present can see, yet which creates a curiously infernal din for everybody else. Even if you didn't want to hear the juke box, it did not tease you.

It is probably already on the blue prints of the television engineers that four-sided, or all-round television sets will shortly be available for public places. This may be heralded as a god-send to dining rooms and other public places but it cooks the goose of those of us who just wanted to eat.

The great difficulty of television is its power of seduction. Last night, after spending an agonizing hour in a club dining-room listening to the busy riot of a television set whose face I could not see, I went to my hotel, where a television set was part of the furniture. The bell-hop set it for me. There was a basketball game on, between two teams of which I had never heard. I know nothing about basketball, never saw a game, don't know what the bare rules of it are. But there I sat, like a dope, and watched the game with intense interest and rising excitement. And cheered like a fool for the winning team.

Strength for the Day

LIGHTING FIRES OF HOPE

Some weeks ago, a child, Nancy Fairless, lighted one of the great furnaces of the new steel plant at Morrisville, Pennsylvania. The news story stated that the furnace, once lighted, would go on for years as blast furnace operation is continuous.

Lighting fires which will burn through the years! There have been cruel conquerors who have lighted fires which centures later were burning as a bitter memory in the minds of peoples whose ancestors had been oppressed. The forces of persecution have been burning all over the world since the beginning of time. There are foolish persons who have lighted fires of discord and hate in families, others who have cherished burning jealousies, unholy lusts, in their hearts until the living substance was eaten out of their souls.

But thank the merciful God, there have been brave souls who in seasons of darkness have lighted fires which thrilled men and women with a new hope. The Christian martyrs did this centuries ago. There have been fires of glory lighted at periods in our own national history which have been warming our hearts for generations.

A little child lighted the fire at the great, modern steel mill. A child lighted a world conflagration in a humble stable in Bethlehem long, long ago. There are still noble fires to be lighted, waiting for the courage of gallant men and women to lead the way.

Weddings

BENNETT—MUNNS

The rectory of the Church of St. Michael the Archangel, Belleville, was the setting on Saturday, February 7, at 2:30 p.m., for a pretty wedding ceremony, when June Rose Munns, of Belleville, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Archie Munns, became the bride of Russell James Bennett, of Shannonville, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bennett. The Rev. J. J. Buckley officiated.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in her bridal gown of white Chantilly lace and nylon net over satin, with strapless fitted bodice of lace and net ending in long V points at the back, having a sweetheart neckline; matching lace jacket with long molded sleeves, lily-pointed at the wrists. The skirt was of ankle length. Her shoulder-length veil was held in place by a coronet encrusted with seed pearls and bugle beads, and she carried a shower bouquet of American Beauty roses tied with lacelon ribbon. Silver slippers completed her ensemble.

Miss Barbara Esterbrook, of Belleville, was bridesmaid, attractively gowned in yellow net and lace over satin, featuring a fitted strapless bodice having a matching lace jacket with long sleeves and graceful bouffant skirt of satin. She wore a matching floral headdress of yellow flowers, and carried a nosegay of mauve 'mums centred by a Talisman rose.

Mr. Roy Frawley, of Petrolia, Ontario, attended the bridegroom.

The reception was held at Tobe's County Gardens, where the bride's mother, received the 60 guests, wearing navy blue crepe with white trim, navy accessories and corsage of red roses. She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother, who was gowned in grey with navy and white accessories and corsage of red roses.

The bride's table was centred with a three-tiered wedding cake, topped by a miniature bride and bridegroom, and flanked by yellow daffodils, and white stocks and adiantum fern.

Following the reception, the happy couple left for Montreal, Quebec, the bride travelling in a royal blue suit, with navy accessories and light blue topcoat and hat, and wearing a red rose corsage. Upon their return, they will reside in Belleville.

Guests were present from Petrolia, Toronto, Shannonville, Roslin and Woodstock.

Prior to her marriage, the bride was the honored guest at several showers: a miscellaneous shower given by Mrs. Arthur Culloden, Mickel Street, city; a miscellaneous shower by her girl associates of the Northern Electric office staff; and a teacup and saucer shower given by Mrs. J. Hinchey and Mrs. W. Houston, of Shannonville. She was also presented by a chrome table and chair set by the community of Shannonville.

The bridegroom's gift to his groomsman was a silver cigaret case; and the bride's gift to her bridesmaid, a matching necklace and earrings.

Spring Fashions Adopt New 'Coronation Look' in Apparel

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Coronation-conscious Canadian women are finding much that pleases in the 1953 spring fashions.

Most centres report great popularity for the "Coronation look"—hats, coats and dresses all liberally sprinkled with a variety of sequins, pearls and other gems, a Canadian Press survey shows.

In Western Canada the crown motif is featured in bright prints and throughout the country the perennial favorite, navy blue, takes on added significance as a Coronation color.

Despite the royal theme prices are remaining at the '52 level and fashion centres find brisk demand on spring designs, probably due to an extremely mild winter.

Cotton prints, denims and linens are finding favor among dress enthusiasts although all materials and weaves have been incorporated into the new lines. There is a definite swing to smaller, finer designs in prints, away from the large florals of recent years.

Pastels are the leaders in the color parade from Montreal to Vancouver. Pale blues, pinks, cream, greens, whites, greys and yellows are popular with an occasional dash of bright gold.

Suits are simple with light lines while many feature a square-cut "box" design, particularly in jackets. Tweeds are well received and also gabardines and worsteds. Most practical is the straight, slim skirt for combination with a light sweater or blouse.

Solid-color coats in mohair, tweed, cashmere or the ever-popular camel hair are the spring stars and here again the pastel tints are tops.

While there is no definite trend in hats they are sure to be tiny and tipped, either to the front or the side. Lighter shades are dominant and they should be decorated with jewels or flowers.

The spring stroller will probably sport bright shoes with matching bag, both in patent leather.

Three Girls to Act As Stewardesses On Comet Jet C.P.A.

SYDNEY, Australia (CP)—Officials of Canadian Pacific Airlines announced here that three Australian girls will work alongside Canadian girls when CPA starts its Comet jet air service between Sydney and Honolulu in April.

Loris Dickinson, CPA chief stewardess here, said that more than 100 girls wanted to be stewardesses on the CPA planes. The three chosen were Loma Cochrane, a nurse at a children's hospital, Norma Beechey, another nurse, and Lillian Walker, a receptionist.

These three girls will study company regulations, stewardesses' work and aircraft procedure and make a familiarization flight in a Skymaster to Honolulu before the Comet service starts.

When the jet service is operating each airliner will have one Canadian and one Australian stewardess. The three Canadian girls, who will live in Sydney, will arrive in March and spend a year on the service.

Miss Cochrane told reporters: "After nearly five years' hospital work, I am used to long hours on duty. I haven't even seen a jet airliner yet, let alone fly in one, but I am thrilled at the thought of being a member of the crew of the world's fastest airliner."

Girl Guides Honor Queen In Good Deeds

Girl Guides throughout the Commonwealth began on Sunday a three-month campaign of good turns in honor of the Queen.

The Guides, who number 588,000, will plant flowers, help clean up their neighborhoods, aid old folks, visit people in hospitals, read to blind children and raise money for charities.

The Guides want to honor the June Coronation of the Queen, herself a former Girl Guide.

Each Guide unit will keep a daily record of its good deeds and a selected few reports will be sent to the Queen.

Start of the campaign coincides with the joint birthday of Lady Baden-Powell, World Chief Guide and her late husband, Lord Baden-Powell.

The Girl Guides of this city are also engaged in various activities which are being carried out in honor to Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II.

Mr., Mrs. W. J. Webb Celebrate Golden Wedding Day

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Webb, of Tweed, were guests of honor at the home of their only son, Stanley Webb, on Sunday afternoon, where near relatives had assembled to congratulate them on the occasion of their diamond wedding anniversary. It was here, too, that sixty years ago the Reverend J. McCauley had officiated at that memorable event.

Present at this time was Mrs. Webb's only sister, Mrs. Wesley Martin, her bridesmaid, and Mr. Gardiner Jackson, of Selby, Mr. Webb's cousin, who was groomsman. Mr. and Mrs. Martin were also guest of honor, commemorating their 54th anniversary on this same date.

Mr. Webb is the only son of the late Thomas Webb and Isabella Booth, while Mrs. Webb is the elder daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Adams. During their married life they have resided in Tweed, where they now live, with the exception of ten years spent in the Roblin district.

Mr. and Mrs. Webb were the recipients of many useful gifts, cards and flowers from St. John's United Church, and Tweed A.F. & A.M. as well as messages of congratulation, including a telegram from Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Dee, of Cornwallis, Nova Scotia; a cable from Buckingham Palace, which read: "The Queen sends you warm congratulations and good wishes on your diamond wedding day," and a scroll from the provincial government, "May I extend to you, on behalf of the government of the Province of Ontario, heartiest congratulations on your 60th wedding anniversary, and the wish that you may both enjoy further anniversaries in good health and happiness." Signed, Arthur Welsh, provincial secretary.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. Stanley Webb, assisted by Mrs. Albert Martin, Mrs. McTaggart, Mrs. Holland and the Misses Jean, Vera, Eva and Elsie Martin.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

BEATRICE FAIRFAX

She married at 14, and has never been sorry

From time to time in this column, I have had much to say on the subject of teen-age marriages. My position has always been that—except in very, very rare cases—boys and girls in their teens are far from ready for marriage.

While I have never attempted to compile any statistics on the subject, if I were to draw conclusions from letters I have received from teen-age wives and husbands, I would be willing to venture the guess that not one such marriage in a hundred turns out well. I would go even further than that and, again basing my opinion on letters that come to me, say that the average boy or girl who marries in the teens bitterly regrets it before the first year of married life is out. Indeed, the reason why most of these unfortunate young people write me is because they want to know how they can get out of marriage as fast as they got into it.

Today, however, I am not writing about this matter on its tragic side. So I would like you to read a letter I have received which tells about the marriage of one teen-ager which has worked out successfully.

The letter is written by the husband who, over 18 years ago, married a 14-year-old girl. He is something over nine years older. Having observed that I try to discourage these marriages of teen-agers, he wished me to know how satisfactory his own experience has been.

He writes:

"When this girl and I were married, I was working for fifteen cents an hour. We went through the depression and had to do without many things, but I have never heard my wife say anything that indicated she was dissatisfied or discontented, or even show it in any way.

"Through the years that followed, my wife and I had a hard struggle, but I did house and dress her the best I could and she knew it. We have three children living in there was one we lost. One boy is in high school, and one is in kindergarten, while our daughter, who is 14, is married and has a six-months-old baby, so my wife is a grandma at 31 and I am a grandpa at 41. This daughter is also happily married and contented and would not dream of giving up married life.

"I asked my wife what she thought about what you have said against teen-age marriage and she said, 'Well, it wasn't true in our case, and I can prove it.' I asked her if she had ever been unhappy because she had married so young, and she said no, that she had always felt superior to young girls.

"Some girls think that married life is a merry-go-round and you can be on it forever, but marriage is give and take. If you learn to give and take, you can make a success of it.

"My wife is a good cook. I helped her learn how to cook. I have always helped her with things she did not understand or know how to do. She has taken care of me in sickness and worried till I got well, which made me love her all the more. I have ulcers, and a man who has ulcers is hard to get along with and hard to cook for, but my wife is willing to overlook my cranky spells and do everything she can for me. She has done many, many things for me that I will never forget, and we have come a long way together. We never quarrel over money or friends. My wife has her women friends and I have my men friends. If there are times when I don't make so much money, we get along on what we have until I can make some more. If my wife wants a new coat or dress, if we have the money, she buys it; if we don't, she doesn't. We keep all our debts paid and are paying on our fourth home.

'Marriage is a contract for life, and I am working hard to keep it and my wife is also. I agree with you in some of the things you have said about teen-agers who marry, but this is one such marriage which you can chalk up as a happy one."

Putting the Joy Back in Cooking Lenten Dishes

By Mary Moore

Over the week-end I was gadding. I was at a conference and there I met a charming French gentlemen.

It was far from being his intention, and he wasn't aware of it, but he rocked me back on my heels hard. We had been eating French cooking, and I was exclaiming over the delicious food, so he asked me if I would write a story about this French meal. I said "Oh I'll mention it but English-speaking Canadians don't have the patience to work over this type of French cooking." He queried me with "Then what do you write about?" I said "I guess I'm sort of crusader. I stress eating for health whenever I get the chance."

Right there I committed myself, and on the following day heard this rather bitter confirmation from a doctor: (He said it directly to me too.) "You dietitians are so hipped on vitamins and minerals that you've taken the joy out of cooking." I was dumbfounded. Do I do that?

It worried me so much overnight that I got up at 6:30 a.m., this morning to get to my desk that much faster so I could put some joy back in cooking.

Then, the first thing that confronted me was a huge memo on my desk "Write Lenten Article". But dingbust it—nobody is going to tell me I take the joy out of anything, so we're going to make Lenten dishes glamorous too. So here goes, while eggs are cheap and plentiful.

FLORENTINE BAKED EGGS AND SPINACH

Two pounds fresh spinach (you may use as much as 3 lbs. if you are wild about the stuff), 4 large eggs, 1 6-oz. can evaporated milk, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1-4 lb. freshly grated cheddar cheese, 3 tablespoons melted butter, 2 cups fresh breadcrumbs. Don't use the crusts in the breadcrumbs and use 2-day old white bread and don't pack tightly when you measube. Pour the 3 tablespoons barely melted butter over crumbs and mix in with two forks. Wash the spinach in about 6 waters or under running warm water, drain well, and cook 10 minutes without additional water, turning it over once or twice as it wilts. Drain thoroughly and chop finely. Season with 1 teaspoon salt and a few shakes of pepper. Butter a large 10x1 1-4-inch pie plate and line it with spinach, having edges high; make 4 deep depressions at even intervals. Drop 1 large egg in each depression. Sprinkle eggs lightly with salt and pepper. Warm together the evaporated milk and cheese just long enough to melt cheese and add the 1-2 teaspoon salt to them. Spoon this over the eggs and spinach carefully. Cover with the buttered crumbs and bake at 375 deg. Fahr. for 30 minutes or until whites are set, yolks are still liquid and crumbs are brown. This is a wonderful dish for everybody, but appeals strongly to reducers. The skinny folk should add a big baked potato.

DINNER OMELETTE

(If you can broil a steak, whip up an omelette and turn out a gorgeous lemon pie, everybody thinks you're a good cook. You young things could catch a husband with this.) Six eggs, 6 tablespoons milk, 3-4 teaspoon salt, 1-2 teaspoon cream of tartar, pepper. (For the sauce): 1-2 lb mushrooms, 2 raw tomatoes, 1-2 green pepper, 1 very small clove garlic, 3-4 teaspoon salt, 1-4 teaspoon pepper, 4 tablespoons butter or other shortening. Beat whites in large bowl until foamy, sprinkle over cream of tartar and beat until very stiff. Transfer beater to bowl containing yolks and beat 1 minute, then add salt, pepper and milk, gently fold yolks into whites. Pour into heated large frying-pan containing 1 1-2 tablespoons hot melted butter, after 1 minute reduce heat and cook about 10 minutes or until golden brown underneath. Transfer to oven of 350 deg. Fahr. and bake 6 minutes or until dry on top. Fold over, turn out on hot platter. Quickly prepare the sauce: Melt the shortening, add green pepper cut in 1-2-inch squares, sliced mushrooms and saute three minutes. Add peeled and sliced tomatoes, salt, pepper and finely sliced garlic. Simmer about 6 minutes. Serve this over or between or at side of omelette. The sauce should be made while omelette is baking, for omelette should be served as soon as it is done or it will collapse.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

When bride's table and parents' table are combined

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

At this small wedding reception the bride's table and the parents' table are to be combined. In what order should these guests be seated at the combination table: bride and groom; two bridesmaids; best man; two ushers; parents of the bride; parents of the groom; the minister and his wife.—J. B. D.

At the head of the table is the bride's mother, who is the hostess of the wedding. Opposite her is the bride's father, the host. The bride and groom sit side by side, in the centre of one side of the table, the bride at the right of the groom. At the bride's right is the best man. At the groom's left is one of the bridesmaids, the one who is more or less the maid of honor, the official witness. At the right of the bride's mother is the groom's father, the man guest of honor; at the left of the bride's mother is the minister. At the right of the bride's father is the groom's mother, the woman guest of honor; and at the left of the bride's father is the minister's wife.—The other bridesmaid might be seated at the best man's right. And, since there is an uneven number, the two ushers may be seated together.

May they attend golden wedding celebration?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A 50th wedding anniversary is to be celebrated in a small town. My husband and I are "just friends" of the couple. Do we call on them that day only if we are invited?—S.

You don't tell me enough about the invitation - circumstances. If the invitations were extended in some general way. . for example by publication in the local newspaper, or by having the minister of the church give the invitation to the congregation, or some similar way. . . it would be entirely proper for you and your husband to attend the "Open House" or whatever the form of celebration. But if you know of no invitations being given, the couple may have planned to have only the members of their family with them on this day, and so it would not be proper for you and your husband to call on that day.

Problem of processional and recessional

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My wedding is to be an informal afternoon church wedding, rather small. My fiance will have his brother as best man. There will be no bridesmaids and no ushers. One of my two sisters (the elder) will be matron of honor; the other will be maid of honor. Our problem is the recessional. I have sometimes seen the maid of honor and the best man walk down the aisle together, although I have heard it is actually correct for them to walk singly. Would it be best for all to walk separately in the recessional; or who should walk with the best man? Or any other suggestions?—V.

Suggestion 1: Even for a "rather small" wedding, it is convenient for the seating of the guests, and good form, to have two ushers. . . and then too it is easier to plan a balanced processional and recessional. The processional like this: first, the two ushers, walking together; next, the maid of honor and matron of honor, either together or (better for processional - balance) singly; then you and your father. Recessional: bride and groom; best man and maid of honor, followed by matron of honor, alone (or best man not in recessional, and two honor attendants, either together or singly, as in processional); last, the two ushers, together.

Suggestion 2: If no ushers, processional: honor attendants, either together or singly, the actual witness immediately preceding you and your father. Recessional: bride and groom; best man either not in recessional, or walking with the honor attendant who is the actual witness; other honor attendant walking alone.

BEAUTY

HELEN JAMESON

Chapped hands.

Before inflation hit the world a terrific wallop, and when household help was available at reasonable wages, many women had no hand worries. Their hands were always in form, never looked old before their time. Now these same hands know what it is to wrestle with pots and pans, to wash and iron, to wash windows, and do all kinds of heavy work. And the toll is enough to bring tears to their eyes. Constant care is necessary if hands are to appear half-way presentable. Strangely enough, most women give much more attention to their complexions and hair than they do to their hands.

Well-kept hands and beautifully-cared-for nails, are unquestionably an asset—and also an index to the owner's habits. Slipshod methods—here, as elsewhere—find one unprepared for emergencies, such as a sudden call to dine and dance or take part in a bridge game.

Just as nature casts the features into a different mold for each individual face, so there is a great diversity in the size, shape and actions of the hands. We can control the hand's manners, but we cannot change the shape or size.

It is a mistake to fancy that the soft, white, dimpled hand is the ideal. That belonged to the period of the hoop skirt, the tiny sun shade and the phaeton. Now the attractive type is the capable hand that expresses the most capacity, whether of a useful or artistic nature.

To keep the hands lovely, one must protect them as much as possible from grime. The homebody should wear rubber gloves when dealing with water that is not clean, cotton ones when cleaning silver or polishing furniture. Strong cleaning agents should be avoided. There never has been a time when such excellent and harmless soaps and powders have been available.

For toilet use, be fussy about the soap you use; you may find that one leaves your hands in better condition than another. When washing your hands, fluff up a rich lather and, if necessary, use a nail brush. If you have been shampooing the kitchen range or washing closet shelves, add a little cornmeal to the suds; it will remove any grey lines that may appear in your knuckles.

Have a bottle of lotion on the kitchen sink and one in every bathroom; use them freely, to avoid a chapped condition.

At least once a week use a massage cream to make up for the loss of natural oil that is removed by frequent washing. Rub it into your nails, and on the surrounding cuticle. Treat each finger separately, rubbing from the base to the tip. Let the cream remain on over night.

Briefs From Britain

LONDON (CP)—New five-shilling coins minted for the Coronation will be presented to Woolwich district babies born in Coronation week next June.

SOUTHAMPTON, England (CP)—The log book for the first solo flight to Australia, a 16-day trip by Bert Hinkler 25 years ago, was found in his old plane that had been stored for 20 years in a barn here. The plane was purchased by the Hampshire Aeroplane Club to prevent its destruction.

LONDON (CP)—First editions of "History of Canada" and "A Voyage to the Country of the Hurons," both written by Gabriel Sagard-Theodat and published in Paris in the middle of the 17th century, brought $1,340 at auction of the late Sir Leicester Harmsworth's library here.

LONDON (CP)—Sir John Slessor, marshal of the Royal Air Force, said the aircraft crash rate is being reduced in relation to the amount of flying done. He said the modern jet fighter figures in fewer crashes than the old Spitfire.

PILSWORTH, England (CP)—William Butterfield offers $1.50 for every fox shot on his 160-acre farm in Lancashire. Butterfield said he would rather pay for dead foxes than find his poultry mauled by hungry raiders.

LONDON (CP)—The Canadian Women's Club here is celebrating its 21st anniversary on June 11 at the Savoy Hotel. Proceeds will go to a welfare fund for Canadian veterans in the United Kingdom.

LONDON (CP) — The international wool secretariat claims that styles of 1889 will be the fashions for men this Coronation Year. It predicted dark-grey worsted suits with long jackets and trousers narrowing at the ankle.

WARMINSTER, England (CP)—Forty officers and men from the RCAF fighter wing at North Luffenham visited British Army units here and rode in Centurion tanks. They also heard a lecture on Korea fighting from Col. D. B. Grist, commander of a battalion of the Gloucestershire Regiment.

LONDON (CP)—A suggestion in Parliament that gift parcels from war brides in Canada to relatives in Britain be exempted from duty was rejected by John Boyd Carpenter, financial secretary to the treasury. He said it would be "neither equitable nor practicable."

SOUTHAMPTON, England (CP)—University of Southampton students erected a 60-foot banner on top of the town's 280-foot clock tower. It took workmen nearly two hours to dispose of the banner.

BAD SHEPHERD

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (CP) — A young African herd-boy was convicted of poisoning 11 sheep belonging to his employer. Sentence was postponed after he explained "I was tired of herding sheep and that was why I poisoned them."

Students Taught Careful Driving In Classrooms

NEW YORK (AP) — Harassed fathers will be glad to know about this latest addition to push-button living:

Sonny can now learn to drive without stripping a gear or denting a fender of the family automobile.

The new apparatus was given its introductory demonstration in a high school classroom Tuesday.

Fifteen students climbed into their "automobiles," stepped on the starters, shifted gears, and sped off along the roadways of town and country.

In the rear of the room, an instructor sat at a recording panel, checking on the number of traffic violations and smashups. No one was hurt.

The "automobiles," spaced out over the entire classroom in front of a big movie screen, look a little like those bump-cars at a carnival. But they're all stationary.

The students do their driving on roads and streets pictured in the moving picture at the front of the room. If they make a slip, it shows up on their driving record.

Little Benny's Note Book

I ran in the house and back to the kitchin for another glass of water, and I was running out again and ma said, Wait a minute, Benny, there's something I wanted you to get me around at the market, but I cant seem to think what.

Aw heck, ma, I bet it wasn't anything, I said. Every time you see me you just naturelly think of errands, I bet that's all it is, I said, and ma said, It wasn't rice or any kind of cereal.

I'll be rite outside if you happen to think of it, I said, and ma said, You'll stay rite here till ferther orders. Oh dear, it was something in the food line, that's as far as my mind will go, she said.

Maybe I can help to remind you, ma, I sad. Was it mixed froot, like oranges and apples and bannannas and canned cherries? I said, and ma said, No it wasn't. Let me think, it seems to me it was something like a packidge, she said.

Was it mixed packidges of cookies, ginger snaps, fig bars and chocklit wafers? I said, and she said, My goodness cant you think of anything but dizzert for land sakes?

Sure, ma, I'll think of mixed things that haven't got anything to do with dizzert. I said. Was it stuffed olives? I said, and ma said, It's strange I cant remember, because I'm almost sure it was something unusual and off the beeten track.

G, I bet I know, ma I said. Was it dog biskitts in case ye get a dog? I said, and ma said, Now is that sensible

It's unusual, I said, and ma said, Oh, go on out and I'll call you if it comes back to me.

Canada Air Lines Buys 170 Freighters

LONDON (Reuters)—Trans-Canada Air Lines announced today it had ordered three Bristol type 170 freighter planes in Britain for the Montreal - Toronto - Winnipeg route.

Delivery is expected about next September.

The Bristol type 170 has a maximum take-off weight of 42,000 pounds. A bull-nosed plane with two engines of 2,000-horse-power each, it can be adapted to carry 56 passengers.

BANNOCKBURN

Bannockburn — Annual business meeting of the Bannockburn Pentecostal Tabernacle was held on Tuesday evening, with a fair attendance. A devotional period preceded the business routine with the singing of several hymns and prayer, and a short message from Hebrews 4, by Pastor Rodger.

All reports were most encouraging, showing an increase both in attendance and finances. Total offerings for the year were $2,590 all of which was given by free-will offerings, the Bible pattern of tithes and offerings.

The Sunday school was especially congratulated on the faithfulness and continued efforts of pupils, teachers and officers alike. There was a marked increase in attendance while the offerings amounted to $255. They not only supported the school, but gave a generous donation to the building fund and missions. Average attendance was 55.

Daily Vacation Bible School

A DVBS was conducted last summer with an average attendance of 50 with 46 diplomas being presented. The Junior Church to be known in future as "Bible Hour Club" is worthy of mention. Its Tuesday evening services are well attended and supported, and a Junior choir has also been organized which adds much to the Sunday evening services.

The WMC report given by the secretary, Mrs. Nicholson was most gratifying. Apart from gifts for the parsonage, a special project was carried out each month and cash gifts for Christmas sent two missionaries in Trinidad and South America. Sunday school papers, quarterlies and testimonies were also sent.

Pastor Rodger reported some of the highlights of the year, also their visitations, especially to shut-ins and hospital patients.

Thanks were tendered the faithful ones for their splendid co-operation and for the support and many kindnesses shown to Pastor Ellis by the congregation in general during the year.

The building fund report also showed an increase in donations. Listening to the fine reports, one could but say, "Great is thy faithfulness, O Lord."

Words of sincere appreciation were tendered the pastors for their services and untiring efforts during the year on behalf of the spiritual welfare of the congregation, and for the undivided interest and willingness shown to assist in any time of need, regardless of denomination.

MARSH HILL

W.M.S. Members Observe World Day of Prayer

Quiet music was played by Mrs. Berson Mitts.

Leaders for the service were: Mrs. E. B. Finkle, Mrs. Alex. Tanner, Mrs. Leslie Finkle and Miss Mae Currie. Prayer for the Queen was given by Mrs. Ben Bleecker; for homes and families by Mrs. B. Lindenfield, and for peace, by Mrs. B. R. Searles.

In place of an address, Miss Currie led in a discussion when each gave her opinion on prayers. The Lord's Prayer is the best prayer for an example. One should pray for strength for himself to carry on, and have more faith. Several verses of Scripture concerning prayer were given.

Mrs. Harold Detlor favored with a solo, "Almighty Father."

RAWDON

'Five Oaks' Camp Conducts Short Courses

RAWDON. — Mrs. R. R. Bonsteel spent last week at "Five Oaks Camp", near Paris, Ontario, where she assisted with the dramatization of "Vanity Fair", as found in Pilgrim's Progress.

On Friday, Rt. Rev. Dr. A. A. Scott, moderator of the United Church of Canada, conducted a special ceremony when "The House of the Interpreter", was dedicated as a Christian workers' centre for year-round classes.

This two-storey structure costing $71,000 and named from Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress, is situated along the Grand River, which is a real beauty spot. The campsite named "Five Oaks", has 25 acres and is near Paris, Ontario.

"Five Oaks" is part of a world wide movement to instruct lay leaders to assist in their own communities with the great work of the church.

It has been a recognized fact for some time that the young people between the ages of 12 and 18 are not kept interested in church work. The population is on the increase and large numbers of folks give the United Church as their home but are not in touch with its various organizations.

In this day and age, teachers need to be well informed in order to inspire the youth of our land. In many countries, Germany, Sweden, France and Holland, also in the United States and England several post-war developments which included "work camps" have proved beneficial. There have been two camps of this nature in British Columbia and Saskatchewan which have given a Christian education program to voluntary lay workers.

Short Courses

Several short courses have been held at "Five Oaks", which included "Bible Study", "The Christian Faith", and "The Christian Church", "Local Church Methods", and "Christian Workers".

The director of "Five Oaks" is Rev. Beverly L. Oaten, who has several years of experience. Then, too, the church has imported Miss Isabel Squires, of "The Methodist Deaconess Training School in England", and she has brought with her a wealth of valuable training information.

In 1953, "Five Oaks Camp" plan to give short courses in "Religious Drama", "Evangelistic Visitation", training in "Youth Caravan projects" and many other courses of interest to church workers.

The Bay of Quinte Conference has sent three delegates to the first six weeks' course for voluntary workers. These delegates represent, Athens, Deseronto and Peterborough.

The 20 students in this course were housed in barracks at the Brantford airport until Friday last, when "The House of The Interpreter", was officially opened. Here they will complete their course and receive their certificates at the conclusion. Some of these students have university degrees and others didn't have their high school entrance, but all of them came because they were anxious to have more training in order to carry on their church activities on a higher scale at home. Some of these delegates were office workers, some were farmers and some were professional folks, but all had on commons reason for spending six weeks at "Five Oaks".

Present Certificates

Rev. Dr. David Forsyth, general secretary of the Board of Christian Education of the United Church of Canada, will present the various certificates earned by the delegates at the close of the course.

Mrs. Bonsteel spent the week-end at Simcoe with her sister and family and also visited friends in Toronto. She plans to return to Rawdon parsonage on Wednesday.

Prospect Main Street

An amateur prospector checks North Bay's main street for uranium. He carries the geiger counter which issues a loud "beep" when the metal is encountered. A staking rush has developed in the district around the northern Ontario city and even the city dump was staked. Newsreel photographers were out in force to record the prospector's search for traces of uranium, tantalum or columbium at the city's busiest intersection. It has been announced that these rare metals have been found in nearby Lake Nipissing. — (CP Photo.)

Quebec House Expels Member; Resignations Demanded in B.C.

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A Liberal member of the Quebec Legislative Assembly was expelled Wednesday night, for the second time during the current session.

Emilien Lafrance, member from Richmond, was expelled for three days by a vote of 48 to 20 during one of the stormiest sessions of the assembly in years.

Mr. Lafrance aroused the ire of Premier Duplessis when he charged Mr. Duplessis had established "a policy of tolerance and indulgence" in the administration of the Liquor Act.

The Premier demanded that Mr. Lafrance be named and after the speaker had named the Liberal member, moved that he be expelled for three days.

Stormy Session

The British Columbia house had another stormy session in which demands for resignations flew back and forth. By the time the row had quieted down, the Social Credit government led the Opposition in demands for resignations, 4 to 1. The box score for the last two sessions is 4 to 2 for the government side.

The CCF initiated the row Tuesday by demanding the resignation of J. A. Reid, Social Credit member for Salmon Arm, for his attack on the province's school system. The government repudiated Mr. Reid's remarks.

Works Minister Philip Gaglardi retaliated Wednesday by demanding the resignations of CCF leader Harold Winch, Frank Snowsell (CCF—Saanich) and Vincent Segur (CCF—Revelstoke). The minister said he based his demand for these resignations on articles in the CCF news which he said quoted the three members on various matters.

Increase Grants

Increased grants to municipalities and school districts in Manitoba totalling $3,742,000 were announced in the House by Premier Campbell. The scale of assistance will be 70 per cent higher than the average total of $5,300,000 in municipal grants in the last six years. The announcement was made in tabling a report of a 12-member special committee which for nearly two years has studied provincial-municipal relations.

Aid to municipalities also came up in the Alberta House. Municipal Affairs Minister Gerhart said some of the province's municipalities are "over-spending their budgets like a bunch of drunken sailors." He made the statement in answering a contention that the provincial administration is not giving enough help to municipalities.

Bruce McGregor Chosen 'Timmy' By Society

VERNONVILLE, Ont. (CP) — Twelve-year-old Bruce McGregor has been chosen this year's "Timmy" by the Ontario Society of Crippled Children and will be guest of honor at the sports celebrities dinner in Toronto March 5.

Bruce, seventh child to be chosen for the title "Timmy" as a symbol of the thousands helped annually by the society, will also go to Ottawa to meet Governor-General Massey.

Five years ago, while helping his father on his farm about 25 miles south of Peterborough, Bruce fell from a disc-seeder. The machine passed over him and broke his spine. Doctors thought at first he wouldn't live, then doubted he would ever walk.

But today, with the aid of crutches, Bruce walks. He has kept up with his studies and is in the seventh grade at Black school, S. S. No. 14 in Haldimand township. He is an active Cub member and sometimes rides his pony Major, to meetings.

He can help his father, Neil McGregor, with the milking and operates the tractor like an old hand.

But Bruce's big moment will be the Ontario Sports Writers and Sportscasters Association $25 - a-plate dinner to raise money for the society. There he will meet the former world heavyweight boxing champion, Joe Louis, and other sports celebrities, including Gerry Kesselring, Kitchener golf ace, and George Genereux of Saskatoon, Canada's Olympic gold medal winner.

$750,000 Worth Of Relief Given Flood Victims

TORONTO (CP)—The Canadian national European flood relief committee has given about $750,000 worth of relief to the flood victims of Britain and Holland, Charles Laferle, honorary secretary of the committee, said Wednesday night.

Through the Canadian Red Cross Society, the committee has sent to Europe badly-needed rubber boots, clothing, mattresses and blankets, oilskins, outboard motors and timber—mostly by airlift.

Mr. Laferle said that at a conference with Governor - General Massey and Prime Minister St. Laurent an attempt was made to estimate how much cash needed for relief should be raised by Canada.

"We decided unanimously that the objective was unlimited," he said.

Within the next few days each of Canada's 3,200,000 householders will receive a postcard issued by the federal government telling them how to subscribe to the fund.

"If there is no local canvass in their community people can go to their bank and deposit money in the name of the fund. And if there isn't a bank in the vicinity, they can send money orders through their post office or through the railway express companies," he said.

Receipts which can be used for taxation deductions will be given to subscribers to the fund, Mr. Laferle said.

Mr. Laferle sent a telegram Wednesday to the 10 provincial premiers urging that all monies collected by municipalities, newspapers, radio stations, service clubs and other groups be sent "as quickly as possible to the Canadian national flood relief committee, 95 Wellesley St. East, Toronto."

Learned His Lesson

TORONTO (CP)—John G. Pursel, 43, of Sarnia, who tried to drive his automobile into the Canadian National Exhibition grounds on the street car tracks, was fined $200 or 14 days Wednesday for driving with his ability impaired.

He told Magistrate Tupper Bigelow: "I've learned my lesson."

Free Enterprise Helps Britain Set Post-War Home Building Record Exceeding 1952 Target

By EDWIN S. JOHNSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—Spurred on by Harold Macmillan, Britain's minister of housing and local government, United Kingdom building contractors set up a post-war record of home construction in 1952.

Under the incentive of relaxed restrictions and free enterprise a total of 239,922 dwellings were erected during the year, well above the 12-months target of 235,000 fixed by Macmillan.

Great Increase

The record compared with 194,831 new houses and flats completed in 1951, and 55,400 in 1946.

But the country's housing problem still remains acute. Although 1,256,270 new homes have been built in the whole of Britain since the end of the Second World War, the waiting list is packed with names of nearly 2,000,000 families.

A recent survey showed that in 20 London boroughs alone more than 115,000 families were in need of re-housing and that many had been waiting up to 10 years.

In the last census it was disclosed that more than 8,000,000 people are still living in "composite" households with inlaws and others, that some 900,000 homes in Britain are without a kitchen sink and more than 5,000,000 without a fixed bath.

Many Waiting

These conditions have brought a steady stream of new applicants for modern facilities offered by the low-priced "people's" houses.

Private builders at present are mass-producing these houses, with a wide choice of design for prospective owners and at prices ranging upward from around £1,000. A few display homes were put up and made ready for the tenants in less than two months.

Meanwhile, Macmillan has set a tentative objective of 270,000 new homes for 1953. Spokesmen for the building industry estimate the year's final figure is likely to be closer to 300,000 since construction was already in progress on some 280,000 new homes at the beginning of 1953.

Seek Rent Relief

Owners of rent-controlled property are also hopeful action will be taken during the present session of Parliament to provide relief from the effects of the existing Rent Restrictions Act.

A petition drawn up by the National Federation of Property Owners protests that rents of controlled dwellings, often based on rates prevailing in 1914, have not been increased since 1939. In contrast, current costs of repairs and maintenance had risen more than 300 per cent.

Materials and labor are also much higher.

Rebuffed

Soviet Foreign Commissar Andrei Vyshinsky ran into a rebuff the first day at the U.N. Assembly meeting. Usually the U.S. representative and the Russian delegate shook hands briefly for the cameramen. This time, though Mr. Vyshinsky appeared willing, Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., signified he would refrain from the show of friendliness. — Central Press Canadian.

Speaker 'Names' Que. Member For Accusing Duplessis Of Attempting to Steal Election

QUEBEC (CP) — Speaker Alexandre Tache today "named" a Liberal member of the legislative assembly who accused Premier Duplessis of introducing a new election act "to steal the elections."

In the Quebec House, naming a member — calling him by name — deprives him of the right to the day's sitting.

During a heated debate on agriculture department estimates for land drainage, Arthur Dupre (L-Vercheres) said the Liberals elected 23 members in last summer's provincial election against eight in 1948.

Angry Premier

"He saw this change," Mr. Dupre said, referring to Mr. Duplessis, "and had the House pass Bill 34 to steal the elections."

Flushed and obviously angered, the 62-year-old premier jumped to his feet and asked Deputy Speaker Maurice Tellier to report the statement to Speaker Tache.

When Speaker Tache took his place at the throne, Mr. Duplessis said he would not move for expulsion of Mr. Dupre but demanded that he be called to order by name.

Today's naming incident occurred at the height of a noisy sitting during which charges of "coward" and "infamy" were flung across the floor of the assembly.

Officer Admits Germ War Guilt, Says Red Radio

Missing since last July and feared dead, Colonel Frank H. Schwable, USMC, was named in a Chinese Communist broadcast as one of two U.S. Marine Corps officers quoted as saying that the U.S. joint chiefs of staff had directed forces in the Far East to carry out planned germ warfare. The other officer named by the Reds was Major Roy Bley, of Santa Ana, Calif. — Central Press Canadian.

RIVERS THREATEN

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Four major Alabama rivers rose near or above flood levels today, but clearing skies averted any serious threat of inundation. The Coosa, Warrior, Tombigbee and Alabama poured muddy torrents across lowlands in the wake of six days of steady rain.

Woman at 38 Wants to Become Leading Lawyer

COBOURG, Ont. (CP) — Mrs. Daisy McCullagh, at 38, wants to become this town's first woman lawyer.

"That's well in line with her past activities which have seen her serving at various times as president, secretary, and holding other offices in women's groups of this community.

Now she's attending law lectures at Osgoode Hall, Toronto. Her daughters, aged 15 and 17, live in their Cobourg apartment while she's away during the week.

Mrs. McCullagh says the surprising thing is not that she is working towards a law career at her stage in life, but that she has a husband "who will let me." Mr. McCullagh has an insurance agency here.

Clifford Sifton, Star-Phoenix Editor, Dies

SASKATOON (CP)—Clifford Maclean Sifton, 34, editor of the Saskatoon Star-Phoenix, died in hospital here today after a short illness.

Member of a noted newspaper family, he was a son of Harry Sifton who died in 1934, and grandson of Sir Clifford Sifton, founder of the Sifton Newspapers.

Born in Toronto, he was educated in public schools there and at Queen's University and the University of Toronto.

He started in newspaper work as a cub reporter on the Saint John Telegraph-Journal and worked on the Wininpeg Free Press and Brockville Recorder before his appointment as editor of the Star-Phoenix in 1948.

In 1947 he visited Europe on a writing tour, going to Germany, Austria, Greece, Italy, France, Switzerland and England.

Police Expect Other Arrests To Follow

MONTREAL (CP)—Police said Wednesday they expect other arrests to follow the detention Tuesday of a 29-year-old suspect in the several hundred thousand dollar bond robbery at Maxville, Ont., five years ago.

The man, well-dressed and speaking with a French accent, was arrested as he attempted to cash two bonds at a branch of the Royal Bank of Canada.

Investigating officers said $5,000 in Dominion of Canada bonds—one of them worth $3,000—was recovered following the arrest. The man was not identified.

They said previous reports that almost half the loot was recovered were erroneous.

The arrest was the first break in a country-wire investigation that began Nov. 11, 1948, when acetylene torches were used to open the vault and safety deposit boxes of the Bank of Nova Scotia branch at Maxville, some 50 miles from Ottawa.

U.S. Gets Preview of Coronation Robes

A preview of coronation robes is being displayed to U.S. fashion salons by Doris Langley Moore, British founder and director of the London Museum of Costume. She displays not only gowns and wardrobes that will be worn by peers and ladies of the realm, but costumes of periods dating back to the time of George III. The peeress gown modelled here has a red velvet kirtle with long train and ermine caplet attached. The peer's robe is of red velvet and, in keeping with tradition, he wears a sword. Both wear coronets. — Central Press Canadian.

CAMPBELLFORD

Industrial Promotion Subject of Address At Rotary Club

Campbellford—H. D. Callan, municipal consultant for the Ontario Department and Development, spoke to the Campbellford Rotary Club at their regular meeting this week on "Industrial Promotion in Smaller Communities."

He outlined the organization of his department, comprising nine men who are trained to assist municipalities and industries seeking locations to come together.

Prospects are directed through the department and every assistance given to them so that they might become placed in an Ontario community which suits them. When an application for assistance in locating a site is received, the department goes over the areas most suited to the industry concerned, the files of the municipalities in that area are received, and a field man sent out with the industrialist to view the places in question.

Selling Committee

Each municipality should have an industrial selling committee, designed to co-operate with prospective industries and convince them of the advantages of their town. This committee might be made up of members of the Chamber of Commerce and other organizations and must have full co-operation of the municipal council.

Ontario is in competition with the other provinces but is in a favorable position. More than half the manufacturing in Canada is in Ontario which has been the leader in this field for over 70 years. Because Ontario is in the best situation relative to markets, it naturally attracts the greatest share of new industries coming to Canada.

From a local standpoint, initiative and co-operation are important. Zoning for industrial purposes and continuity of effort help bring results. The cost of attracting industry is often borne by council earmarking one mill, the maximum approved by the province for industrial purposes. This can do a great deal if spent wisely but is not sufficient to hire a full-time representative to "sell" a small town to prospective industry.

Following the talk, Mr. Callan answered a number of questions relative to industrial expansion.

He was introduced by Rotarian Wib. Kingston and thanked by president Frank DeCarrol.

Immigrant Builds Home, Factory for Himself

Less than two years ago, Walter Sturm operated a factory at Neustadt, Germany. He could see no future there, so he had the machinery crated and moved with his wife, Annie, and daughter Hildegarde to Wiarton, Ont. "I wouldn't have believed that people could be so wonderful as they have been to me here," says Walter, who, with only his wife to aid him, has built a small factory and adjoining home, and is busy turning out wood products. He borrowed money, but refused assistance in building the factory and in turning out his wood products. — Central Press Canadian.

THE FLIGHT INTO EGYPT

Interpretation of the Rembrandt etching (1654) from the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

THE KING AND THE CHILD

Chapter 9

Of course dark-brown Herod heard of these matters. Ever since Zachary had been stricken dumb on the altar there had been rumors of queer happenings in Jerusalem, and Herod's spies, hearing everything, reported all the gossip, including whispers from the north that a virgin of Nazareth was going to have a baby. The shepherds, too, had naturally babbled about their supernal experience. When, right out in the courtyard of the Temple, old Simeon then declared the child to be from God and promptly died, after having conspicuously and publicly waited so many years, and when the old crone Anna added her testimony, Herod quite reasonably began to feel vexed.

Agents of the king, reported the strange stories, but had to admit that the tales were vague; they had learned nothing circumstantial, not even the names of the father and mother. So far, thank God, Herod did not know that Joseph the carpenter of Nazareth and Mary his wife were the ones he sought, nor that they were still quartered with the child in a Bethlehem stable.

Herod had a turbulent scene with his spies.

"What kind of service is this?" he roared at them. "Get me facts!"

They came back with alarming facts. Three wise men from the East had arrived in the capital. They had no caravan; merely four camels, the extra beast loaded with bales and boxes which they kept ever near them at the khan. Gossip said they were kings, travelling incognito.

"What kind of men do they pretend to me?, Merchants? Ambassadors with gifts for me? Or what?

A Star in the East

"Magi, or wise men," was the answer. "Yet these three do not seem to be so very wise. They have gone up and down Jerusalem from the stadium to the Temple, saying nothing wise at all but instead asking questions of everybody."

"What questions?"

The spies gulped and flushed and cleared their throats.

"What questions, fools? Speak up or I'll have you flogged."

"They are asking about the birth of a fabulous child who is to take the throne of Israel. They say they have seen his star in the east and have come to worship him."

Then Herod, having learned from Annas, the high priest, of the old prophecies concerning the Messiah, commanded that the three wise men be brought to the throne room.

For this interview he arrayed himself in his kingliest robes to impress the savants and rulers from the lands beyond the Euphrates.

A Curious Meeting

It was a curious meeting. The august travellers from the East behaved admirably before the king, observing all the proprieties of a throne-room audience. Then, rising, they announced their names—Caspar, Melchior and Balthazar.

Herod looked upon them with a blandiloquent smile, affable and suave.

"We are curious to know," he told them, "why it is that we are honored by a visit from such great dignitaries."

They told him very simply that they were following a star.

"Well, what do you say this star portends?"

The Wise Men were very wise, indeed because they merely shook their heads and said they could not tell fortunes. But did they not know what it means for the future of Israel? No, they could not be sure of anything in the future; the star led them on, that was all.

"But," persisted Herod, "what do you expect to find under this star?"

Then Balthazar told him.

"A child," the old traveller answered, closing his eyes.

"A child?" Herod's voice was creamy with interest. "And what about this child?"

Not Free to Talk

Melchoir answered that they were not free to talk until their errand was complete.

"Very well, then," growled Herod. "Where do you expect to find Him?"

"Bethlehem!"

"Bethlehem. Such a place?"

Again they shrugged. They could only follow the star. With the coming of night they would resume their journey. Herod saw that it was useless to bring mere force against wisdom, and turned a cunningly smiling face upon the three.

"Then this is what you must do," he dissembled. "Go find the child and then come back and tell me and I will go worship Him too."

Lifting a sweating hand to his brow, Herod allowed them to depart. No sooner were the doors shut behind them than he gave the signal to his spies; they were to follow the Wise Men and search everywhere else besides; find the child that had been born under a magical star.

But in the darkness of that night, Caspar, Melchoir and Balthazar, with their extra laden camel, eluded Herod's pursuers. The Wise Men rode by an inside lane, on to Bethlehem, as if there was nothing in the world of human cunning that wise men had to fear. They found the town, the inn, the stable. They knelt, and their eyes were full of worshipful glory as they gazed upon Mary's baby.

A Night of Dreams

Then the Wise Men embraced Joseph, kissed his beard, and bowed ceremoniously. Having bestowed their gifts, they departed from the stable, but not to return to Jerusalem. Having bedded down at another inn, all three Magi went promptly to sleep and dreamed the same dream. Because of that dream, they rose in the middle of the night and got away on their camels, completely outwitting several searching bands from the palace. By another way they headed for their own country and so, obedient to their own vision, they jogged out of history, never to reappear. It was a night of dreams powerful in meaning.

That night, once again Joseph found himself face to face with the same bright angel that came to his bedside in Nazareth and told him to marry Mary without distrust, for the child in her womb was miraculous. This time the bright angel gave Joseph new instructions:

"Arise, and take the child and His mother and fly into Egypt; and be there until I shall tell you. For it will come to pass that Herod will seek the child and destroy Him."

But how? How to get to Egypt? It would take money to travel so far, and only a few coins were left.

It was a most tormented Joseph who stood in the dark stable thus early in the morning, accepting to the full the stern warning of his dream — yet penniless to obey.

What to do?

Gifts of the Magi

Almost instantaneously he learned there was nothing needed for him to do at all; the money for the long trip to Egypt was already provided. For now he saw, moving toward him in the gloom, the bent figure of his father-in-law. Joachim, too, could not sleep. So he had busied himself usefully, unpacking the gifts the Wise Men had left for the child.

"Flasks of perfume," Joachim whispered to his son-in-law. "Frankincense, the most perfect of all; an ointment made from olive oil, sweetened with spices, fragrant gums, odors of pressed flowers, and in the second package, another stuff called myrrh—they told me it was an aromatic gum taken from a thorn tree!"

Joseph laid a hand on the shoulder of his father-in-law.

"Joachim," he sighed, "we have now to think of other matters."

"And this third gift," the old man rumbled on, "is the smallest and the heaviest of all the Wise Men's bounty. Guess what is in this bundle, Joseph? It's gold! They brought us frankincense, myrrh and gold. They must have known we would need it."

"Glory be to God. Praise His Holy Name," gasped Joseph, and fell to his knees.

Herod in a Panic

Herod was livid when he learned the mysterious Wise Men had escaped his clutches.

It was then that the fears of Herod broke like an explosion in his soul; he was lost in a demoniacal panic.

"In spite of hell I will find this miraculous child!"

That was the one frenzied thought that batted around in his brain. The one clue he had was that the child was supposed to be in Bethlehem. But crowded Bethlehem was full of babies. How find the right one?

A horrible notion occurred to him, and for a cautious instant even Herod hesitated. The one thing the dun-skinned Herod cared about was his throne. Because this child was a menace to his reign, he meant to get rid of it. His face blanched at his own scheme. But terror smoked again in his brain, and fright was roaring in his ears. He clapped red palms together. When his captains came, he spoke to them crisply, briefly, firmly. It was his last resort, but if it had to be, it had to be.

"Do all as I have told you!"

"Kill Them All"

Those captains had to go out of the palace and lead troops to Bethlehem to do his atrocious bidding. They surrounded the city, occupied the streets, rushed into the houses with drawn short swords and uplifted spears. By the order of the king, they cut to death every boy baby in the town. Not one of those holy innocents was spared — only the infant Jesus.

And that was so only because Joseph and Mary and Jesus obeyed the messenger and had already left behind them the city of this massacre. In the middle of the dark the family started out from Bethlehem.

Before them lay the Sinai Desert where for forty years their ancestors had wandered after the escape from Pharaoh.

They were taking the road back to Egypt.

Various Churches Observe World Day of Prayer Services

Rawdon — On the first Friday in Lent the annual World Day of Prayer services were held at many points.

The Women's Inter-Church Council of Canada, with headquarters in Toronto, provided the programs, and this year the service was prepared through the co-operation of African Christians.

The theme, "Walk as Children of Light," as found in Ephesians 5: 8, aptly portrayed the meaning of light.

In 1952 the offerings gathered in Canada were used to provide Christian literature in many countries and this included copies of the Bible. These donations assisted in the work of the mission press at Dondi, West Africa; Women's Christian College at Madras, India; Bible Society of Japan; Christian Literature in Korea; World Student Christian Federation for students in South America, Bible Society of Pakistan, Christian Literature for Moslems and Jews, World Literacy, Braille for the Blind, Inter-Church Aid to Refugees and dozens of other phases of Christian literature.

Then, too, there is a great deal off co-operative work in Canada, assisting the International Leper Mission, the Cree Indians, literature for the Ukrainians, Hungarians, Italians, Czecho-Slovaks, Finnish, French Protestants, and last, but not least, Christian home and family life work in Burma. The 1952 givings amounted to $31,590, a ten-fold increase in 21 years.

Service at Wellman's United Church

About 20 persons from Rawdon circuit gathered at Wellman's United Church where the service was in charge of Mrs. Lindsay Pollock, president of Wellman's W.M.S. Mrs. Frederick Beckett presided at the piano.

The various prayers were given by Mrs. John Mulheron and Mrs. Will Heath, Bethel; Mrs. John Holmes and Mrs. Burton Sharpe, Mount Pleasant; Mrs. John Carlisle, Wellman's, and the pastor.

Mrs. George Watson and Mrs. Lorne Watson sang "'Tis the Blessed Hour of Prayer."

The offering was gathered by Mrs. Clifford Clancy and Mrs. Wanda Beckett.

Rev. R. R. Bonsteel gave a brief address on "Pathways Through Time," which explained the work since its beginning in 1919. The motto is "To unite the women of Canada in every effort to bring in the kingdom of God in their own country and throughout the world."

St. Andrew's, Stirling

Mrs. W. H. Walker, wife of the pastor, and Mrs. L. Munroe welcomed the ladies as they gathered Friday afternoon at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Sunday School hall. The various churches were well represented with almost 60 in attendance. Seated at the head table were Mrs. Don Fargey, St. Andrew's; Mrs. Geo. Carlisle, St. Paul's, and Mrs. Hiram Rodgers, St. John's Church of England.

Mrs. Vernon Matthews presided at the piano and rendered several musical selections in keeping with the service.

Mrs. Fargey opened the service and read "The African Drum Call." "Come everybody, seek rest and strength in the words of God." The leader read "This is the Day of Prayer" and the assembly read in unison the poem entitled "Father of Lights," written by Elizabeth Wilson and Helen Hoburn, and published in the Women's Press in 1913. All sang "Joyful, We Adore Thee."

Mrs. Carlisle presided over a responsive service with a series of messages from the Psalms predominating, and this was followed by a poem, "We Praise Thee, O God"; also words written by a teacher in Mayamba, Belgian Congo, in the form of a prayer that hearts might be lightened as the sun throws light upon dark bushes. The group read several lines on "Light," taken from "God's Candlelight," that famous book, written by Mabel Shaw and published by "Friendship Press." Mrs. Carlisle took charge and read a selection entitled "The World at One in Prayer," by Daniel Johnson Fleming, which depicted heaven as the homeland. Several excerpts were read from Ntsikana, a Bantu Christian, and from a South African student and the leader closed with a prayer asking forgiveness for inequalities tolerated in the family of God's children, after which the assembly sand "Lord of All Being Throned Afar."

Mrs. Hiram Rodgers, of St. John's Church of England, read a special prayer which had been prepared by an African woman in the Belgian Congo. She asked that the missionaries be given strength of body and of heart and that they have courage with which to teach the gospel of Thy Son. A period of silent prayer for Christ's followers and the nations, etc., closed with the Lord's Prayer in uison.

Oral prayers for Her Majesty the Queen and all in authority over us were given by Mrs. Harper Rollins. "For Homes Around the World," Mrs. Robert Christie; "For Increased Private and Family Prayer" by Mrs. Earl Morrow; "For Followers of Christ Around the World," by Mrs. W. H. V. Walker; "For Non-Christians Everywhere," by Mrs. Volney Richardson; "For Peace," by Mrs. H. C. Secker.

A responsive service based on "light" and taken from various Bible passages was followed by that old familiar hymn "Let There be Light."

One Essential Thing

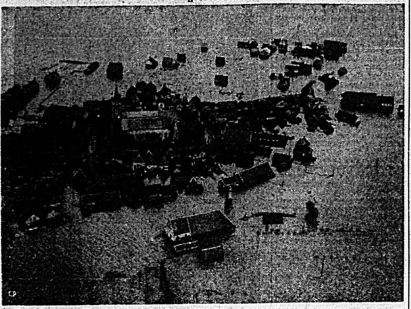
A missionary to Africa gave the call to the task which said "The one esesntial thing is that we strive to have light in ourselves." This special message was read, after which Mrs. Edward Kent gave "a short history of the promotion of 'The World Day of Prayer' in Canada." She synopsized the work from 1920 to the present day, telling how the idea first started in Canada, then in 1922 they joined the church women of the U. S. A. and 25 years later 104 countries celebrated this year-round bond among the Christians of the world. The 1953 theme is: "Walk as Children of Light" and it is the wish that Christians everywhere could recapture the pure and simple faith of children as they sing that beloved hymn "Jesus Bids Us Shine."

Mrs. F. Jeffrey sang "Just For Today."

Mrs. Fargey read a prelude based on "Let Your Light So Shine" and Mrs. R. Hermiston and Mrs. L. Munroe gathered the offering which will be forwarded to the "Women's Inter-Church Council of Canada," where it will be used for Christian literature and education. This offering was dedicated with the doxology and a prayer that through the money gifts "Thy light may shine in many lives."

In the hushed atmosphere all sang "The Day Thou Gavest" and the benediction from Numbers 6: 24 closed a solemn and helpful service.

Village Flooded



Flood damage to The Netherlands has been estimated at $265,000,000 by the Dutch premier, Dr. Willem Drees. Whole sections of the low-lying country were inundated as was Dreischor village on the island of Schouwen-Duiveland, where the water is shown swirling high among the houses. Aid was flown from Canada and other countries and Canadian servicemen were among those who helped in relief and rescue work. A Netherlands flood relief fund has been set up to co-ordinate contributions from Canada. — (CP Photo.)

Someone to Love

By Irene Lonnen Ernhart

She thought she must be mistaken, because Tod wasn't due home until the following day. But it was Tod all right, and he went directly to a table in the far corner. Liz was at the table.

Nina saw Jenny's face. "Jenny!"

Jenny didn't answer. All she could think of was to get out before Tod saw her.

—IX—

Jenny tried to collect herself as the cab slipped through the rainy streets. Everything seemed to be spinning and crashing about her. She had thought that except for the fact that they were living with the Duncans, she and Tod were reasonbaly happy together.

"At least give Tod a chance to explain," Nina urged. The cab stopped in front of Nina's apartment and she handed the driver a bill as she got out. The rain had ceased.

"You're coming in, aren't you Jenny?" You'll feel differently, when you've had a cup of good strong coffee, and I'll whip up some tuna fish salad."

Jenny shook her head. "I'm going home first, but I'll be back in a little while."

The Duncans were home when she got there, except Tod of course.

Ma came to the bedroom door and watched Jenny pack her things. "Well," she exclaimed finally, "what do you think you are doin'."

"I'm going over to stay with Nina," Jenny said quietly.

"You takin' all your things?" Ma said incredulously.

"Yes."

"Leavin' for good, huh?" There was a ring of triumph in the words.

Harriet appeared, magazine in hand, to peer over her mother's shoulder.

Jenny turned to face them. Her eyes brimmed with tears. "I'm leaving for good. I hope you'll be satisfied. You never wanted me here, or tried to make it easy for Tod and me, so we could make a go of our marriage."

"So you're runnin' out on him already! I told him what sort you were. Time and time again I said to him. I said—" Ma began, her voice began to drown out the sports announcer.

"I saw Tod downtown with Liz Conover—or Courtney rather," Jenny threw back, her mouth trembling with anger. "They were meeting each other in a restaurant. She was waiting for him."

"Oh," Ma said sarcastically, "so you've been spying on him. Next thing we know you'll have a detective trailin' him."

"I didn't spy. I just happened to see him." The tears blurred everything and her face burned like fire.

"I'll have you to know," Ma cried, "that if he was meeting Liz Conover, it's your own fault, for naggin' at him, and complainin'. Don't think we didn't hear you quarrelin' with him. The walls aren't that thick. And I said to Harriet at the time, I said—"

"Oh, please!" Jenny said abruptly, "Let's not talk about it." She snapped the suitcase shut.

"You schemed and finagled to get him to marry you, when you knew all the time he was still in love with her. Caught him on the rebound, you did, so I say it serves you right."

Jenny got her fur jacket out of the closet, ripping the mothproof bag off so it would be easier to carry. She tip-toed for a hat box.

Harriet broke in shrilly. "I told Ma Liz would see she made a mistake and come back to him, and he'd get her yet. Love don't die so easy as all that. It's just like the story I was readin'——" she waved her magazine at Jenny Gathering up the hatbox, suitcase and fur jacket, Jenny pushed past them. Joe had the gumption to open the apartment door for her.

Later she wept in Nina's arms.

The doorbell of the apartment rang about eight and Nina answered it. Jenny was still in the tiny kitchenette drinking coffee. She heard Nina's voice and then Tod's, and her heart began to pound and her hands grew cold.

Tod stood in the kitchenette doorway, his face sober, his blue eyes grave and troubled. He shut the door behind him.

Jenny lifted her chin and stared at him coldly. "Well?"

He swallowed nervously. "Jenny you — that is, Ma said—"

He stepped forward and put both hands on the table. "Liz phoned me today. I didn't know it was Liz until I called the number on my pad at the office. She wanted me to meet her, begged me to. I tried to refuse, but she insisted. Maybe I shouldn't have gone, even at that, but — well, I did."

A little red skillet clock hanging over the kitchen range made a lot of racket ticking in the stillness.

"And what did Liz want?" Jenny said at last.

"It turned out to be nothing so important after all. She just—" He broke off and a wave of red climbed across his face. He shrugged.

"Just wanted to see you?" Jenny suggested. "To tell you she'd made a mistake, I suppose."

"She didn't know I was married until I told her." He came around back of her and put his hands on her shoulders and slid them down her arms. She did not move, but her bones were melting. "Jenny, I wouldn't have hurt you for anything. When Ma told me what had happened I felt miserable to think I'd hurt you like that."

Jenny began to feel ashamed Nina was right, she should have given him a chance to explain.

Tod went on talking. He knew how she felt about the apartment and living with Ma and Harriet and Joe. He'd find a place where they could be alone together, even if it was just one room.

Later Nina suggested that they might find a place in the trailer camp near Markwood College.

—X—

Tod hadn't been quite honest with Jenny about meeting Liz Conover. When he saw that phone number on his pad at the office he had a feeling it would be Liz who would answer. And Liz had not begged him to meet her, either. She'd merely said she wanted awfully to see him. When she said that, such a crazy yearning to see her took possession of him that he momentarily lost his senses, forgot about Jenny and everything else.

He said he'd meet her at their favorite table in the Greenbriar. Driving toward the restaurant a few moments later he thought all at once about Jenny. He knew she wasn't expecting him home from his road trip until the following day, and he planned to surprise her by picking her up at the shop.

But there was no reason why he should feel such a sense of guilt about going off to meet Liz for a few minutes. People were broadminded about such things in these times. And he couldn't have refused without seeming prudish, or giving Liz the impression he was afraid to see her again. He'd tell Jenny about it, of course, and they'd probably get a laugh out of it.

He parked his car in the lot behind the Greenbriar and adjusted his bow tie by the rear view mirror. "Now look here," he told himself sternly, "there's no use getting excited about meeting Liz. That's all over."

Yes, it was all over. He repeated it two or three times on the way from the parking lot to the restaurant. But he knew the minute he saw Liz it wasn't over.

Liz was wearing a draped hat, exotic and expensive. Her eyes, slanted, dark, mysterious and exciting; that smooth skin, those wonderful rounded shoulders——.

"Oh darling Tod, how good it is t ose you!" Her voice with that husky caress in it. Everything—every single thing about Liz you went for and couldn't help yourself.

"Gosh Liz, it's good to see you."

She waved him to a chair.

They sat across from each other The light was dim and somehow an awkwardness lay between them. The waiter brought their order.

"I just had to see you, Tod." She smiled at him over the rim of her glass.

He knew suddenly that he shouldn't be here, sitting with Liz as he had so often before, and feeling the same old way about her.

"Why?" He said it bluntly.

Liz bit her lower lip. "You want me to be honest with you, Tod!" But she didn't wait for him to answer her question. "I don't know why on earth I married Jim. It was all wrong."

"If that's what you asked me here to say, it's wasting your time and mine," Tod said roughly. Yes, he'd been a fool to come. Because he wanted to take Liz in his arms and tell her she was right — they'd both made mistakes —— his was marrying Jenny.

"It's never a waste of time to apologize and say you're sorry," Liz said huskily, "and that's what I'm doing."

"In this case it's a waste."

"But I had to do it, Tod."

"You're only hurting yourself and me, too," he said grimly. "You're married. I'm married. If that doesn't settle things, I don't know what could."

The color drained from Liz's beautiful face. "You're married?"

"Right." He shut his teeth firmly together. All he wanted now was to get out of there.

Liz fumbled in her purse for her compact and he saw that her slender hands were trembling.

"I guess I can't blame you," she said. "There's not even any use now trying to tell you how it all happened."

They looked at each other for a second or two, and he could see that Liz read in his eyes that his being married hadn't changed things much."

"No," he said coldly, "there's no use either one of us trying to explain, and there's no use our seeing each other again."

Driving home, he kept thinking how bright Liz's dark eyes had grown when he said that. He'd been afraid she was going to cry. Liz, of all people! Cynical, witty, sophisticated Liz verging on tears because they weren't ever going to see each other again.

When he reached the apartment and Ma told him what had happened he quit thinking about Liz, like a man waking from a dream. He was furious with himself for having hurt Jenny. He couldn't bear to think of making her suffer. The quickness with which Jenny forgave him and her trusting attitude, were almost more than he had expected.

Now, the thought of living in a trailer camp was anything but appealing t ohim, but he owed it to Jenny to try to make her happy. Living in the apartment with his family had been hard. Maybe when they were alone together, even though it was nothing more pretentious than a trailer, they'd get along better.

Jenny's happiness was his business now. He must remember that, and not think about Liz at all. He must fight to keep her out of his thoughts. But after their meeting it wasn't going to be easy.

—XI—

The Homecroft trailer camp was situated in what had once been a pasture. The trailers were all sizes, shapes and descriptions. Some were brave with tiny wooden awnings, white with green, red or blue stripes, others boasted miniature picket fences. One or two were home-made affairs, crooked and leaning, with makeshift accessories of one kind or another and built-on rooms with sloping roofs.

The place smelled depressing. One was aware of mingled odors of stagnant water and coal oil and garbage.

Jenny and Tod rented a small trailer at the end of one of the gravel lanes named Avenue B. The camp was directly across from the college campus and one had a good view of the trees from one window.

Max had generously given Jenny all day off, so she and Tod could move their things to the new home. They shopped together at a super-market for the first groceries to stock the cupboards of the trailer.

Their first dinner together was reminiscent of those suppers they had had at the house on Catalpa street before they were married. There were candles and a gleaming white cloth on the card table set up in the miniature living room. Already Jenny was planning how she could turn the trailer into a real home, bright new curtains, a picture or two, some bright cushions for the day bed.

She was anxious too, to get acquainted with some of the other couples who lived in the camp. She had noticed they were mostly young couples like Tod and her, probably all students. The getting acquainted would have to be mostly up to Tod, who would be around all the time as soon as school started. Working, she'd be gone all day, and Sundays would be the only time she would want to see anyone.

Meanwhile they settled down. Tod enrolled and she could tell at once that he wasn't too enthused about the school. It wasn't going to be anything like State University.

"I can't understand why you didn't go ahead and finish at State. It wouldn't have cost any more."

Tod reddened and his jaws tightened a little. "Things would be too different,' he said curtly.

Yes, Jenny was thinking, it would be different. At the State University, he had had things easy, living in a fraternity house, enjoying the admiration due one of the big lettermen. And besides that he'd been in Liz Conover's crowd, the top dogs.

Pontiacs Win Over Madoc 10-5

BANCROFT — Bancroft Pontiacs took their revenge here on Monday night for last Friday's defeat at Madoc as they trounced an eager Madoc club by a decisive 10-5 margin. A crowd of nearly 900 fans watched the local boys as they outskated, outplayed and outscored the visitors all the way in the fast Hastings-Addington League semi-final tilt. Bancroft is now ahead 2 games to 1 on the best of five series and will have their chance to finish it off this week. The winner of the series will meet Tamworth for the league championship. It is expected that the Pontiacs will enter Intermediate OHA play-off competition on completion of the league schedule if present plans materialize.

The first period play was the closest of the game, ending in a 3-2 score. Bob Ramsbottom, Johnny Pilgrim and B. Green were the Pontiac marksmen. Smith and Brown bagged the Madoc points.

In the second period the local boys turned on the heat and walked all over their opposition as they beat goalie "Buck" Carswell five times on the efforts of Ramsbottom, who grabbed a pair, Bob Comrie, Ted Maxwell and Stu. Stringer. Hewgall racked up the lone Madoc counter. Scoring was even in the third heat and the Madoc boys rallied slightly. Bill Delyea and Norm Brough scored the Bancroft goals, Delyea banging his in from a prone position on the ice. Brown and Smith grabbed one each for Madoc, their seconds of the evening.

Bob Ramsbottom, the flying game warden, had a field day picking up five points on three goals and a pair of assists. Johnny Pilgrim, playing his first game of the season with Bancroft, got away to a good start with a single

Despite the high score, which has characterized most of the home games this season and is due to the offensive type of play and loose defence, the game was hard played and easy to watch. Referee Bob Hurst, TVL defenceman who had trouble at Madoc in the last game and meted out appropriate punishment by handing Brown a match misconduct, handled the game capably. He handed out seven minors, four of them going to Pontiac players.

The teams: Bancroft — goal, A. Young; defence, S. Stringer, C. McAlpine, J. Hattin, L. Dougall; forwards, E. Brough, B. Comrie, N. Brough, B. Ramsbottom, B. Green, T. Maxwell, R. Severin, J. Pilgrim, B. Delyea, F. Bruce.

Madoc — goal, Carswell; defence, Kellar, Alexander, O'Neill, Brown, Hewgall; forwards, Nayler, G. Nickle, Smith, Gawley, E Carswell, Woods, F. Nickle, Reynolds.

Ghost Mining Town May Be Wiped Out by Rush

SASKATOON (CP)—Goldfields, a ghost mining town since the northwestern Saskatchewan gold rush with which it was born petered out 10 years ago, now is being wiped off the map in the wake of the uranium rush.

Remaining buildings in Goldfields, on the north shore of Lake Athabaska 500 miles north of Saskatoon, are being moved across the lake ice to the new, thriving town of Uranium City which sprang up 10 miles away last year during Saskatchewan's record uranium staking rush.

The move symbolizes the switch in importance in Saskatchewan from the "old minerals" to uranium. It also heralds the greatest year so far in the history of mineral development in the province.

PROSPECTORS' MECCA

In virtually every mineralized location north of the 55th parallel, hordes of prospectors and mining men are probing and listening for the uranium. Fabulous claims have been made for many discoveries and even more startling reports are likely to be made as knowledge of more recent finds becomes public.

Near Uranium City, in the 500-square-mile Beaverlodge uranium field, two mines are scheduled to go into production early this year, one by the federal Crown corporation, Eldorado, and the other by a private company. Discoveries in the area will be proved up after the snow goes.

Just north of the 55th parallel, similar activity is forecast for properties near Lac La Ronge, farther east and 130 miles north of Prince Albert.

Between Lac La Ronge and Athabaska lies the chain of narrow waterways known as the Foster lakes. Here, according to sketchy reports leaking out of the area, Saskatchewan is likely to find rich mineral deposits.

Uranium ore is reported in addition to deposits of cobalt, zinc, copper, gold and silver.

NEAR LAC LA RONGE

The area's nearness to Lac La Ronge—it is only 113 air miles from the northern settlement—indicates that it may be of more importance to the province than the Beaverlodge field, which is really accessible only from Waterways, the end of steel just across the border in Alberta.

Before any diamond drilling is done, claims have to be probed and trenched and samples of ore analyzed. The results must show that the claims are rich enough to warrant expenditure of many hundreds of thousands of dollars in drilling programs.

Already, since it became important late last year, more than 900 claims have been staked in the Foster lakes area. The major holdings are by Eldorado.

What Do Textbooks Say About Cases Like This

A group of German school teachers, returning from a party by bus, had a near-brush with death when the bus plunged into a frozen lake near Frankfurt, breaking the thin ice. The bus driver had left the vehicle for a few minutes when the bus started rolling down a steep highway. A woman sitting next to the driver's seat averted a disaster by steering the bus into a pond, where it was brought to a standstill. Scene shows one of the teachers climbing out of a bus window. The passengers were able to leave the bus by breaking windows and wading through the icy water. No one was injured.—Central Press Canadian.

"Canada Will Be Communist," Says Red Dean

Speaking to an audience composed of both supporters and hecklers in Toronto, Dr. Hewlett Johnson, the "Red Dean" of Canterbury, gave this pose for photographers and called it "The Dean in Full Flight." Stopped from speaking by hecklers in London, Ont., the dean made his full address in Toronto, but not before several persons were removed from the hall. He praised Russia as a peace-loving nation and declared that Canada would one day be a Communist country. Then he said he was returning to Britain. — Central Press Canadian.

Murder Trial Adjourned Due To Juror's Illness

KITCHENER (CP)—The murder trial of Kenneth Wiles, 21-year-old Kitchener carpenter, was adjourned Wednesday before the regular time when a juror became ill and had to be assisted from the jury box.

The afternoon session was delayed 15 minutes when Donald Weber was taken violently ill at the hotel where the jury is staying. Earlier in the day an attending doctor had pronounced his illness as tonsilitis.

Shortly before 5 p. m. the trial was adjourned when Weber was again stricken.

Wiles is charged with the slaying Jan. 27 of Marie Huras, 17, also of Kitchener.

A second weapon was introduced into evidence Wednesday when William Balge, 74, told of finding a sawed-off gun. Balge said he threw it away but later called police and went with detective John Zettell to retrieve it.

Deective Zettell testified that the gun smelled of burnt gunpowder. He said that with the exception of a bit of mud the un was clean.

The finding of shells in the back of Wile's car and metal shavings both in the basement and garage of his home was also described by detective Zettell. The barrell and butt of the gun were located in the garage.

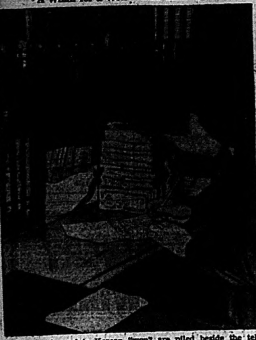
A Whan for a Won is Fair Exchange



Stacks of obsolete Korean "won" are piled beside the teller of a South Korean bank as she signs a receipt guaranteeing that the old money will be replaced by the new "whan." RAWDON

River Valley W. I. Holds Pie Social, Enjoys Descriptive Travelogue

RAWDON — River Valley Women's Institute sponsored a program and pie social in the school house on Friday evening with a capacity audience in attendance. The sponsors were Mr. and Mrs. Roy Bush; Mr. Clarence Chard and son, John. Everyone had a delightful evening of fun and merriment.

There were 95 adults who paid the 25-cent fee and almost 50 school children were admitted free. Visitors were in attendance from Madoc, Bethel, Carmel, Mount Pleasant and Stirling.

Program

Mr. John Chard, teacher at the O.S.D., Belleville, was master of ceremonies and presided over a variety program.

Mr. Farley Lindenfield led the assembly singing with Mrs. Ralph Utman as piano accompanist twice during the evening.

Miss Adeline Bush read a humorous story entitled "Inferior Decorators Incorporated," written by Miss Geneva I. Wagar.

Several musical selections were rendered by Mr. Harry Philp, violin, and Mrs. Ivah Thain, piano.

Mrs. Ross Bush read a humorous story on "How She Learned to Skate." The junior pupils of the school contributed three selections with their music teacher, Miss Grace Pitman, A.T.C.M. accompanying them for the first selection and the last two were unaccompanied.

Commemorates Day of Prayer

In commemoration of the World Day of Prayer which was held throughout the world that day, Mrs. Percy MacMullen recited an old poem entitled, "Answered Prayer."

Nine girls of the school sang "Merrily Away We Go," with Miss Pitman as accompanist.

Misses Grace and JoAnne Heasman sang, "A Roving I Will Go," with Miss Eleanor Bush as accompanist. Mrs. Clifford Lansing read, "Twelve Rules for Worrying," and "Definitions of a Girl and a Boy," both of which gave food for thought.

Twelve senior pupils of River Valley school sang a Negro melody, "I Hear the Bells," and eight of them then demonstrated a two-part square dance, the last an old-fashioned quadrille. The music and caller for the first sections was provided on the record player.

At this juncture, Mrs. Roy Bush presented the school with two large records containing four selections of dance music. Mrs Bush made the presentation on behalf of the group who sponsored the evening for the institute and Master Douglas Kane accepted the records and graciously voiced thanks on behalf of the school pupils.

Debate

At this point a lively debate was enjoyed — "Resolved that people over 50 years of age derive more enjoyment out of life than those under 50."

Affirmative — Bob Philp and Ed Heasman; negative —— Jack Sager and Glenn Bush. Timekeeper — Ross Bush, with each speaker allowed two minutes to present his arguments. Judges — Ross Holland, G. B. Bedford and Mrs. Percy MacMullen.

The debate was well given by all participants, many humorous notes were brought forth and several down to earth facts presented. The material was well arranged and each speaker was strong in persuasive ability to prove that his side should win.

Later, when Mr. G. B. Bedford replied, on behalf of the judges, he complimented the group on their efforts and said the affirmative side had won by a very slight margin. The four speakers received a special pie for their part in the program.

Mr. J. L. Donohoe gave a brief address and recited "The Goat and the Plaid Shrit."

Travelogue

Last, but not least, on the program, was an interesting talk by Mr. John Chard who chose as his title, "Rambling thoughts of a trip to Florida."

On December 28th, four teachers from the O.S.D., Belleville, set out with an Austin car for Florida and Cuba and enjoyed a 4,500-mile trip.

By two large marked maps, John traced the trip which was a planned route with travel folders giving descriptions of interesting places to visit along the way. The boys left Belleville with a good supply of sandwiches, beef and salmon, but they made sure to eat up all the beef sandwiches before they crossed the border line at Windsor. They planned to drive between 400 and 500 miles per day as it was a 12 day trip.

With three drivers, each took the wheel for 50 miles and in that way no one felt the strain of driving. They found the motor courts reasonable as this was off season for tourists. John took the group via "The Wabash Trail" through mountainous country, to the birth place of Abraham Lincoln, where a monument is erected to his memory.

The speaker gave a vivid description of "Cave City" telling how they are electrically lighted to show off their natural beauty, and told how "Horseshoe Falls" is so realistic.

Lebanon Cedars

In the Tennessee States, Red and Lebanon cedars abound and at one point there is a special "lookout tower" from which seven states can be viewed. Here also they viewed the real "Hill Billies" as heard on the air waves.

Herefords and polled Angus were the cows most numerous with a few Jerseys. The boys had their pictures taken with mules and John displayed branches of real cotton, also a rubber alligator. Here the earth is brick red and the trees are draped with Spanish moss, which thrives on air.

At St. Petersburgh, Florida, they saw their first oranges and grapefruit. John graphically described the pelican birds, the sand beaches, the palm trees with umbrella tops, the poinsettias and other beautiful flowers, the cypress gardens, the singing tower and water skiing. Here various kinds of sea shells are found and tourists are hereby interested in picking up choice selections. The boys crossed the "Everglades" and saw many flocks of crows, robins and Canada geese which were holidaying in a warmer climate.

Miami, Florida, has a population of 172,000 with 365 magnificent hotels. On New Year's eve they viewed "the Orange Bowl parade" with a large galaxy of interesting and colorful floats. From there they travelled to Key West and on to Cuba and here John left the group and they could find their own way back home.

Pays Tribute

Mr. Harry Morrow, Reeve of Sidney, and a member of River Valley community was given an ovation and spoke briefly. He paid tribute to his teacher, Mrs. Roy Bush, formerly Bessie Rosebush and told of his first attempt at public speaking during his school days.

Mrs. Roy Bush voiced thanks to all who had assisted with the program and specially thanked John for his descriptive talk on his recent trip south.

The ladies served an abundance of sandwiches, pickles, pie, and coffee.

The Institute has 51 members and about 25 of them were in attendance at this function with their families.

Mrs. Percy Utman voiced thanks to the sponsors for the grand evening.

A euchre party will be held next week and the prizes will be donated by Mr. and Mrs. Fred McDonnell.

Hawks Perch On Home Roost; Watch Playoff Prospects Grow Brighter

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By Geo. H. Carver, Sports Editor

The longest faces in town last night outside the guys who have filed income tax returns were those of the two blokes who bet the month's rent that the Kingston Goodyears would take the Glens in three straight. Tsk, Tsk, how careless can some people be with their money.

In a rip-roaring tilt in which the Glens proved their "comebackness", the teams battled to a five-all stalemate while 6,500 Kingston tonsils got more air than a 75-year-old stage-door Johnny. The other 500 tonsils emitted raucous Moira River war-whoops.

It was a slam-bang battle with the Moira supporters' hopes plummeting near the end of the first heat when the charging Goodies slung home three goals in exactly two minutes and two seconds, to give them a 3-1 period lead.

But chuckling Kingstonians straightened up in their plush seats when the Glens, roaring back like a bevy of jungle-juiced jackrabbits, cut the margin to 3-2 midway through the second, and then watched big Vern Goyer slam the puck past Johnson for a brace of honeys that put them in the lead. From then on it was dog-eat-dog. The Goodies tied it up, and the squads went at it hammer-and-tongs to divided scoring honors in the stretch drive. In the time-and-a-half session, it was the same story, with Johnson and Parisi standing out in their respective nets. Parisi stopped a puck with his nasal appendage that was painful, and took the youngster off stride for a minute or two.

They go back at it again in Memorial Arena tomorrow night in what should be a sizzling bout for the honor of winning the first game in this all-out senior "B" jamboree.

A CLOSE ONE!

Here in the shadow of the Zwick's Island timberlands, the junior Hawks almost tasted the dregs of defeat for the second time at the hands of the Warriors from the banks of the Scugog. They blew a two-goal first period lead but the fighting Lindsay younkers came back to score one in each of the second and third periods to stalemate the issue.

Not only that, but they grabbed the lead in the first minute of play in overtime, only to have "Hammerin' Hank" Therrien solo a neat piece of pucking and tie it up. And danged if the Scuggogers didn't grab the lead again.

Enter Coach Don Barrett, of the Hawks, who gambled on a long shot. The ratio of scoring chances by the simple procedure of yanking the goalie and inserting another forward is one out of ten. It was the tenth time last night. Barrett withdrew Barclay with a little under a minute to go and tossed out half dozen of his best attackers. It paid off and guess who scored? It was "Hammerin' Hank" again.

And if they're giving away any tangible kudos up around Lindsay for as neat a piece of puck-stopping as these hockey-weary orbs have seen in some time, they should go to Master Ron Truax, the Lindsay net wizard. This young gentleman deflected pucks with his ears, eyeballs, dandruff and practically every other part of his anatomy. He was cooler than an ice-cube in Aklivik and refused to be deked by inrushing Hawk forwards. The "Turk", wearing a special mask, saw his first action since his injury and also came up with a fine performance.

The fourth game of the best-of-five series, and don't forget it's the best-of-five, is slated for Lindsay on Saturday night, with the fifth game here on Monday.

MINOR HOCKEY!

Tonight is "Minor Hockey Night" in the city when three teams clash with Kingston representatives in the second games of the OMHA goals-to-count playdowns. The bantams, midgets and juveniles go to the mat in what should be a series of thrilling games with the Belleville banties favored to win their round. These youngsters hold a four-goal lead over Kingston and should win tonight. It's different with the midgets and juveniles. They were beaten in Kingston last week and face a tough barrier. However, they'll be out there giving their best and fans should turn out and give the stars of tomorrow some much-appreciated support.

Barrie Flyers Clinch First Position With 7-4 Decision Over Biltmores

Timmins - Porcupine Combines may be headed for their seventh consecutive Northern Ontario Hockey Association Junior A championship.

The Combines downed Falconbridge Wolves 5-2 in Sudbury Wednesday night to take a 2-0 lead in their best-of-five game final. Timmins won the first game of the series in Sudbury Tuesday with a 5-3 overtime victory.

Guelph Biltmores, last year's Memorial Cup champions, missed the train for the post-season play in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series when they lost a 7-4 decision to the league-leading Barrie Flyers Wednesday night. Barrie, Toronto Marlboros, Toronto St. Michael's, St. Catharines Teepees, Galt Black Hawks and Oshawa Generals, standing in that order, hold the playoff positions. Who will meet whom after the schedule ends still remains to be decided in the remaining eight games.

In Sudbury, the Combines blasted three goals in the final four minutes for their win. They led 2-1 at the end of the second but Falconbridge tied it up midway in the third.

The Flyers' win in Guelph did more than knock the Biltmores out of the playoffs. It clinched first place for Barrie, now five points ahead of the second-place Marlboros. Marlboros have only two games left in the regular schedule.

Johnny Martan paced the Flyers with three goals. Orv Tessier scored two and picked up an assist to move into sole possession of second place among the scoring leaders. Oother Barrie goalgetters were captain Skip Teal and Roy McKenney.

Captain Ron Murphy notched two for Guelph with the others going to Chuck Henderson and Jim Connelly.

Canadiens Edge Toronto 2-1 As New York Dittoes Boston; Single Points Separate Teams

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Chicago Black Hawk playoff hopes are brighter today.

The Hawks, currently in a three-way fight with Toronto Maple Leafs and Boston Bruins for the last two places in the National Hockey League playoffs, just sat at home Wednesday night while both Toronto and Boston lost.

The Leafs dropped a 2-1 decision to Montreal Canadiens in Toronto while the tail-end New York Rangers, who are gaining a reputation as the league spoilers, defeated the Bruins by the same score.

Single points separate Toronto, Boston and Chicago with the Leafs in third spot, the Bruins fourth and Chicago in fifth.

Strengthen Hold

In Toronto, Montreal consolidated its hold on second place with veteran Elmer Lach scoring the winning tally. The 35-year-old star centre who has been playing in the NHL for 13 years, scored his tally in the second period to give the Canadiens a 2-0 lead that was enough for victory.

Lach also set up Montreal's first goal, slipping the puck to defenceman Doug Harvey who sank a 40-foot shot. George Armstrong scored the Toronto tally in the second period on a slap shot.

At New York the Rangers kept their jinx over the Bruins intact. Boston is the only team in the league on which the Rangers have a season's edge. New York now has won six, Boston four and two other games were tied.

Pete Babando started the scoring for New York in the first period on a 25-foot shot. Just past the half-way mark of the second defenceman Allan Stanley scored from near the blue line.

Ed Sandford fired Boston's goal on a three-man breakaway in the third period. Fleming Mackell and Hal Laycoe received assists.

In tonight's only game Toronto has a chance to gain on Boston and Chicago when the Leafs move into Montreal. A scheduled game between Detroit and Chicago has been postponed until March 21.

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada's top figure skaters, with one notable exception, take to the emerald-green ice of Ottawa's Minto Club today to open the three-day Canadian figure skating championships.

The country's best amateur woman skater, 22-year-old Suzanne Morrow, announced in Toronto Wednesday night she has temporarily given up the sport to concentrate on studies at the Ontario Veterinary College.

In her absence, interest centres on Norris Rowden and Frances Dafoe, the brilliant Toronto couple who placed second in pairs competition in the recent world championships at Davos, Switzerland.

Last year's men's singles champion, Peter Firstbrook, and the junior men's titlist, Charles Snelling, are back to defend their titles. Both are from Toronto.

Other top performers among the 5 entries are Sonia Currie of Edmonton, winner of the Western women's title, and Peter Dunfield and Elizabeth Gratton, both of Toronto.

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Bob Sabourin fired four goals to pace Pittsburgh Hornets to an 8-1 victory over Syracuse Warriors in an American Hockey League game Wednesday night.

The victory, combined with first-place Cleveland Barons' 8-6 loss to Buffalo, left the second-place Hornets only two points behind the Barons.

Sabourin scored three goals in the first period, then added another in the second period.

Frank Eddolls, playing coach for Cleveland, Bob Fryday and Lorne Davis each scored twice for the Bisons. Gord Pennell and Cal MacKay scored the others.

To Announce Que. Suspension Vote Today

MIDLAND (CP)—George S. Dudley, secretary-manager of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, is to announce today the result of an airmail vote among CAHA executives over the proposed suspension of the Quebec Amateur Hockey Association.

Dudley said Wednesday he will leave Friday night for Montreal where he has scheduled a CAHA executive meeting to deal with the Quebec group's defiance of a CAHA player suspension ruling.

The QAHA is standing behind Montreal junior Canadiens in their use of Ron Atwell, a rightwinger suspended earlier this season by the CAHA for failing to report to Kitchener-Waterloo Greenshirts of the Ontario Hockey Association junior A circuit after signing with them.

The QAHA contends the draft system is used only by the OHA and is not recognized by the Quebec association. However, the CAHA have made the suspension stick.

If today's vote suspends the whole QAHA set-up, no Quebec teams would be eligible for Allan Cup, Memorial Cup or Alexander Cup playoffs.

Saturday's meeting would poll various Quebec leagues to find out which will affiliate with the CAHA in the event of suspension of the QAHA.

Pete Gilbert, 73 Skips Ont. Rink

CHATHAM (CP) — Ontario's representatives in the Canadian curling championship at Sudbury next week are assured of one distinction: Their team boasts the oldest competitor.

Pete Gilbert, 73, is skip of the Ontario entry and to this Southwestern Ontario community, "Mr. Curling."

He didn't chuck his first rock until 1931 at nearby Ridgetown when he was 50 years old. But in competition since then he has made up for his late start.

His victory two weeks ago in the Ontario championships was his second in four years. In 1949 he skipped the Ontario quartet in the Canadian finals and the same year won the senior Tankard event at Hamilton.

In 1944 he received an honorary life membership in the Detroit Curling Club.

Pete was the man mainly responsible for the revival of curling in this district.

In 1939 he purchased the former arena, which had been condemned for hockey, and turned it over to the Chatham Curling Club with the result that the game has increased in popularity and prominence greatly during the past decade.

Two of Pete's sons, Gord and Bob, are also members of the rink. Gord, at 34, the youngest member of the rink, accompanied his father in their previous bid for the Canadian title.

Glens, Goodyears; Hawks, Lindsay Battle To 5-All Overtime Stalemates

Spot Kingston Two in First, Tie It Up in Roaring Second In Thrilling Senior Playoff

KINGSTON (Special) — Kingston's Goodyears were held to a dead heat last night in the Community Memorial Centre when the opening game of the best-of-seven Ontario Hockey Association Senior B group semi-finals against the Belleville Glen Roys ended in a 5-5 overtime stalemate.

It was a tensely waged duel in which the wizardry of goal-keeper "Tony" Parisi offset the superiority that the locals exhibited in the general run of play. In a sense it was also a "victory" for the Glens in that the home ice advantage that had favored Goodyears has been erased.

Parisi, who hails from Kirkland Lake, and is still eligible for junior company, turned in the most sensational game ever seen in the young Community Centre and prevented the Carr-Harrismen from vaulting into a one-game lead. During the heavy bombardment of his citadel he made thirty-six saves and on two occasions, in the opening period, stopped five drives in a row with the snipers camping on his doorstep.

Parisi Hurt

Midway in the second period Parisi stopped a close-in shot by Johnny Myke and seconds later was struck and injured by Jack McKeown's rising drive.

He was led away to the dressing room for repairs but he was back in a hurry and showed no ill effects of the blow.

But if Parisi was Goodyear's nemesis Don Murray, filled the same role at the expense of the Glens. Working on a line with Al Deluca and Clint Tinkess, the swiftie from Perth, via Queen's University, took top attacking honors when he racked up three goals and had an assist. Murray did his sniping from close range when he had Parisi at his mercy.

The pace, which was sustained during regulation time, took its toll in the extra session when most of the players were verging on collapse. The Glens, however, were playing and praying for that deadlock whereas Goodyears kept striving with might and main to grasp two valuable points. Parisi, however, proved invincible in that emergency and dismayed not only Goodyears but also most of the 3,541 fans who witnessed the thrilling struggle.

Eight of the thirteen penalties, all minors, inflicted by referees Jim Crombie and Larry Heffering were served by the aspiring and perspiring visitors, Jud Semark drew two of the sentences and was the lone dual offender. Vernon Goyer who scored twice and Keith MacDonald who got a goal and an assist paced the Belleville attackers, Deluca with three assists was runner-up to Murray while Clint Tinkess and Ted Nicholson each had two assists.

Fast Play

Play was fast and exciting from the start and during the first two minutes spectacular goalkeeping balked the marksmen. Jack Wardhaugh drew the first penalty at 2.35 the charge being interference, during his absence Parisi stopped a shower of rubber when "Red" Doran wasn't killing time by exhibiting nifty stickhandling in the mid-ice zone.

Shortly after Wardhaugh's return, Doug Day was penalized for hooking but Parisi held the fort and made ten stops in a hurry.

The teams were at full strength when Brian Mulvihill broke in behind the Goodyear defence after taking a pass from Semark and his swift and wide pass to MacDonald enabled that sharpshooter to dash to close quarters before slipping the puck past Ken Johnson.

Both teams missed golden scoring opportunities as the blinding pace continued before Murray got the tying counter at 17.17, while attacking in conjunction with Deluca and Tinkess, twenty seconds later Murray shot the Goodyears ahead while Deluca and Ted Nicholson each drew an assist. Semark was banished for tripping at 18.50 and nine seconds after that mishap Johnny Myke tallied with Murray and George MacGregor each lending a helping hand.

Semark returned to action early in the middle session but was waved away again at 6.25. Deluca joined him at 6.36. Goodyears then launched a strong offensive but Parisi thwarted them on several occasions. At the 10.40 mark Parisi was injured and two minutes after he resumed operations Ted DeGray cut Kingston's lead to one. Walter Gerow was penalized at the 14 minute mark and in a space of thirty seconds Ken Partis scored after taking a pass from Nicholson.

Goyer Scores

The Belles retaliated by rushing to the attack and Goyer scored at 15.30 after Doran had engineered a picturesque attack. Goyer, aided by "Red" Jones, struck again six seconds after Gerow had rejoined his teammates. Penalties to Jones and Myke for roughing and to Bob Londry for charging Doran into the boards came together.

Parisi was penalized and Tommy Schreider was elected to serve his time. In clearing the puck from the Belleville defence zone Doran hit the clock in centre ice and a face-off was ordered at the point of delivery. Jerry Desjardins, who had been jarred, played only briefly during the middle period and was absent over the rest of the route.

Take Lead

At the 3.30 mark in the third period, Doug Bastedo shot the Glens ahead for the first and only time during the game. He was assisted by Wardhaugh and McDonald. Stan Stewart was serving a penalty. Murray got that one back at 7.48 after collaborating with DeLuca and Tinkess He also concluded the tallying but during the remainder of the session and in overtime the rivals had their moments when it appeared the deadlock would be broken. Johnson made a great save at 19.20 and stopped Goyer's shot with only one second to play in regular time. Parisi also made two miraculous stops during the final minute.

Sensational goalkeeping by Johnson and Parisi broke the snipers' hearts in overtime, Jack White, in particular, was victimized when he fired three times but failed. With 95 seconds left Johnny Carr-Harris sent four forwards into action and this strategy almost paid dividends when a flying puck hit a defender's stick but, luckily for the Belles, sped over the top of the net. With two seconds left DeGray had a chance to break up the battle but his shot went wide. Two weary teams staggered to the dressing rooms but they'll probably be ready when the second game of the set begins in Belleville tomorrow night.

Napanee teams played host to Belleville seniors and juniors on Tuesday night in their new gym.

Napanee was unable to get any shots but Mary Huffman dropped in three free shots. BCI was ahead at the end of the half with a 6-3 score.

Interceptions by Donna McNish and Carol Weston were thrilling to see. The guards played a fine game, getting the ball up the floor to the forwards many times only to be lost to the Napanee players.

Football Meeting Is Postponed

The football meeting scheduled for Friday night at Kiwanis Centre has been postponed, it was announced today. Reason for the postponement is the Kingston-Belleville senior hockey game, which was not scheduled when plans were drawn up for the meeting.

Announcement of the new date is expected to be made tomorrow.

Warriors Come from Behind To Tie Pastime by Game End; Both Score Twice in Overtime

Belleville Black Hawks and Lindsay Warriors battled to a thrilling 5-5 overtime tie at the Memorial Arena last night in the third game of their best-of-five semi-final junior "B" playoffs. Each team had won one game until last night's encounter.

Most of the chapeau-doffing today was done in the direction of Hank Therrien, the Hawks' fancy right winger from Chapleau. His two sparkling overtime goals, the last with only 57 seconds of the tussle left, twice brought his club from behind to salvage the draw.

Other scorers for the Hawks were Doug Hull, George Jacklin and Ron Halstead. This trio, working as a unit, formed the most potent combination on the ice. Lindsay markers went to Eric Chidley, Hal Williams, Jack Graham, Tom Hutton and Murray Packer.

Eighteen Penalties

Referee Maurice Walsh, of Newmarket, handed out 18 penalties, the Hawks drawing 10. Belleville goalie Don Barclay made his first appearance since breaking his jaw some weeks ago and played with the aid of a mask.

Lindsay jumped into the lead at 5.37 of the first period, Chidley sinking a low six-footer on passes from Ron Teel and McGill.

The Hawks romped back to tally three in a row and it looked as though they were on their way to an easy triumph. It was Hull on the trigger end for the first, snapping in a backhander from the edge of the crease after taking a perfect pass from Halstead.

Exactly three minutes later, Jacklin and Halstead combined on a biscuit-passing, rink-length rush and big George's short shot sent the Hawks ahead 2-1. Halstead upped the count to 3-1 15 seconds afterwards as he sunk a short backhander on a play with linemates Jacklin and Hull.

Goalies Barclay and Reg Traux were both spectacular as the second period got under way. Packer finally cut the Hawk edge to 3-2, banging one home from in close on passes from Art Truax and Bill Williams. The Hawks poured it on for the remainder of the canto, but the remarkable Mr. Truax made like the ghosts of Durnan, Brimsek and Broda combined.

Tied it Early

Harold Williams finally tied it up at 7.48 of the third period. Taking passes from Graham and Gibson, he made Barclay hit the deck with his first shot then flipped the puck over the fallen netminder on the second chance. That, as it proved, sent the game into overtime.

The extra session was only 51 seconds old when Graham took Harold Williams' pass and raced in to sink a high backhander to give Lindsay a 4-3 lead. Therrien tied it up two minutes later, weaving his way up the left side and whistling a low drive past Truax.

Just 38 seconds afterwards, Hutton plunged the fans into deep gloom as he sunk a short backhander with the help of Don Crawford and Art Truax.

Then with less than a minute left to play, Coach Don Barrett pulled Barclay out of the Belleville nets. The Hawks forced a faceoff in the Lindsay zone. Hull won the draw and slipped it back to Therrien. Hank jockeyed into position and from dead in front, snapped a high sizzler into the twine that Truax hasn't seen yet. That was it.

The two teams meet in Lindsay Saturday night and again here Monday.

The teams:

Lindsay: Goal, R. Truax; defence, W. Williams and O'Neill; centre, Hutton; wings, A. Truax and Packer. Alternates, Crawford, McGill, Graham, Gibson, Cochrane, Teel, H. Williams and Chidley.

Belleville: Goal, Barclay; defence, Delbosco and Stocco; centre, Jones; wings, Therrien and Gilmour. Alternates, Halstead, Jacklin, Hull, Hermiston, Casey, Bovay, Goyer, P. Green and R. Green.

Referee: Maurice Walsh, Newmarket. Linesman, Tim Williams, Belleville.

Dutchies Whip Stratford Indians 5-2 To Grab Two-Game Margin in Series

KITCHENER (CP) — Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen took a 2-0 lead in their best-of-seven semi-finals in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series by defeating Stratford Indians 5-2 Wednesday night.

The third game will be played in Stratford Friday.

The Dutchmen outplayed Stratford and only a steady game by Bruce Dale in the Stratford nets kept the figures at a respectable level.

Always Ahead

Dutchies were always ahead as Leveque and Jack McKenzie fired first-period goals. Herve Dejordy got the inly Stratford counter.

The Twin City team had an even greater edge in the second period when they again outscored the opposition 2-1. Dinny Flanagan tied it for Stratford before Paul Oliver and Howie Lee counted. Lee went all the way through, splitting the Indian defence wide open to Deke Dale for the nicest goal of the night.

Don Rope finished off the Kitchener scoring in a hard-played finale. There were 17 penalties, nine to the losers. Bruce Burdette drew a first-period misconduct.

Dempsey by Early KO Over Louis; He Should Know, He Fought Both

NEW YORK (AP)—Jack Sharkey mopped his pate as the crowd edged into hearing range.

"I know the question you're going to ask me," he said. "It's the one everybody wants to know: Who was better, Jack Dempsey or Joe Louis?"

The big Lithuanian from Boston, a featured fly-caster this week at the Sportsmen's Show, left no doubt that he felt he was the man most qualified to give the answer.

He is the only man who faced the fists of both those two great heavyweight champions. He lost on a seventh-round knockout to a fading Dempsey July 21, 1927. Louis, in his prime, battered the Bostonian into submission in three rounds Aug. 18, 1936.

"Well, I'll Tell You—"

"The bell rings, see?" Sharkey, a grandpa of 52, continued. "There is a wild flurry of gloves. Nothing but gloves. The killer is moving in on the man who can't fight going backwards.

"Something hits the floor. Who is it? Louis. From my experience, I figure Dempsey would be the winner — maybe a first-round knockout."

Sharkey—christened Joseph Paul Zukauskas—shows none of the marks of a 12-year fighting career that carried him to the world's championship for a brief period. He outpointed Max Schmeling for the title in June 1932, only to be stopped by Primo Carnera a year later.

He has become an adept fisherman and spends three months a year showing others how to wield a rod.

Sharkey was asked who hit him the hardest, Dempsey or Louis?

"What would you rather happen to you?" Sharkey replied. "A ton of concrete fall on you or somebody bop you in the head with a hammer. That was the difference.

"Dempsey was a killer—cruel, vicious, savage. When he hit you it felt like every bone in your body was broke.

"Louis? A great fighter and a great hitter. But he was a methodical, punishing type of boxer who built up to a terrific explosion. Dempsey would have got him, I'm afraid, before the explosion."

Hockey Stick Pierces Thigh

SASKATOON (CP) — Defenceman Stan Long of Victoria Cougars suffered serious injuries during a Western Hockey League game Wednesday night when he was pierced in the thigh by the sharp end of a broken hockey stick.

Long, a 22-year-old native of Owen Sound, fell to the ice bleeding heavily and was taken to hospital. The injury occurred when a Saskatoon player accidentally collided with Long.

Long was a member of the Barrie junior Flyers, who reached the Memorial Cup finals in 1948 and the Eastern Canada junior final in 1949. He turned professional in 1950 with the Montreal Canadien organization, playing for Buffalo Bisons of the American Hockey League last season.

Saskatoon and Victoria tied the game 3-3.

Stamps Sign Former Browns, Rams, Coach

CALGARY (CP)—Bob Snyder, 40-year-old former coach of the professional Cleveland Browns, Los Angeles Rams and Green Bay Packers, has agreed to coach Calgary Stampeders of the Western Conference on a one-year provisional basis.

Announcement was made Wednesday by D. P. (Don) McLaws, club president.

It was Snyder's wish that the contract be of one-year duration.

"I hope to prove myself by then" he said, "and if the club wants me for another year I'll be back."

Although salary terms were not revealed, it was learned that Snyder will receive between $10,000 and $12,000 for his year's work.

Stampeders were considering four other applications but as president McLaws put it:

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

You can always find some bridge hand that may give you trouble. Whether you follow rule or judgment at such a time, you never know in advance if it will turn out to your advantage or disgust.

This is no reflection on any system you may be using. In most cases you get some warning that there is danger of some kind. But not always. Now and then you are caught off stride.

Sent to me was this north hand:

♠ 7 5 3
♥ 9 4 2
♦ Q 10 6 3 2
♣ 8 5

The letter states that south opened with a bid of two clubs and the first response by north was two diamonds. The second bid by south was three hearts and I am asked what north should do next.

An opening of two in a suit is forcing to at least a game. Two no-trump is the first response for denying a sure trick anywhere in the responding hand. This is to discourage any slam ideas.

Thereafter, both partners continue to bid until they reach game. From there on all they do is follow the same policy as usual; using the order of preference in T-A-N; takeout, assist, no-trump.

The south three heart bid is not game. North must bid again. His diamond suit is biddable. Rule says he should takeout to four diamonds. Why consider anything else?

Would judgment tell you to bid three no-trump right there? Or would you prefer to show a heart assist without adequate support? What proof can you offer that either would be better than rule?

South says he can make a game in something if you tell him the truth. Do not master mind him. If he does not assist diamonds, he will make another bid. You can then show him preference for hearts.

Of the 635,013,599,600 different hands in a bridge pack, a rule of one sentence hopes to cover all of them. What if a few million are on the edge of doubt. Think of the billions that work.

AT THE BELLE — Bing Crosby, Bob Hope and Dorothy Lamour in "Road to Bali," their funniest show yet—in color by Technicolor, now in its 6th and final day at the Belle Theatre.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The USS Caine has survived inspection by the United States Navy and is ready to set sail on the Hollywood seas.

That's the report from Stanley Kramer, the producer who owns the film rights to "The Caine Mutiny." The novel, which depicts a mutiny on a U.S. ship during the Second World War, ranks with "Gone With The Wind" and "The Robe" among the best - selling books of modern times.

The film version has been the subject of controversy since Kramer bought the rights. There had been reports that navy brass turned down the picture. The unstable captain of the Caine, Queeg, was depicted as an Annapolis man; it was reported that the navy insisted that he should be shown as a reservist.

"I don't know how some of these reports get started," Kramer commented. "They certainly aren't true. The navy has been very cooperative, and we now have a script which has been approved.

"The character of Queeg remains intact.

"Of course, the navy had certain suggestions to make; some we agreed to, some we argued about. At the outset, they didn't want us to use 'mutiny' in the title, but we talked them out of that.

"For instance, we couldn't use the line: 'The navy is a master plan devised by geniuses and executed by idiots.' But we could afford to sacrifice that for the many other things we were allowed to keep."

The producer added that the only thing holding up the start of the picture was a decision of what dimensions to shoot it in.

"A picture like 'The Caine Mutiny' is a natural for 3-D," he remarked. "But I can't decide which technique to shoot it in until I find out which is going to be generally accepted in the theatres."

AT THE CAPITOL — Tyrone Power and George Sanders cross swords in a thrilling scene from "The Black Swan," a Twentieth Century-Fox encore triumph opening tonight at the Capitol Theatre opening tonight. On the same program oShirley Temple and Lionel Barrymore in their happiest hit, "The Little Colonel."

SEASONAL SLUMP

OSLO (CP) — The Norwegian Parliament voted about $500,000 to finance work projects for unemployed, mainly in north Norway. Seasonal unemployment in February affected some 24,000 workers, or about 1.8 per cent of the total labor force.

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is according to the stars.

FOR FRIDAY FEB. 27, 1953

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—Friendly day generally, but hasty decisions in important matters not advised. Your personal management very pertinent to achievement.

April 21 to May 20 (Aries)—Practical and sound matters freshly favored for miners, carpenters, builders generally. Handling machinery, electronics have fine Saturn rays.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini)—Not wholly favorable but if you show your finer qualifications you can attain by hard work and cheerful attention to duty.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer)—Your Moon in fine aspect encourages you to extend yourself, get as much done as possible. Don't indulge arguments, smile a lot.

July 24 to August 22 (Leo)—Hold strong emotions under control, but meet competitors more than half way and you'll be agreeably surprised. No doubting.

August 23 to September 23 (Virgo)—A better day than appears on surface. A little digging and you can come up with surprising (even to yourself) advantages.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra)—Think quietly, be not too hurried; but also, don't cause delays through over-deliberation. Strike out for that old happy medium.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio)—Outlook has its ups-and-downs. But you who work patiently are going to fare fairly well today. However, don't expect a magic wand to sway things in your favor.

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius)—How you treat the news, and opportunity will be tested sorely. Don't ever give up.

December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn)—Don't try to buck a stone wall; do try hard to figure a way around it. Be on the side-lines today, rather than in the middle of the trouble.

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius) — Look at matters cautiously. Better to be sure than sorry. Be in balance with your surroundings, ready to act promptly.

February 21 to May 20 (Pisces)—Another "off" day in vibrations. Seek to know the real from the artificial. Avoid anything flighty, or insincere. Be realistic!

YOU BORN TODAY: your benefic planet Jupiter is in the bright array in your chart, arguing for better and bountiful good things. You have keen intuition and imagination. Can become clever actor, singer, musician. Pisces also shines in business or a profession. Birthdate of: Henry W. Longfellow, Amer. poet; Gene Sarazen, champion golfer; Eliz. Taylor, actress.

Found Syntona Best To Relieve Stomach Distress

Free of Gas Pains and Sour Acidity; Also Headaches, Backache; Sleeps Better. "Can Highly Recommend It," Says This Man.

"For the past 2½ years I've been troubled with stomach disorders, and a few bottles of Syntona have given me the best relief I've ever had," said Mr. Leo Stremble, 164 Garside Avenue, Hamilton, Ontario, in a recent statement.

"I used to be troubled something awful with gas pains, sour acidity and heartburn. Sour liquids would rise in my throat and there would be a burning in my stomach. I was subject to headaches, backache and pains in my muscles.

"Having tried a lot of things without getting much relief I read about Syntona and decided to get some, and this medicine has certainly been more than satisfactory. My food does not sour as it used to, the gas pains, burning, and other distressed feeling is cleared up and I eat better. I am also free of headaches, backache and the other aches and pains and whereas I formerly didn't rest well at night, I now get more sound sleep. After the way this medicine helped me I can certainly recommend it to others."

MR. LEO STREMBLE

Made from 12 of Nature's Finest Herbs and Roots, Syntona has helped many thousands of men and women suffering this same way. It acts on the stomach, kidneys, liver and bowels, helps to rid the system of excess acids and impurities and promotes better assimilation of food for increased strength and energy.

Syntona is sold and recommended in Belleville by Dolan the Druggist.

Atomic Warfare Taught Allies By U.S. Soldiers

BONN, Germany (AP)—U.S. experts are training the British, Belgian and Dutch Armies in offensive and defensive atomic warfare, Gen. Sir Richard Gale revealed Tuesday night.

Gale, who commands the three-power northern army group under NATO, told a press conference that this was a "new development" thus indicating that the United States is giving more atomic information than before to her Allies.

He said groups of American soldiers, highly trained in atomic warfare, were attached to various levels of his command. "They know exactly how much they can and cannot say with security," he said.

The general said these American groups had two jobs:

1. To advise commanders and their staffs on the effect atomic weapons available to the West would have on an enemy so that they made the right tactical plans.

2. To help train the troops to take defensive measures against enemy atomic weapons.

The northern army group consists of four British and three Belgian divisions in Germany and a Dutch corps in the Netherlands and is run by a combined staff of all three countries under Gale's command.

Gale said that nuclear warfare is taken into account in all training and planning. General training in the subject was being given to all men in the command.

Few in Position To Use Provision Of New Budget

OTTAWA (CP)—Senator R. B. Horner (PC—Saskatchewan) said in the Senate Tuesday that every prominent Liberal in Canada earned the title of Communist by backing the march of the unemployed on Ottawa in the 1930s.

The Blaine Lake, Sask., farmer reluctantly withdrew the remark at the request of the speaker, Senator Elie Beauregard, following a protest from Senator J. C. Davis (L—Manitoba).

Senator Horner was discussing the depression during a Senate trade debate.

He said the march on Ottawa when the Conservatives were in power was in every way a campaign to take over the government along the line of Mussolini's march on Rome.

Cemetery Lots Sold at High Prices Is Claim

TORONTO (CP) — A Toronto member of the Ontario Legislature said Wednesday door-to-door salesmen in Toronto are selling cemetery lots "at fantastic prices."

W. J. Stewart (PC—Parkdale) said cemeteries are being incorporated as business investments, and the returns on sale of lots are many times greater than the purchase price.

He urged government action to supervise cemeteries, and recommended they be removed from the tax-exempt status they now enjoy in most municipalities.

Prize Moneys At Fall Fairs To be Increased

TORONTO (CP)—Prize money at agricultural fairs may be increased by additional grants from the provincial government.

Agriculture Minister Thomas introduced a bill in the legislature Wednesday raising the grants to class "C" fairs operated by agricultural societies from $800 to $1,000.

This would apply to almost every fair in the province except the Canadian National Exhibition, the Ottawa Central, the Western Fair at London, and fairs incorporated as business firms, such as the Canadian Lakehead Exhibition.

Mrs. Fairclough Introduces Bill On Equal Pay

OTTAWA (CP)—A bill to make it compulsory to pay equal wages to women when they do the same work as men was given first reading Wednesday in the Commons.

It was sponsored by Mrs. Ellen Fairclough (PC—Hamilton West), only woman member of the House and her party's labor specialist.

The measure, which could apply only to industries under federal labor jurisdiction such as railways and communications, would make it an "unfair practice" to discriminate against women on pay.

Ontario and Saskatchewan now have similar provincial legislation.

Women's Activities

MELROSE W.M.S.

The Melrose W.M.S. observed the World Day of Prayer on Friday at the home of Miss Beatrice McFarlane with an attendance of 16 ladies and four children.

The president, Mrs. G. Morgan, presided and the meeting opened with Mrs. Sherry Demile reading the drum call which is used throughout Africa to assemble the people for worship.

The World Day of Praper service outlined in the Missionary Monthly was followed and Mrs. Sherry Demile acted as pianist for the hymns. Special prayers were offered by Mrs. Roy Badgley, Miss M. Bailey, Mrs. E. Pascoe, Mrs. S. Demile and Miss B. McFarlane.

Mrs. Eugene Badgley gave an informative and thought provoking paper on "The Church and the World Today."

Collections for the day amounted to $5.70.

The president conducted a short business session in which it was decided to hold a conundrum tea in the hall on April 1.

It was also decided to send plants to members who would be shut-ins for long periods of time.

Mrs. J. Milligan expressed her appreciation for the plant she had received saying that it had 28 blooms on it and that it was a cheerful reminder that her W.M.S. friends were wishing her a complete recovery.

At the close of the meeting, the hostess served refreshments and a social half hour was enjoyed.

Brampton Mother, Four Children Burned To Death

Father Finds Home Blazing, Brave Rescue Effort Fails

BRAMPTON (CP)—The wife and four children of George Hostrawser were burned to death while he attended a hockey game Thursday night.

Fire raced rapidly through their two-storey, brick house after an oil furnace is believed to have exploded.

Mr. Hostrawser, owner of a farm machinery business, came home from the Brampton curling rink where he had gone after the hockey game to find the house in flames. He fought his way to the second floor and brought out the bodies of two of the children.

Firemen under chief Matt Gowland, skip of a curling rink on which Hostrawser plays third, brought out the bodies of Mrs. Hostrawser and the other two children.

Mrs. Hostrawser is about 37. The children are: June 12, George, 7; a 3-year-old boy and six-month-old baby.

Fire Chief Gowland saw Mr. Hostrawser at the curling rink before they learned of the fire. A short time later they were both at the blaze.

Seconds after Mr. Hostrawser opened the door flames gushed up the stairway. He raced up to the second floor and Chief Gowland said the flames were so thick he doesn't know how the father got through them.

Mr. Hostrawser pulled one of the children out a bedroom and placed him on the second floor verandah which leads from it. Mrs. Hostrawser was found alongside a bed with one youngster on top of it and one underneath.

Police chief Frank Keathes said the mother and children were believed to have been asleep when the smoke and fumes spread through the house. He believed they had no chance to escape.

The fire, which broke out about 11:30 p.m., did not do much damage to the exterior of the house, but gutted the interior.

Make Clean Breast Of Bra Thefts

CHICAGO (AP) — Two policemen assigned to investigate a shrinking inventory of brassiers and girdles in a factory did not—stout fellows—shrink from their duty.

Posing as architects, the officers invaded a powder room and found the evidence — a board of ladies' aids stored in a locker shared by two women employees.

The officers reported the women smuggled some $15,000 worth of bras and girdles out of the plant by stuffing them in pockets and coatsleeves. They were resold at cut rates.

The women admitted taking the items and were held without charge.

U.K. to Demand Concessions In Suez Evacuation

LONDON (Reuters)—Britain is prepared to agree to evacuate her troops from the Suez canal zone provided Egypt will give certain concessions, it appeared today.

A representative of Egypt said Thursday night British evacuation of the Suez canal zone must be settled before Egypt will discuss any other Middle East defence problems.

Meanwhile, British sources said Britain probably will back down on her demands that Egypt discuss the proposed Middle East defence command during the forthcoming talks on removal of the 70,000 British troops in the zone.

Abdel Hakki, former under-secretary at the Egyptian foreign ministry, said the canal zone evacuation "must come first in any negotiations of defence." Hakki arrived from Paris to take over as ambassador to Britain.

Informed sources here said Britain will agree to pull out her troops if Egypt gives assurance that the vast installations and airfields will be kept ship-shape in case of an emergency and British troops can return if war comes.

Save Ten From U.S. Patrol Plane Down in Ocean

WASHINGTON (AP)—A crippled United States Navy patrol plane crash-landed in the mid-Atlantic this morning but all 10 men aboard were picked up by the coast guard cutter Coos Bay.

The navy said that four of the men were rescued from the water and six from a raft carried by the plane. The navy reported no injuries among the survivors.

The patrol plane, which was about half way between Bermuda and the Azores Islands, landed in a sea that had been whipped by a 30-mile an hour winds.

The coast guard cutter had been sent to the area after the plane, a P2-B reported it was having engine trouble. A patrol plane also was ordered to stand by over the scene.

During the last hour of the crippled plane's flight, its progress was tracked on the radar of the Coos Bay and by other vessels.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO. — (CP) Synopsis: A mixture of snow and rain fell overnight throughout southwestern Ontario depositing two to three inches of slush on highways and city streets. Northern and central regions experienced a cold air invasion Thursday night bringing an end to the current mild spell. This colder air mass is moving southward today and by Saturday morning noticeable temperature drops will have occurred throughout the lower lakes region.

Not Beaten Party Says Stevenson

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Adlai E. Stevenson admonished some 1,200 Democrats at a $100-a-plate dinner Thursday night: "Let us never sow division when it is so important to harvest unity."

The defeated Democratic presidential candidate said that "while we may be a defeated party, we are not a beaten party."

"I for one hope and pray that we shall be spared the spectacle of Democratic orators taking a leaf from recent history and mouthing nonsense about "Eisenhower's war.' Rather we stay out of office forever than win it back that way."

This was an apparent reference to Republican cries of "Truman war" in the last election campaign.

"Upon the new President have been laid great burdens in a time of peril for us all. As he labors under their crushing weight, he will have our goodwill, our good wishes, and our prayers. . . ." the former governor of Illinois said.

He concluded: "In defeat we can make ourselves servants of the national purposes for peace. There is no greater and no better political destiny."

U.S. NAVY SEEKS SUB REPORTED OFF WEST COAST

Fisherman Says He Saw Submarine on Surface

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—A fisherman's report of seeing an unknown submarine surface off the northern California coast at dusk Tuesday touched off a widespread hunt, the U.S. navy disclosed today.

A navy spokesman said unknown sub contacts have been reported about once a month during the last year and added:

"There is no reason to assume that foreign submarines are not operating off our coasts. If they are beyond the three-mile limit, there is nothing we can do about it, under international law."

The latest contact was reported by Lee Master, a lumberman, who said he saw the submarine surface in the Pacific off Agate Beach, 130 miles northwest of here, while he was fishing.

Master telephoned a friend, who reported it to the Coast Guard light station at Point Arena.

When it was determined there were no U.S. submarines in the vicinity, the Coast Guard cutter Yocana was ordered out of Humboldt Bay and a navy patrol bomber flew to the scene from Alameda. Two air force planes also joined the hunt on a "voluntary basis," the navy said.

The aircraft, unable to find anything, were recalled, but the cutter continued to scour the area by radar through the early hours of Wednesday. At daylight, another navy plane was dispatched, also without results.

Capt. Richard Lane, public information officer, said that suspected submarine contacts off the Pacific coast—some visually from the shore or merchant ships and others by sound gear aboard naval vessels—have been reported here at least once a month for a year.

Police Tipped Off Massey Hall Might be Bombed

TORONTO (CP)—Police were tipped off that downtown Massey Hall might be bombed during Tuesday night's speech by Very Rev. Hewlet Johnson, the "Red" dean of Canterbury, police chief John Chisholm said Thursday.

The chief said the threats might have been why some police officers were overzealous in their handling of newspaper men and the public.

Chief Chisholm disclosed at a police commission hearing that direct threats to bomb the Soviet-Canadian Friendship, society meeting were received by police.

One phone call to police headquarters said the hall would be bombed at 9.30 p. m. Another said two suitcases of bombs, set to explode at 11 p. m., had been smuggled into the building.

A false fire alarm which sent reels screaming to the aMssey Hall area also was received.

Defending police action, Chief Chisholm said:

"We had information that 'goon squads'—these are strong-arm men —of the Communist party were to be present, both in the hall and in the vicinity, and that other groups of young men had banded themselves together and were out in full force to create whatever trouble they could start."

Canada Developing Novel Electronic Devices to Aid Sea, Air Warfare

MONTREAL (CP) — Canada's top naval scientist indicated Thursday night that Canada is working on electronic "brains" for sea warfare.

Dr. G. S. Field, chief of the defence research board's naval research division, said such aids have become "absolutely vital" to both air and sea warfare and that Canada is developing "novel electronic devices" to keep pace.

In a speech prepared for the Canadian Shipbuilding and ship Repairing Association, Dr. Field said:

"In addition to research and development carried out in naval establishments, it has been found necessary to put certain developments out to industry. Thus novel electronic devices which were conceived in the minds of certain naval officers are being developed in this way.

"With the increased speed of which submarines are now capable, the time available to the ship's tactical position and for taking action is seriously reduced.

"The situation is similar to that which faces an air defence commander who must have completely up-to-date information on the disposition of enemy bombers and his own fighters if he is to cope successfully with the invading forces. With information pouring in, the ability of the human brain to assimilate such information and to act on it sufficiently quickly has been found to be inadequate.

"Thus, in the very high-speed air battle, electronic 'brains' to lighten man's load are beginning to appear."

Said Sold for $250

This chubby five-day-old baby boy was taken by police in Toronto from Mr. and Mrs. Jack Shinder, both 29, of Brooklyn, N.Y., after they had been stopped by U.S. immigration men at Malton airport Wednesday night when about to board a plane for New York. Police say that at least twenty babies have been smuggled out of Toronto in the last three months by an international baby-selling ring and are being sold for $250 each. Police suspect that possibly 100 Toronto babies have been sold across the border in the last year. Thursday police investigation indicated that a prominent doctor and a lawyer might be implicated in the baby ring. —(CP Photo.)

Many Questions Unanswered As Baby-Selling Case Probed

TORONTO (CP) — An unwed, youthful mother hiding from searching police officers. . .A childless Brooklyn couple charged with obtaining a birth certificate by fraud. . .A week-old boy in a hospital crib.

Were they four individuals linked by chance in a personal tragedy? Or were they part of an international black market in babies with all the far-reaching ramifications of organized crime?

These questions were asked today as Toronto police sought to uncover what lay behind an attempt by Mr. and Mrs. Jack Shinder of Brooklyn, N. Y., illegally to take a baby from Canada to the United States.

Published reports of the case depicted the existence of a baby-export ring that sold children of unmarried mothers for as much as $2,000 each once they reached the United States.

But only one leading official lent his name to such reports. Jacob Kershner of the United States immigration service said: "There is definitely a ring operating for the purpose of buying and selling babies."

Other authorities, civil and police, said so, too, but did not permit use of their names.

Fires on Coasts Take Six Lives

SALMON ARM, B.C. (CP) — Four boys died in a fire Thursday night at Carlin, 15 miles northwest of here. They were trapped in a 50-year-old log house, the home of Richard Howard.

Three were the children of Mrs. Howard by a previous marriage.

The dead: William Dalman, 15; George Dalman, 14; Lorne Dalman, 11, and Douglas Howard, 6.

SYDNEY, N. S. (CP) — Two children were burned to death today when fire raced through a three-storey house in Sydney's pier district.

Dead are Wayne MacDonald, 2, and his one-year-old sister Pauline. They were the children of Mr. and Mrs. Bernie MacDonald.

Mrs. MacDonald and the families of MacDonalds two' brothers in the upstairs of the house escaped uninjured. Efforts to reach the children in the bedroom of their ground-floor apartment were unsuccessful.

Expect Dramatic Russian Counter-Moves in Germany

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. officials consider it entirely probable Russia will undertake one or more dramatic counter-moves in Germany as Western plans for bringing West Germany into the anti-communist defence system reach the decisive stage.

The Russians' stake in trying to block a European Defence Community including West Germany is so great as to make it almost certain they will do something.

Authorities here have been aware for some days that the former chief of the Soviet general staff, Gen. Sergei M. Shtemenko, has been in Russian-occupied East Germany.

Rumors circulated in Berlin Thursday that the Communists, in an effort to regain the political initiative in Germany, might try one or both of two possibilities.

The Russians might announce in May that as of June 1 they would withdraw their troops from Germany; Moscow might come up with a new set of demands for unification of East and West Germany.

Unification is a political issue on which most Germans unite and which Russia and the Western powers all say they favor but under different conditions — the West would like a unified non-Communist Germany while Moscow is assumed to want opportunities for Communist control.

Experts here said there were other alternatives open to the Russians. For instance, they could make threatening new trouble over the western zone of Berlin, which they have been progressively isolating from surrounding Communist territory. Or they could threaten West Germany and the Western powers with all sorts of dire consequences if the European Defence Community treaty and related pacts are finally ratified.

PROPOSALS FOR GREATER TRADE BEFORE HOUSES

Howe Urges New Markets be Developed

OTTAWA (CP) — Proposals for stepping up Canadian trade abroad —across the Atlantic and down south—are before both Houses of Parliament.

As a breather in the budget debate, the Commons got some pointers Thursday from Trade Minister Howe, and at the same time the Senate moved to help trade relations.

Recently back from a long tour of Latin-American countries, Mr. Howe urged that Canadian business men develop new markets in that area.

Ending a two-weeks trade debate, the Senate authorized its trade relations committee to study ways of increasing economic collaboration among North Atlantic Treaty countries.

Can Be Expanded

Mr. Howe's trade speech emphasized the idea that Canada's trade with Latin America can be greatly expanded if Canadians work at it.

"The opportunities are there, and it is up to us to make sure they are grasped and developed," he said.

The trade minister emphasized that Canadian business men themselves must do the selling job.

"There is no substiture for personal, direct, on-the-spot contacts and relations," he told the House in a lengthy review of his nine country tour in Central and South America and the Caribbean.

In other speeches in the budget debate — during which Commons members have almost unlimited leeway on subjects — Finance Minister Abbott's fiscal proposals of last Thursday were criticized by opposition members and defended by Liberals.

Ten Leaders Of All-Moslem Parties Arrested

WASHINGTON (AP)—The U. S. government's new yardstick for measuring the cost of living makes its first appearance today and indications are it will reflect a slight price decline.

A one-per-cent decline in food prices is believed sufficient to bring the living-cost level for mid-January down a bit, although keeping it still close to the all-time high.

The new index, several years in preparation, is designed to provide a more delicate and accurate measurement of monthly cost changes for goods and services purchased by U. S. city families.

Such indices put out by the bureau of labor statistics, an agency of the labor department, have been accepted for several years as a living-cost barometer.

The new index is patterned after the bureau's old one, but includes prices on more items and covers samplings in more cities. It includes pricings for the first time of such things as television sets, restaurant meals, leval services and banking fees.

The former index, using the five-year period 1935-39 as a base, reached 191.1 last August, declined slightly in September and October, and crept back to the 191.1 peak in November. In December it edged down to 190.7, a fraction off the record.

Today's index reflects the mid-January living cost situation. The index is always a month late, and is a little later than usual this month because of the changeover to the new index.

Prince Charles Posing Latest Problem for Coronation Planners

LONDON (Reuters)—Four-year-old Prince Charles is posing the latest problem for planners of the June 2 Coronation.

Unofficial sources said today the Queen herself has not made up her mind on what part her son, the Duke of Cornwall, will play in it.

As next in line to the throne he should lead the other nobles in the rites of "paying homage."

But the solemn ceremony, one of the most moving parts of the three-hour crowning service in Westminster Abbey, will be too much for the youngster.

At the coronation of King George VI in 1937, Princess Margaret, then 6½, sat through the entire ceremony. Her legs dangled off the floor as she sat on her chair and sister Elizabeth was seen to give her an occasional nudge.

Present tentative plans are for Prince Charles to arrive at the abbey by car with his nurse half-way through the ceremony.

If the Queen changes her mind, he will sit with other peers in front of the throne, ready to pay homage immediately after the actual crowning.

Quebec Organizer Quits Communists Over Rosenbergs

Says Moscow Gave Orders 'Blunderers' Must be Saved

QUEBEC (CP)—L'Action Catholique today quoted Pat Walsh, Quebec labor organizer, as saying he has quit the Communist party and its "front organizations" in Canada because of orders dealing with the Rosenberg case.

In a published interview with Louis-Philippe Roy, editor of the daily newspaper, Walsh said he has left the party because of orders to save United States atom spies Julius and Ethel Rosenberg "at all costs."

"Neither myself or my friends objected to seeking the clemency of the courts," Walsh said, "but orders were to save them at all costs to protect Communist espionage."

Walsh said party officials in Moscow took the view that if the "blunderers" were executed "it would henceforth be much more difficult to keep and recruit spies."

"That is when I understood something that had often shocked me: That is, the interests of Moscow taking precedence over everything else, and to a point that non-Communists do not suspect."

The newspaper also carried Walsh's 2,500-word letter of resignation from several organizations which he said were Communist-inspired and Communist-run. The letter also dealt with activities within the Canadian Woodworkers Union, of which he was an organizer.

Walsh said he resigned from the Canadian Peace Congress, the League of Democratic Rights, the Canadian Woodworkers Union, the World Labor Federation, the Workers' Peace Committee, the Labor Rights Committee, the Civil Liberties League, the Canadian Seamen's Committee, the Editors' Committee of the Newspapers Combat, Action and Canadian Tribune and the St. Sauveur Electors' Union.

Extend Deadline

TORONTO (CP)—Highways Minister Doucett announced Thursday an extension until midnight, March 18, for car drivers to get new licence plates and permits.

He also said commercial motor vehicles and trailers can use 1952 permits until March 25.

Mr. Doucett indicated there will be no further extension beyond these dates.

Urges Railway To Serve West's Mineral Areas

YORKTON, Sask. (CP) — Agriculture Minister Gardiner has suggested that a new railway, from the Pacific coast through the heart of the new-found mineral wealth of northwestern Canada, might be a good way to increase British interest in the Hudson Bay port of Churchill.

He told a dinner meeting of the Hudson Bay Route Association Thursday night that on such a railway, with the emphasis on export switched from wheat to minerals, Britain could reduce transportation of minerals by as much as 2,500 miles.

Other than wheat, Britain did not want to buy Canadian food, but she did need minerals to build up and maintain her industrial position.

The possibility of the new railway had been advocated 25 years ago and still was the dream of many persons in the north.

Certainly No Way to Run A Railroad

ROCK ISLAND, Ill. (AP)—The Hooppole, Yorktown and Tampico Railroad, which advertises "irregular service", wants to make its last run.

The Hooppole put it up to the interstate commerce commission today. It said it wanted to abandon its main and only line, all 11.9 miles of it.

The H. Y. and T. has one piece of rolling stock, a locomotive valued at $2,875. Freight cars? When the H.Y. and T. needs a freight car, it rents one. That's not often.

Last year the Illinois commerce commission wanted to know why the Hooppole didn't file reports for 1948-51. The railroad's secretary-treasurer had an easy answer! He didn't know such reports were required.

In 1951, the Hooppole went into the red. It lost $524.

Lebanon Deputy Waves Weapons In Parliament

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP)—Lebanese deputies brandished a dagger and a pistol Thursday night, breaking up a tumultuous parliamentary session. The near-violence came from a recent bloody political fight in a south Lebanon town.

Later, the cabinet asked President Camille Chamoun to suspend Parliament as a result of the disturbances or to cancel the present meeting.

Speaker Ahmed Asaad adjourned Thursday night's session after one deputy drew a knife and attempted to rush his opponents. He was held back by fellow deputies. Previously, another deputy had pulled a gun. No injuries were reported.

The fracas followed another stormy debate Tuesday over skirmishes at the town of Taybeh. Three persons were killed and 15 were wounded in a fight there earlier this week between supporters of a "feudalist" group headed by Speaker Asaad and partisans of the Socialist-Nationalist front.

Bail of $5,000 Set After Charge Of Breaking, Theft

Bail of $5,000 was set by Magistrate R. C. Jackson here today for William Mason, 42, of Toronto, who appeared in magistrate's court on a charge of shopbreaking. He was charged with breaking and entering the Elite Credit Jewellers here in May, 1952, when a quantity of jewellery and bonds was stolen.

Mason was arrested in Toronto and was brought back to Belleville by Inspector Claire Hayes for court appearance. After court appearance today Mason was remanded in custody until March 6 with bail set for the above sum.

Police said that cashing of a bond stolen from the Elite Credit Jewellers led to the arrest of Mason. Cashing of the bond was reported to local police by bank officials.

Watches and other articles of jewellery were stolen from cases at the local store, while the bonds were taken from an unlocked safe.

Fish, Game Club Hears Talk By Major Ketcheson

April 28, is the date set for the annual ladies' night to be held in the L.O.L. hall under the sponsorship of the Belleville and District Fish and Game Protective Association. The suggestion was placed at the directors' meeting held on Wednesday evening and broached to the members at the monthly meeting in the hall last night.

At the meeting Thursday evening Major Percy "Ketch" Ketcheson of the Carling Conservation Club, reported to members on the annual meeting of the Federation of Anglers and Hunters held recently. Mr. Ketcherson listed two items of importance which evolved out of the annual affair. He stated: "More concrete opportunities to advance were presented at the annual meeting than at any of the other 24 meetings of this nature. The two items most valuable an addition to wild life management will in themselves advance the Federation." The first point of interest was the fact the director of the Royal Ontario Museum has volunteered the services of the entire zoological staff at the Museum to serve as an advisory board to the Federation.

The magazine, Forest and Outdoors, was made the official organ of the Federation at the meeting, according to Mr. Ketcheson. The speaker commented on the proposal that the lakes in Hastings County be opened for ice fishing. Mr. Ketcheson said: "These lakes were closed to that type of sport for a very good reason and I would urge you not to support their being re-opened. Nature's laws are the laws behind the closing," he said, "let's not violate them."

The speaker talked at some length on the subject of the sea-lamprey, the eel-like fish that has killed off much of the Great Lakes trout. He noted that the lamprey may yet turn out to be a fish beneficial to mankind. A fluid has been found to be secreted at the base of the lamprey's brain, which prevents coagulation of blood in its prey, is under study by science to determine its qualities in treating coronary thrombosis in humans. Mr. Ketcheson said that so far experiments with this fluid have been successful and doctors are now working on the negative characteristics of the secretion, that is, to determine if any harmful effects are realized through use of the fluid.

Two films were shown the gathering last night. One of these was the complete history of the ring-necked pheasant, tracing its development from egg-stage to adult, its breeding grounds and habits. The other film, Jackpine Holiday, extolled the virtues of a Northern Ontario canoe trip through the lakes and rivers of Northern Ontario. Both films were supplied by the Carling Conservation Club.

At the conclusion of the meeting Joe Shortt offered the thanks of the asosciation to the speaker and it was voted unanimously to elect Major Ketcheson to a life membership. The next meeting will be held on March 26.

A Direct Winters transport, driven by Norman F. Beaton, Toronto, rolled on its side in the ditch near Milltown early today when the heavy semi-trailer skidded on the slippery pavement and sideswiped another transport proceeding in the opposite direction. Damage from the sideswipe was only minor, but the underside of the trailer was buckled when it rolled in the ditch.

The accident occurred during a blinding snowstorm. The driver was uninjured. Provincial Police Constable Howard Tasker investigated.

Rondeaunettes To Produce Musical For Hospital

TRENTON—If you want to help the Trenton Memorial Hospital and enjoy two hours of talented entertainment at the same time, don't miss "Can't Help Singing," a musical directed and produced by a brilliant young Glen Miller musician, Bill Long, who leads the Rondeaunettes Glee Club Charity entertainers, staging their second production at St. Peter's school auditorium Mar. 3-5 inclusive. The effort slated to be bigger and better than number one show, which was considered "quite a success" by local critics last year, features first and second soprano singers combined with alto voices. The production has advanced bookings at Norwood March 11 and Kingston Sanatorium March 18. The club is strictly on its own. The members have no financial backers. They built and designed stage settings used throughout the production and feminine members designed and fashioned the variety of colorful costumes.

The club was organized in 1950 with 12 enthusiastic members. Interest waned the first year however, but improved noticeably in the fall of 1951 after club leader and instigator Bill Long of Glen Miller wrote the entire musical score for Part I of "Can't Help Singing" which drew favorable comment after a two-night presentation here last year.

Last summer the indefatigable 22-year-old director wrote the score for Part II of the musical. He devoted his spare time to the big job because in the daytime he labors as Assistant Postmaster at R.C.A.F. Station Trenton. And in the time that was left over he continued his piano and organ studies. Incidentally, Bill's main ambition to become a musical supervisor in local schools.

This year's show has an added attraction, the nimble toes of ballet dancer Marilyn Woodcock from Middleton Park.

The 18 members the club taking part in the production include. Mary Teressa Long, Bruce Ferguson, Bill Allore, Audrey Armstrong, Helen Hayes, Ray Dube, Barbara Burley, Donna Lee Patrick, Barbara Steenburg, Emmet McPartlan, Jeanine Martin, Shirley Fox, Reg Frauts, Shirley LaMorre, Shirley Cleary, Iris Baker, Betty Kinney and Cecille Remma.

Accompanists are Colletta O'Keefe of Campbellford on the piano and Lenna Baker of Trenton on the organ.

Grant Provides Mobile Unit For Belleville

OTTAWA (CP)—A federal grant of more than $56,000 has been approved for the Ontario division of the Ontario Arthritis and Rheumatism Society to extend service to parts of the province not previously served by clinics, the health department announced today.

A new mobile clinic is to be stationed in the Toronto district, and equipment will be obtained for six mobile physiotherapy units to be used to demonstrate treatment techniques in Brockville, Peterborough, Belleville, Huntsville, Orillia, North Bay, Owen Sound and their surrounding districts.

The grant also provides salaries for six physiotherapists to staff the demonstration units. It is hoped that these units will have proved their value within a year and that local branches of the society will be developed to carry on the work.

The mobile clinics enable many arthritics to obtain treatment at home, thus reducing the pressure on hospitals and cutting the cost to the individual who might otherwise face long hospitalization.

Harry Sager Addresses Local Lions Club On 'A Package'

The Lions Club of Belleville recently held its second meeting since organization in the Town Room of Lattimer's Drug Store, with 21 Lions present including guests from the Trenton Club who are sponsoring the club here. Steady advance was reported by all members in the organization of the club.

The guest speaker was Lion Harry Sagar, a past president of the Trenton Club and also a past district deputy governor. His subject was entitled, "A Package"—a package new Lions will receive of which the contents are unknown. It was well received by all present.

The president, Allan LaBarre, also mentioned two of the Lions Clubs objects. To take an active interest in the civic, commercial, social and moral welfare of the community; To unite the members in the bonds of friendship, good fellowship and mutual understanding.

Plans were formulated for "Charter Night" to be held towards the end of April when about 200 persons are expected to be present representing clubs from points as far east as Cornwall and west to Oshawa — about 14 clubs in all.

The next regular meeting will be held in the Town Room in March.

Toronto Arcade Partly Gutted By $100,000 Fire

TORONTO (CP) — Fire raged out of control for about two hours in the Toronto arcade in downtown Toronto today. Fire Chief Joseph Waterman said damage may reach $100,000.

The four-storey arcade provides quarters for about 130 small businesses and extends from Yonge street to Victoria street.

Firemen said the fourth floor on the Yonge street side was gutted and water and smoke damage to premises on lower floors was extensive. The roof collapsed in three places during the blaze.

Platoon chief Norman Ashley said the cause of the blaze has not been found and the arson squad of the department has been ordered to investigate.

The fire broke out about 4 a.m., in the fourth-floor quarters on the south side of the building at Yonge street. The premises of five businesses were gutted and about 14 were damaged by smoke and water he said.

Sidney Twp. Allowed to Spread Payment of Educational Costs To Quinte High School Area

Sidney township will be permitted to spread payments to the Bay of Quinte High School Area for 1953 educational costs over two years instead of being called upon to pay on a current basis.

This was decided by members of the area high school board this week following representation from Reeve Harry Morrow of Sidney and Councillor H. Hamilton, who attended a meeting of board members to explain the township's position.

Prior to formation of the high school area the township paid its high school educational costs a year late. However, when the area was formed, board members decided Sidney should pay its educational costs on a current basis. Had this been carried out the township would have had to pay in one year the costs for 1952 and for 1953.

The board agreed to the township request asking it be permitted to pay this year's costs in two famous, one to be made December of this year, and the second in December of 1954. Last year's costs will be paid in full this year.

To Pay Transportation

The board will pay transportation costs for three student members of the United Nations group at the collegiate, and for one teacher to attend a model United Nations assembly to be held in Montreal. About 35 high schools in Ontario and Quebec will send representatives to the assembly, which is to be held at a Montreal high school. Billets will be provided for the delegates in Montreal.

The local board will pursue the idea of high school boards having representation on library boards. Under present statutes only public school boards have representation on library boards.

A special committee was formed to investigate the salaries of secretaries and janitors at the high school. The committee will report its findings to the board.

No action was taken on a recommendation from the local police department that a night watchman be on duty all night at the collegiate. The recommendation was made with the view of guarding against possible break-ins at the school.

Authority was given for rural high school students with satisfactory academic standing to be released from classes to work on home farms. This authority is given each year to the school principal.

Meeker Given 10 Days to Make Up His Mind

GALT (CP)—Gordon Chaplin, president of the Progressive Conservative Association for South Waterloo, said today Howie Meeker member of Parliament for the constituency, will decide within the next 10 days whether he will seek re-election.

Mr. Chaplin said Meeker is faced with several important personal problems which he must decide himself but that he hoped the National Hockey League player could see his way clear to continue his political life.

The Conservative nomination meeting will be held within 30 days, Mr. Chaplin said.

HISTORIC VOLUMES

HALIFAX (CP)—Dalhousie law school has received a seven-volume set of Campbell's "Lives of the Lord Chancellors," once the property of Hon. S. L. Shannon, who was a member of the original faculty when the school opened in 1883. The books were donated by Justice M. B. Archibald of the Exchequer Court of Canada.

50 Carloads Of Holsteins Ready to Ship

BRANTFORD (CP)—At least 50 carloads of Holstein pure bred cattle from Ontario are awaiting shipment to the United States as soon as the livestock embargo is lifted March 1, officials of the Holstein-Friesian Association of Canada said here today.

Many United States buyers of dairy cattle have been purchasing stock in this area during the last few weeks.

A brisk export trade is expected to develop this spring, following the 12-month lull brought about by the embargo resulting from the foot-and-mouth disease breakout in Western Canada.

At St. Thomas, N. R. Martin, vice-president of the Holstein-Friesian Association, said Wednesday prices paid by U.S. buyers have ranged from $300 to $325 for two and three-year-heifers.

Nine Persons Killed

LUCCA, Italy (AP)—At least 9 persons were killed today when a gunpowder mill blew up near Gallicano, about 15 miles outside of this north-central Italian city.

Nine workmen were missing after the terrific blast and police said they undoubtedly were all killed. Another three were injured.

Rescue workers found broken legs and arms and other bits of broken bodies scattered around the scene of the explosion.

INDIAN RELICS

EDMONTON (CP)—J. D. McGregor, president of the Alberta Historical Society, says ancient Indian arrowheads are still abundant in the Edmonton district. They are found near streams or lakes, and often picked up in sand quarries.

STITCH IN TIME

VANCOUVER (CP)—In a drive to increase efficiency in fighting shipboard fires, city firemen have visited several vessels berthed in harbor here. They made a special familiarization tour of the ships in off-duty hours.

MANY QUESTIONS

Opposed to them was John Nimmo, assistant inspector of detectives of the Toronto police who said: "No baby ring is operating in this city."

Recognized as Toronto's top investigator, Nimmo said he is working on only one case, that of the Shinders attempt to take with them to New York the baby of a girl who left a Toronto hospital with her child Tuesday, four days after its birth.

The following day the Shinders, bearing a birth certificate alleged to have been obtained by fraud, were stopped at Malton airport as they were about to leave with the baby. A U. S. immigration inspector said he became suspicious of a woman travelling only five days after giving birth.

That started a sweeping investigation. But so far, little concrete evidence has been made public to support published accounts of the existence of an international black market in babies.

The Shinders' story was simple: A haberdashery clerk, he and his wife, who had been told she could not have a child, had tried to adopt a baby in Brooklyn. Their application was rejected because of too low a salary and insufficient space in their three-room apartment.

A friend of his in Toronto knew of a 17-year-old girl who was expecting a child. He met the expectant mother and made arrangements to take the baby after its birth on payment of the hospital bill, $63.25.

The mother's time came and the Shinders, both of whom are 29, came to Toronto, got the baby and prepared to return home.

Some police officers said they believe the couple paid $250 for the baby and that it was one of 20 or more exported to the United States in the last three months. Reports circulated that in the last year, nearly 100 infants were sold to Americans.

Were as many as 1,000 babies exported, as reported in New York?

"Balderdash!" exclaimed Nimmo late Thursday night after he and other officials had questioned the Shinders for more than nine hours.

The Shinders are free on bail for hearing March 5.

The young mother has not been found.

Today, high in Toronto's hospital for Sick Children, lies the central figure in the case. The baby, unaware of the furore created by his birth, is reported as progressing normally.

Wheat Exports Above Average

WINNIPEG (CP) — Canadian exports of wheat were well above the 10-year-average throughout the first half of the current crop year, the board of grain commissioners reported today.

Exports for each month were higher than both the corresponding month last year and the 10-year average.

January exports totalled 18,700,000 bushels against 24,700,000 in December 16,000,000 last January and the 10-year average of 15,500,000. Flour exports dropped to 3,700,000 in January from 5,700,000 in December.

The two figures raised Canada's six-month export total to 190,687,000 bushels of wheat and wheat flour compared with 154,859,000 in the same period last year.

Principal buyers were: United Kingdom 39,000,000 bushels, United States 16,500,000 (including 3,200,000 for grinding bin bond), Germany 13,700,000, Belgium 13,300,000 and Yugoslavia 8,700,000.

IT IS NOW EASIER TO SAY "NO"

The recent Queen's Park announcement that the government would not pay grants for school gymnasiums and some other extras brought home to school authorities how drastic a "no frills" policy might become. Some have wondered how far the trend might go. And there have been some mild protests raised.

Now it is explained that this new rule is not actually linked with the trend away from school "frills" at all but has been prompted by the much more serious question of priorities. The Department of Education is confronted with a problem of construction limitations. Only so much building can be done and for the next ten years it will have to be concentrated on essentials in order to meet the growing demands for schoolroom accommodation.

School enrollments have been increasing at the rate of better than 50,000 a year. It has been calculated that this trend will continue until 1960 at least. At the present time there are 750,000 pupils in the elementary schools alone. By 1960 this enrollment will exceed one million.

There is no thought in the department of education of swinging clear back to the era of the little red schoolhouse. Gymnasiums and some other facilities ruled out for grants are not in the "frill" category but under present building conditions it is realized that if these extras are to be provided in some schools, children in other communities are likely to be without even adequate schoolroom space. The government has taken the position that any unessential building must be discouraged and the most effective means of discouragement is found in withholding grants.

Naturally this policy does emphasize the intention of reducing some of the frill features which have become so popular in recent years—and so conspicuous because of increased education costs—but it is due to an accident of circumstances. It is entirely natural, too, that it will not be a popular policy with some school boards.

There is a fairly well-founded suspicion that this is a matter of personal pride as much as anything else. Members of school boards are as inclined to "keep-up-with-the-Joneses" as anyone else. The new school must be as up-to-date as those being built elsewhere. Now it is being made a whole lot easier for boards to say "no" to proposed extras.

EVIDENCE OF IMPRESSIVE GAINS

Even among the recognized experts on foreign affairs there is a good deal of speculation when an attempt is made to assess the relative gains of the Western democracies against Communism in the cold war. The phase of "hot" war in Korea is a recognized stalemate. In the East, as a whole, the agents of Stalin have made and consolidated great gains since the end of the war.

The prophets of doom, however, are directed to a closer look at the situation in Europe. Only those who have been personally on hand to contrast conditions at the end of hostilities with the recovery of the Western nations since then, can attest to the tangible evidence. But even from this distance some pertinent signs can be read which emphasize the extent of the setback Communism has been handed in the last few years.

There is no doubt about the popularity the Communists enjoyed in the carefree days of "liberation" as the war ended. The extent to which that friendly measure of esteem and good will for the Reds has diminished is shown in recently published figures of the decline in popular appeal of the Communist press.

In 1946 there were 34 French Communist daily newspapers circulating in Western Europe with a total circulation of 3,200,000. In 1952 the total had dropped to 17 with a circulation just above 1,000,000. The national party organ, L'Humanite, had the lowest circulation in its history at 120,000. Elsewhere in the free democracies the Red press has lost its prestige.

This is impressive information. In the welter of reports which have come across the Atlantic out of Europe in the post-war years it has been almost impossible for the casual observer to recognize tangible evidence of gains which can be chalked up to the credit of the Marshall Plan, the Truman doctrine, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and other means which were taken to offset the early successes which Stalin had gained. That these counter measures have saved Western Europe from falling almost completely into the Communist orbit is beyond any doubt. This we have been able to recognize in spite of the political bickerings and the disputes which overshadow the real picture by the immediate prominence they attain from week to week and month to month.

Meanwhile impressive gains for the democratic cause have been realized. And nothing corroborates them as fully as the decline in Communist prestige represented by the growing unpopularity of its press.

This decline is at once a testimony to the effectiveness with which the Communist challenge has been met in a material way in Western Europe, and an outstanding example of the indispensability of a free press and free speech in combatting Communism. Behind the Iron Curtain where the Reds control all means of information the people remain powerless to fight against the Communist tyranny. Their only hope of freedom is in flight from their native lands at the risk of life. In the West where the propaganda of the Reds is permitted unrestricted dissemination, but subject to criticism and rebuttal at every turn, it has met with complete exposure and defeat.

Here is eloquent proof that the ordinary citizen, fully informed, is quite able to distinguish for himself the merits of the Communist appeal to reasonable minds.

MOST FOOD PROCESSED

Only about fifteen or twenty per cent of the food bought by American consumers is in its natural state, the N.Y. Journal of Commerce says. All the rest is processed in some form or another. In fact, about half the productive effort involved in providing food for the American people now is represented by services performed after the raw material leaves the farm.

Crow Is Prankster

(Windsor Star)

Crows are not the most popular of birds — usually being considered a nuisance. Yet they make quite good pets and some can be taught to talk. But they seem to have a perverted sense of humor.

Down in Baker, Oregon, police are irate. They have been affixing parking tickets on windsheilds of cars, but the pesky crows have been picking them off, and flying away with them.

Which recalls a pet crow possessed by a woman in an Ontario town. It was a smart crow, could talk a few words, and laugh heartily when people in the household laughed. It carried its sense of humor too far, however. On washday, it would fly around pulling off the clothespins, to the consternation and annoyance of housewives. This was bad enough but when it started picking the tops off milk bottles, its number was up.

There is a limit to the practical jokes one will accept from a crow.

EXPECTANT

There's a stack of glad tomorrows round the corner over there
And Miss Spring is getting ready, tying blossoms in her hair.
Though I've had my share of trouble, and full reason to complain,
There's a lot of joy before me when the warm days come again.

Oh, I'll soon be free to wander Wheresoever I may please,
And listen to the singing of the birds in all the trees.
There are days that I'll go fishing with a faithful friend or two,
Or play the idle rover in the way I used to do.

There's a lot of fun before me, and I'm standing at my door
Counting eagerly the pleasures which the Springtime has in store.
Though some days were long and dreamy, I am living now to see
The woods in all their splendor and the blue skies over me.

There were times I've been discouraged, times I've thought life's charm had fled,
There were even times I've whispered that I might as well be dead;
But the sun is getting higher and the buds break on the bough,
And with Springtime getting nearer, there's a lot to live for now.

Some Light On Candles

(Cleveland Plain Dealer)

"To burn the candle at both ends" needs no explanation, nor is it surprising that "the game worth the cost of the light to literally that the sport is not worth the rost of the light to play it by.

"Not fit to hold a candle to," sometimes corrupted to "can't hold a candle to," comes from an old description of an assistant (such as a plumber's helper) as "one who holds a candle to another," in other words, the fellow who held the light while another worked. One "not fit to hold a candle to" another was a fairly inept helper.

The recent successful Broadway play, "Bell, Book and Candle," took its title from an old curse, a "curse by bell, book and candle," which in turn grew out of a form of excommunication which closed with the words, "Doe to the book, quench the candle, ring the bell." Doe is an old form of do, and "doe to the book" meant "close the book."

The candle also played a part in a simpler form of excommunication in which the sinner was allowed the time a candle continued burning to come to penance. If he did not act before the candle went out, he was excommunicated to all intents and purposes. This was often called "excommunication by inch of candle."

When Burke rose in 1797 to protest that "British faith and honor are to be sold by inch of candle," he was not referring to a religious act, but rather to the old custom of sale by inch of candle, which was the form of auction still in use at least as late as 1825. To sell (or let) by inch of candle was to receive bids so long as a small piece of candle burned, the last bid before the candle went out securing the article or property.

Samuel Pepys remarked in his diary entry for Sept. 3, 1662:

"After dinner we met and sold the hulkes, where pleasant to see how backward men are at first to bid; and yet when the candle is going out how they bawl."

In the United States and England, the candle is still the unit for measuring artificial light, a candle power being the luminous intensity of a standard candle or, as established by the London Metropolis Gas Act of 1860, the light given by a sperm candle of which six weighed one pound and each of which burned 120 grains an hour.

Nancy Is Free Again

(Ottawa Journal)

One of the brightest minds in the British Columbia Legislature is Mrs. Nancy Hodges. Mrs. Hodges is a Liberal, and in the old Coalition days (and later when a straight Liberal administration took over) she was Speaker. Now, the Liberals out of office and a Social Credit administration in its place, Mrs. Hodges, still a member of the Legislature, sits in the opposition benches and is free to speak — something which, as Speaker, she must not do.

The Victorian Times welcomes the lady to the combatant forces of the House, says her "return to the bear-garden" gave a decided fillip to its level of oratory. She assailed the Social Credit benches with irony and shrewd wit and her effort was received with a good deal of enthusiasm — even "some gallant desk-thumping" from the Government benches.

The Times offers this comment: "We're glad Nancy is back, in fine fighting fetle. Her closing remark, "You'll be hearing from me again," is one which will be anticipated by her political friends with relish, by her opponents with uneasiness or dismay."

It will be a livelier assembly with Ex-Speaker Hodges in a speaking role, and that is good. Every legislative chamber needs a few members eager to tilt a lance at smugness and stuffiness.

Long And Short of It

(Ottawa Citizen)

Although February is the shortest of the months, it is so tedious as to seem the longest. A winter month, coming at a time when everyone is tired of winter, February sometimes plays at being spring. And because it is temperamentally unsuited to the part, it makes itself the more unpleasant. No one is fooled by February's smile; experience shows that its sunshine is usually followed by sleet. By imitating spring, it succeeds only in making humans more impatient for the real thing.

The arrival of seed catalogues, the sight of spring straws in store windows, increases their dissatisfaction with the old season. Falling snow is a distraction to daydreams of new garden arrangements and renovated wardrobes. It is a reminder that although everyone is ready for spring, wintry February is still here, and that its 28 days make up the longest month in the year.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

"THE WONDERFUL WORLD OF BOOKS"

I took my place at a lunch counter recently, but as I did I noted a rack of paper-bound books behind me. I reached and took one, the title of which intrigued me. It was "The Wonderful World of Books." Cost 35 cents! I paid my luncheon bill of 60 cents and went back to my office with the new book in my pocket. I took it home and learned I had purchased a treasure! At hardly more than a smoker would pay for a pack of cigarettes.

Many readers of this column write and ask me to tell them what to read. This book tells you, and at the same time stimulates you to hunt out and read scores of books that have made the world of books a heaven to many a one — for the reading of good books is an experience nothing else can surpass.

This little book — which easily fits the pocket — is a non-profit publication, sponsored by a dozen organizations, including the United States Department of Agriculture Extension Service. It can be purchased at hundreds of newstands and drug stores, or its price of 35 cents, plus 5 cents for postage, may get the book by addressing: The New American Library of World Literature, 501 Madison Avenue, New York 22, New York.

This wouldn't be much of a world without its books! Books are the essence of human beings, in which all the experiences and thoughts of the ages are expressed in words. Andrew Lang once said: "When others fail him, the wise man looks to the sure companionship of books." There is to be found consolation that nothing else gives.

On the outside of this new little book are these words: "This book can change your life and the lives of those around you. With its help you can win greater success and happiness, benefit from the treasures of the world's wisdom and knowledge." And all "through the magic of reading." A person who has never read a book will be stimulated, by the reading of this small volume, to read many a world classic, and perhaps it may be the means of introducing many a one to a new world, about which he never dreamed! I highly commend it. Millions should buy it.

Strength for the Day

HIDDEN ROOMS

Most of us have had the experience of hearing the doorbell and seeing callers on the front porch, and then discovering that the living room is in a frightful state of confusion because the children have been playing house with the furniture. Our grandparents provided for such emergencies by a separate parlor, distinct from the living room and almost never used except to receive visitors. But in today's smaller houses, it takes a very scrupulous housekeeper indeed not to be caught unprepared occasionally.

Some people, in fact, live in a perpetual state of having part of the household shut off from view. Perhaps the cellar has become so full of old newspapers and trash that they are ashamed to have their neighbors see it. Perhaps they have used the spare room upstairs to put away unwanted odds and ends for a period of years.

There are also people who have such spare rooms and cellars not in their houses, but in their lives. Part of their daily living is taken up in dishonesty, drunkenness, or infidelity which must be hidden from their family and friends. Just as the unsightly accumulation of old rubbish may be a fire hazard or a breeder of disease, so these shut-off areas in men's lives are dangerous to self-respect and happiness.

The well-kept house is always ready for inspection; so too with the well-kept life.

Personal Health Talks

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

CHILLING AND DISEASE

Some years ago I made some lowbrow allusion to the interesting fact that young people in the twentieth century wear less clothing than young people wore in the nineteenth century. Maybe I even specified young women. Anyway I observed that in spite of such carelessness about "exposure" young persons were less frequently victims of pneumonia, tuberculosis and rheumatism in the 20th century than young persons were in the 19th century, according to the statistics.

This brought a rebuke from a top authority on tuberculosis, a physician I held in the highest esteem. In a personal letter he said, in a gentlemanly way that made me feel pretty low, that tuberculosis was twice as frequent in girls from 15 to 30 years of age as in boys of that age and that he felt convinced that insufficient clothing, especially chest covering, makes females more susceptible. And the doctor cited statistics furnished him by Milwaukee, Cleveland, Baltimore and Philadelphia health department representatives, N.Y. State Health Department and the N.Y. Tuberculosis and Health Association.

When the beloved doctor took off years ago he was I think, still convinced the thin, flimsy dress of women, particularly the young and flighty ones, makes the poor things more subject to infection by the tubercle bacillus.

When and if I make it eventually I intend to go to the mat with the good doctor about this, no holds barred. But here on earth I do solemnly aver that the clothing worn or not worn has nothing to do with one's susceptibility to tuberculosis, pneumonia or other resipratory infection. This is merely my opinion, of course.

The chilling obsession which needlessly worries millions, especially the mothers of growing children, probably grew from the observation that a chill or chilliness occurs at the onset of such serious illnesses as malaria, septicemia (acute blood poisoning), pneumonia and the flu. In the middle of the nineteenth century even the doctors imagined the early chill and chilliness caused the illness. Not until the dawn of the present century did the doctors recognize that the chill or chilliness in such illnesses was an early symptom and not the cause of the illness.

But they recognized or acknowledged this fact with a good deal of reluctance for it meant that they could no longer pretend that a serious illness was "just a bad cold," that obstacle didn't cramp their style. Some genius presently came up with a solution which now only saved face for the profession but kept the customers childishly unconcerned about what really ailed them. This was the notion that even if the chill or chilling didn't cause the disease it probably "lowered resistance" and thus enabled the germs to invade. Presumably the germs always "lurked" in waiting for the opportunity.

Neither general experience nor clinical observation nor experimental investigation educed any evidence to support the notion, but a smooth practitioner stuck for a diagnosis doesn't mind a little thing like that.

Mind, now, I do not mean to imply that chilling or too rapid cooling after violent or unaccustomed physical exertion is harmless. I merely contend that chilling does not predispose to pneumonia or influenza or the grip or bronchitis or sore throat or sinusitis or rheumatism or tuberculosis or "the common cold," whatever that may be.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

The motel or motor court is a new factor in the art of travel and the science of human accommodation. I am told there are over 35,000 of them on the continent now, and more are being built every season. They must be a sore distress to the hotel business.

They afford nothing but shelter, usually of the most deluxe description. A motel will have anywhere from 10 to 50 or even 75 units in it. You drive your car right to the door of your most attractive little room and carry your bags no farther than across the doorstep. There, for half the price of a hotel room, you bunk in for the night.

Where hotels have to employ scores and probably hundreds of maids, elevator staff, bell hops, porters, waiters, and all manner of help up to the costly level of room clerks, assistant managers and managers, a motel employs usually one man and his wife as managers, and they simply employ a couple of local women as maids to clean, tidy and change the linen.

Usually, a block away but occasionally built right into the motor court establishment, is a restaurant where meals may be had at all hours.

Having lately sampled the tourist court business from the Canadian border down to the Gulf of Mexico, I have these remarks to make about them. They are heaven's gift to stingy husbands. oYu arrive, as a rule, at your chosen motel around five or six p.m., by which time the stores are all closed in the big cities near which the motels nestle. Tired of driving, you have no desire to go into town and visit the big city. I imagine confirmed motel travellers across America have covered more territory and seen less than could be expected of any other class of traveller. The motels are always on the highways and by-passes near cities. After a couple of evening's experience of these delightful and cheap little caravanserai, it becomes the habit to hustle on to the next one, at tomorrow's end.

In my case, I went the full thousand and a half miles from the Great Lakes to the Gulf without setting a tire inside the limits of a single one of the great cities I by-passed. And my wife never spent a nickel in any of the famous stores for which these many cities are noted.

What a handy way to travel!

'Pin-Up' Figures

(Detroit Free Press)

American women wore 10,000 tons of steel wire in their hair last year in the form of hair pins and bobby pins, the American Iron and Steel Institute reports.

When you consider that the average hair pin weighs less than 1-100thth of an ounce and bobby pins slightly more, 10,000 tons of them amounts to a lot of hair pins.

So far, no brash male has come forth to challenge the use to which these 10,000 tons of essential steel have been put. And if he values his own hirsute adornment, he'd better not, either.

Dangerous Test

Member Claims Civil Servants Run Government

TORONTO (CP)—The Ontario government is being run by "high bracket" civil servants, an opposition member charged in the Legislature Thursday.

Albert Wren (Lib-Lab—Kenora) said civil servants were able to run the provincial government because ministers are ignorant of the affairs of their departments.

The Northern Ontario member's 90-minute address several times drew ire from Premier Frost who asked Mr. Wren to refrain from "innuendo and insinuation" and give specific examples of alleged government maladministration.

Mr. Wren said during the throne speech debate that "control of legislation" by the cabinet becomes more and more feeble every year" and "armies of statisticians" are called in by ministers to outline legislation because of their lack of knowledge of the business of their department.

He also charged government laxity in the hydro-electric power commission, the lands and forests department, the liquor control board and the government purchasing department.

Turning to a subject close to his constituents, Mr. Wren said the government failed to carry out its promise to ban the export of raw pulpwood from the province. Export of wood last year was greater than in 1948, the year restrictive legislation was passed.

"The timber pirates still roam the northern regions of the province, flying their skull and crossbones. Operators should not just be within the limits of the law. We should show the world we run our forests in the best interest of all," he said.

A Toronto member, Elmer Brandon (PC—York West) said a central automobile registry to protect the public from being "flim-flammed" should be established. Unscrupulous car dealers sold autos which had been stolen or had substantial liens against them. Buyers should be able to insist on certificates from a central registry proving the car was acquired legally, he said.

The tabled report of the board of governors of the University of Toronto showed the university, with an enrolment of about 15,000 students, had a deficit of $103,000 last year. Grants totalling $4,670,072 were not enough to offset increased costs, the report said.

Expenditures rose from $8,788,701 the previous year to $10,098,128. Income rose from $4,326,983 to $5,187,241.

Magistrate Orders Constable to Pay Witness Fees

OTTAWA (CP)—Police and civic circles are in a dither over a ruling by Magistrate Austin O'Connor, who dismissed a careless driving charge Wednesday and ordered a constable to pay $3 in fees to each of four crown witnesses.

The charge was against Francis L. Wagstaffe of nearby City View. The magistrate ruled that Constable Lionel Lefebvre, who laid the charge, be responsible for payment of the $12 witness fees.

Court officials said Ontario law provides that witness fees must be paid on court order to prosecution witnesses when a summary charge is dismissed. The city, which collects most of the court fines, has refused to pay witnesses when a conviction is not obtained.

Magistrate O'Connor said he has issued orders before for payment of witness fees and such orders have been "flouted."

"I have received directions from the deputy attorney-general," he added. "It appears that the city refuses to pay witness fees when charges are dismissed."

The deputy attorney-general, he said, had informed him that Ottawa is the only place in Ontario where this is done.

At Toronto, Attorney-General Porter declined to comment on the magistrate's ruling.

Charged in Baby Ring

Toronto police and United States immigration officials say they have uncovered what they allege is a baby-selling ring operated on a large scale between Toronto and United States cities. Evidence so far uncovered in the investigation is "fantastic", U.S. immigration officials said. Investment Program Likely To Reach $5,421,000,000

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada's investment program for 1953, aided by an anticipated increase in house building and other construction, likely will reach a record of $5,421,000,000, Trade Minister Howe estimated Thursday. This compares with $5,122,000,000 in 1952, an increase of nearly $300,000,000.

He predicted that more money will be employed for expansion in trade, finance and commercial enterprises, as well as mining and oil drilling. Housing, hospital, university, church and other institutional construction would be greater.

Investment declines were estimated for agriculture, fishing and other primary industries as well as manufacturing. However, investment by various governments would be higher.

Mr. Howe made the prediction in a 22-page booklet, tabled in the Commons, on the outlook of private and public investment. The forecast, if fulfilled, would raise total investment in Canada since the Second World War to $30,000,000,000. It was based on questionnaires sent to industry asking for investment intentions during the year.

The survey showed that a peak $3,432,000,000 is being planned for new construction, against $3,157,000,000 in 1952. Investment in new machinery and equipment is expected to reach $1,989,000,000, up from $1,965,000,000 last year.

"A capital expenditure program of this magnitude would absorb about 23 per cent of the gross national production expected in the current year," Mr. Howe said.

Government brakes on non-essential building have been removed, and for the first time since the Second World War, said Mr. Howe, "the capital expenditure intentions will not be subject to any serious limitations from material shortages."

Out of My Mind Accused Told Mother of Girl

KITCHENER (CP)—A mother told a Supreme Court jury Thursday of her visit to Kenneth Wiles while he was in prison awaiting trial for the murder of her 17-year-old daughter Marie Huras.

Wiles, 21, is charged with fatally shooting the girl Jan. 27, with a sawed-off .22-calibre rifle. He told police another .22 rifle accidentally discharged when his car hit a bump while he was driving her to work that day.

The girl's mother, Mrs. Catherine Dentinger of Oshawa, said that when she saw Wiles three days after his arrest he said to her: 'Oh, Kay, I was out of my mind,' when she asked him why he had not come to see her.

On the evening of the day of the shooting, he had telephoned her in Oshawa, she said. When she asked what had happened, he replied: "It was just one of those things, they should keep guns away from me."

Referring to Wiles as "Kenny" throughout, Mrs. Dentinger said he started seeing her daughter at Christmas time two years ago. By the summer of 1951 he was seeing her steadily.

When Wiles began writing to her, Mrs. Dentinger intercepted and burned the letters because she said she thought the girl too young to be tied down.

U.S. Cattle Raiser Hit Hard By Price Drop on Feed Stock

KANSAS CITY (CP) — United States cattlemen are taking a price beating and some speculators who jumped into the market have been hurt by the squeeze in recent months.

With prices more than 25 per cent off their 1951 peaks the high-profit period for cattlemen has been wiped out. Although some of the losses were paper losses, in many cases there has been a real financial squeeze on those who lacked the cash or credit to tide them over a rough spot.

Heavy cattle production, coupled with drought and high feed costs started the slide. Two years ago cattle were selling for $36 a hundredweight—even more for top-grade steers. Now the price is off around $10.

There are more cattle today on the ranges and in feed lots than ever before in U.S. history—93,696,000 head as of Jan. 1. And some cattlemen think the situation may get worse before it gets better.

Record Highs

Don Whitehead of The Associated Press made a swing around the West and Mid-West to survey the situation. He reports that most prominent cattlemen view the price shake-down as probably a good thing for themselves and the whole country.

Whitehead reports that cattlemen want no part of government price supports, subsidies or controls, and are confident they can work out their own salvation. One cattleman thought freedom from competition of foreign beef was preferable to government handouts.

In the summer of 1951, the high price of beef was causing cries of anguish from consumers having a hard time finding a good steak in the butcher shop. The supply just couldn't meet the demand.

The U.S. government slapped on price ceilings and even ordered prices of beef cattle set back to former levels. Some cattlemen said then it would take three to five years for production to catch up with the demand.

But production outstripped expectations. Cattle began to flow towards the market, depressing prices. As a result growers and feeders were forced to unload their cattle even at unfavorable prices.

Prefer Protection

At Jan. 1 the farm value per head was only $128 compared with $179 on the same date a year ago. But even that is $31 better than the average value from 1942 to 1951.

Whitehead says the price slump has jolted the entire industry. But those who have been hurt particularly are what one old-line Texas cattleman called the "bankers, oil men, barbers and soda jerkers" who put their money into cattle as a sideline. The squeeze caught them before they could unload.

Others who have been hurt are mid-west farmers who bought cattle for feeding at high prices, taking a chance the price would stabilize before they sold them.

Jack Roach of Amarillo, president of the Texas southwestern cattle raisers association, told him:

"We have always felt that there can be no satisfactory or workable solution to our problems that would substitute subsidies for a fair and open market price. . . . our only bellyache is over the meat that is being imported to compete with the homegrown product. We'd like to see something done about that."

And former governor Roy Turner of Oklahoma, a rancher himself, said:

"It has not been indicated in any meeting of cattlemen I have attended that the groups want a price-support program."

SIGNS OF SPRING

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — It snowed Thursday but there were signs that spring is on the way. Crows have been sighted in the district and a flock of ducks was seen following the course of the Otonabee river.

Will Not Effect Job Until July Says President

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—President Rhys M. Sale of Ford of Canada said Thursday in a letter to employees that transfer of the company's final assembly plant to Oakville will not affect the job of any present employee in the Windsor plants or offices "until after July 1, 1953."

He said passenger cars will continue to be assembled here until mid-May and assembly will be done here and at the new Oakville plant until the end of July. The truck assembly line will not be moved to the new Oakville plant until next year.

"We will build up passenger car production in the new plant through the late summer and fall months," the letter said.

He will command the permanent force RCAF personnel attached to No. 400 auxiliary squadron.

Sqdn. Ldr. Sherlock and his twin brother, E. T. Sherlock, joined the air force together, completed tours of operations in North Africa and England, and between tours participated in war bond sales in the Toronto area.

Sqdn. Ldr. E. T. Sherlock now is liaison officer with the United States Air Force at Omaha, Neb.

An Afternoon in Visitation With the Victorian Order Nurse

In the local Hydro office window is an eye-catching display showing a blue-clad nurse bathing the new arrival. All requirements for the baby's comfort are ready at hand. On the nearby chair, the fresh clean garments, at the table side, the immaculate tray of rubbing alcohol, oil, powder, and other necessities, neatly arranged in easy reach, and beneath the table, upon a sheet of newspaper, the soiled clothes, while on two neighboring chairs, the little sleeping basket, so freshly inviting.

Such is but one of the many pictures that might be shown of the Victorian Order nurse in action, typifying the motto: "Service for all regardless of race, color, creed or financial status, "as she makes her daily visitations to those within the city, and also to those within a radius of three miles, bringing help and healing to the sick in body as well as to the sick in mind, bowed down with accumulating bills, and the "troubles that come not singly but in battalions."

Quiet Efficiency

As the Victorian Order nurse deftly and quietly ministers to the needs of young and old, there is that indefinable sense of quiet efficiency bringing with it that peace of mind and confidence so essential on the road to recovery.

On a recent tour of visits with the local Victorian Order nurse, the tableau in the Hydro window came to life in a home within the city, where the little babe was bathed, gently lifted and clothed. and later, at a home outside the city limits, where the same kindly ministration was noticed as the mature patient was bathed, hair dressed, clothed in fresh garments and the bed smoothed, all accompanied by the cheering smile and reassuring word.

The Victorian Order of Nurses is a service which was introduced by the Kiwanis Clubs in 1924, and includes medical and surgical care; convalescent care; care of the chronically ill and aged; maternity patients, with special activities embracing child welfare clinics and conferences; school health services; pre-natal classes and part-time, industrial nursing.

Under Physician's Direction

The Victorian nurse works under the direction of the family physician, visiting daily or less frequently, depending on the needs of the patient and the physician's orders. She will call at the home of anyone in the community where a sick person is needing attention. She is as close as your nearest telephone.

Special treatments include dressings, compresses, or other treatments ordered by the physician. Convalescents returning from hospital can be assisted by the daily visits of the Victorian Order nurse, while those who are suffering from chronic diseases, as those of the heart, cancer, diabetes, and other afflictions are often much happier in their own home where the nurse can visit, than at the hospital.

Last year 1,000,000 visits were made from coast to coast by the Victorian Order of Nurses, and 4,000 local visits.

Other Activities

The V.O.N. service also includes instruction before confinement, attendance at that time, and after care of both mother and child. If confinement takes place in the hospital, the nurse may be called to the home where she will demonstrate the giving of the bath; preparation of the food, if artificial. But along with this is also advice to the mother to get needed rest, to take things easy, generally until full strength has returned for at this time the needs of the baby are most essential, as well as the health and welfare of the rest of the family. A little dust here and there is of no moment.

Short cuts for the disposal of dressings, swabs and other discards were shown, little containers deftly fashioned from ordinary newspapers, thus entailing the least effort in disposal of the same.

Again, your Victorian Order nurse is as near as your nearest telephone—"a friend in need, and a friend indeed."

Queen's Pre-Coronation Book Includes Last-Minute Fittings For Gowns for Summer Wear

By MURIEL NARRAWAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP) — The Queen's crowded pre-Coronation datebook includes last-minute fittings for the beautiful gowns she will wear during the coming summer season.

Already she has been to Kensington Palace to try on robes similar to those she will wear at her crowning in Westminster Abbey June 2. When final selection has been made, she will practise wearing them in various phases of the Coronation ceremony.

Apart from the Coronation robes, there will be great interest in anything the Queen wears this summer. She realizes this, and treats her fashion problems with something of the same application she gives to affairs of state.

Designs Kept Secret

She has seen most of the clothes displayed at the spring collections of London's "Big Eleven" of haute couture, but no details of designs chosen by the Queen are released before she wears them in public. If the Queen picks a style it is immediately withdrawn from a collection—generally before that collection is shown to press and buyers.

On many occasions, however, the Queen prefers something entirely different. New designs are then prepared and presented with suggested materials, the Queen makes her choice or suggests certain alterations, and the next step is the first fitting. Often only one fitting is necessary as designers serving the Royal Family have made-to-measure "figures" that save the royal patron many hours of tedious standing.

An intrinsic part of the Queen's appearance is, of course, the priceless jewelry worn on official occasions. Some of this passed to her on her accession. The rest is her own private collection and includes many birthday, wedding and state gifts. A favorite lapel piece for costume jewelry is the diamond maple leaf brooch presented by the people of Toronto.

A member of the royal household said the Queen considers it an honor to her country to wear jewels presented to her because she is Queen.

Duke's Influence

Since her marriage, the Queen's interest in fashion has matured. Much of this is due to the influence of her husband, the Duke of Edinburgh, and it was on his advice that soon after her marriage she turned to the dark greens, reds and browns that show up so clearly her "English rose" complexion.

The Queen still favors new shades of the warm reds and dark greens that so captivated Canadian audiences during the royal tour of 1951. At that time, the eyes of the fashion world turned with approval on the slim, elegant figure who held the spotlight both in Canada and the United States.

The young Queen endeavors to live up to the fashion standards set by herself during that tour. So she is giving careful thought to the competition she will be up against at such functions as a post-Coronation government banquet at Lancaster House, June 5, official evening and garden parties at Buckingham Palace, four days of state drives to race meetings at Ascot, visits to the Epsom course for the Derby and the Oaks, and a gala performance at the Royal Opera House.

Club Activities

HOLLOWAY STREET Y.P.U.

The Holloway Street Y.P.U. held its weekly meeting on Monday evening with Elgin Moynes, president, presiding.

Following a rousing sing-song, led by Neil Smith, a short business period was held, after which the meeting was turned over to Irene Lytle, who told the life story of Fanny J. Crosby, the well-known hymn writer.

Dorothy Craighead conducted a Bible quiz; Leo Fox and Winston Currie favored with a number of guitar selections.

Refreshments were served and the meeting closed with "Taps".

FATAL TRUCK CRASH

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Robert Norman, 25-year-old London truck driver, died in Victoria Hospital Thursday night of injuries received earlier in a three-truck crash three miles south of Nilestown on No. 74 highway. Norman's northbound tractor-trailer was "practically demolished," police said, in a head-on collision with a southbound tractor-trailer driven by Fred Martin, of RR 5, Aylmer. A third truck, driven by Cecil Eden, North Dorchester township, suffered much less damage, police said.

30 Girls Complete Homemakers Project, Receive Certificates

On Saturday, February 21, the Achievement Day for the Homemaking Club Project, "Sleeping Garments" was held in the Stirling community hall.

Registration took place at 9:30 and the morning activity was underway at 10:00 o'clock. There were two judging classes. One was a class of pyjamas and one was a class of materials suitable for pyjamas. In this way the girls learn what points to look for in buying good quality pyjamas and in buying materials. Each member also did a sample of the shell hem which is used as a finish on lingerie.

Club Exhibits

In the afternoon, club exhibits were set up by the following clubs: Wallbridge, Sew Rites; Eldorado, Sleepy Time Gals; Bethel-Zion, Pee-Jay Pals; West Huntingdon, Homemakers of Tomorrow; Stirling, Girls' Club; Queensboro, Sleepy Time Gals; Cooper-Remington, Stylish Sleepers; Plainfield, Homemakers' Club; Chapman Chums; Madoc Rural Girls' Club.

Some chose the topic "The Sleeping Garment Ensemble" as their club exhibit while others chose "Requirements of Good Sleeping Garments".

The Chapman Club presented a demonstration "The Club Girl Chooses Materials for Sleeping Garments". The West Huntingdon "Homemakers of Tomorrow" and the Plainfield Homemakers' Club presented skits on the same topic. The "Eldorado Sleepy Time Gals" and the "Madoc Rural Girls' Club" presented skits on the topic—"Requirements of Good Sleeping Garments".

During the afternoon, Marilyn Hodgens of the Planfield Homemakers Club, who was the delegate from Hastings County to the National 4H Club Congress in Chicago, gave a most interesting account of her trip.

Certificates Presented

Eighty-eight girls from Hastings County completed the sleeping garments project. Certificates of Achievement were presented to 30 girls for having completed two Homemaking Club projects. The following girls were presented with county honor certificates for having successfully completed six Homemaking Club projects—Barbara Blakely, Doreen Lynn, Eva Martin, Mardelle Wheeler, all of the Chapman Chums and Marlene Johnson, of the Eldorado "Sleepy Time Gals".

Miss Eileen Ness, home economist, was in charge and was assisted by Miss Ina Lindsay, Miss Rhea Simpson, Miss Mary Little, all Eastern Ontario home economists, and Miss Catherine Gillespie, home economics teacher at Madoc high school.

The Experts Say

By KAY REX
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Those who live alone usually know any number of ways to prepare eggs in a hurry. It's easier to make a meal of eggs than to go through all the preparations a big meal involves.

Eggs have high food value, and the Poultry Products Institute of Canada says they are cheap when compared with other protein foods. They lend themselves to many ways of serving, and in combination with other foods their versatility is practically endless.

The institute passes on some hints for preparing omelettes. Serve with tossed salad greens and they make a satisfying supper. With french fried potatoes, a hot vegetable and salad, the omelette becomes a main course.

Scrambled eggs aux champignons: 1½ to 2 cups sliced mushrooms; three tablespoons fat; eight eggs; one-half cup water or milk; one-eighth teaspoon marjoram (optional); salt and pepper to taste; paprika.

Sautee mushrooms in fat in heavy frying pan for two minutes or until tender. Reduce heat. Beat eggs slightly and add water or milk, marjoram, salt and pepper. Pour into pan and combine with mushrooms. Cook slowly over low heat stirring occasionally until eggs are set but still slightly moist. Serve at once, sprinkled with paprika. Yield: four to five servings.

Omelette Desserts

The institute says the following dessert omelette is an adaptation of an old Austrian dessert.

Ingredients: Three tablespoons flour; three tablespoons sugar; three egg yolks; three egg whites; pinch of salt.

Mix flour and sugar together and add to beaten egg yolks. Add salt to egg whites and beat until stiff but not dry. Fold yolk mixture into whites. Melt a little fat in a heavy frying pan. Pour in mixture and cook using low heat.

Cook until set, then fold and serve at once plain, sprinkled with powdered sugar or spread with jelly. Yield: four servings.

Consumers Meet

Directors of the Canadian Association of Consumers met recently in Toronto and discussed a variety of things in which Canadian consumers are interested, among them margarine.

Mrs. Victor George of Montreal, president of the Quebec English-speaking branch of CAC, said that her group is "deeply concerned" with "informer" legislation passed in Quebec in connection with the margarine ban in that province.

"We believe the necessity for such informer legislation is evidence of the lack of wisdom in the original ban," said Mrs. George. "And we hope the farm community which wields such power in Quebec politics will in time learn to accept fair competition and to permit the consumer freedom of choice in purchasing."

ARRESTS FOLLOW HOLDUP

TORONTO (CP)—Two youths held up office manager James Ephringham of Gordon Young Limited Fertilizers in east Toronto Thursday and escaped in an automobile with a $4,000 payroll. Ten minutes later police arrested James Lonesdale, 21, and Walter Studeny, 22, on a street-car.

They were charged with armed robbery and automobile theft. Two district residents, who saw two youths abandon a car and drop some silver in a hurry to catch a tram, tipped off police.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

BEATRICE FAIRFAX

You can't "have your cake and eat it, too"

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We are four 17-year-old seniors in high school, and go steady with boys who are seniors in a different high school. All these boys go in for sports, and one of them is a big star.

The trouble is they seem to have a knack for getting into trouble, not serious trouble, but just little things like crashing parties and being loud to gain attention. Since the boys are all well known in the high school sports world, our friends seem to think they are conceited and big-headed. They don't see the good points of these boys, as they don't know them very well.

Because of all this, we four girls can see that we are losing our popularity. We want very much to be well liked by our friends in our own high school, but we are very serious about these particular boys and they seem to be serious about us. We explained the problem to the boys and decided it would be better to break up with them, but it didn't work out. Soon the boys were calling us on the phone and asking us for dates again, and we did not refuse them because we missed them just as much as they missed us. So now we're wearing their class rings again.

We don't want to break up with them, as we really love them and have intentions for the future. So would you please tell us how we can keep our popularity in our own school and still go steady with these boys?—The Confused Four.

Dear Girls: So what you want me to tell you is, as the saying goes, how to eat your cake and have it, too. That's something everybody wants, but there are very few times when it works out. As you go through life, you are going to find that instead of being able to "eat your cake and have it, too" you're going to have to decide which you want most—to eat your cake, or to keep it. So you might just as well start training yourself to make such choices and such decisions for the kind of choices you make determines the kind of persons you will be.

To apply all this to your present problem means simply that you've got to decide whether you care more about being popular in your own school or remaining friendly with these ill-mannered boys who are making you unpopular.

Occasionally, it is true, some middle ground can be found between two alternatives, and in your case you might be able to find it if the boys would cooperate. Obviously, they're not going to make any effort to change themselves, since you have shown that you can't do without them and so are willing to take them as they are. You can try to reach this middle ground by telling them flatly that unless they learn to behave themselves as gentlemen should, you are going to break off with them, and then stick to this ultimatum. Otherwise, you will simply have to make your choice.

She thinks she's mature — she's fooling herself

Dear Miss Fairfax:

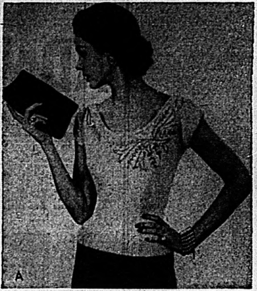
I'm 16, and very much in love with a man 25. He says he loves me and wants me to marry him, but my mother refuses to hear of it and won't even discuss it with me. She says I am too young to get married and he is too old for me anyway.

I realize that 16 may seem young in some cases, but I have always passed for an older girl both in mind and in appearance, and boys of my own age seem very immature to me.

Please advise me how I can get my mother to be reasonable about this, because if she won't I will run away and get married. —S. R.

Dear S.R.: Everything you say points plainly to the fact that so far from being older than your years, you are hardly out of the kindergarten, from the point of view of maturity. You have a crush on an older man, and he is either just kidding you along, or else he is the kind of man with whom no young girl should have anything to do. Your mother is quite right, and if you do anything as foolish as to run away, you will simply be giving unmistakable proof that she knows what she is talking about when she says you are "too young".

Tops for Evening



By ALICE ALDEN

TAKING a prominent place in the informal evening wardrobe, is the dressy sweater, a fashion that is certainly a boon to chilly mortals. Rosanna not only does a becoming versions but interprets it in a new manner. The high ribbed midriff creates an important, long slimming torso silhouette that makes more effective the beautifully curved neckline. Delicate sprays of gold thread and seed-pearl leaf motifs decorate the top of the sweater and extend around the back of scooped decolletage.

QUESTION:

. . . I would like very much to have recipe for chocolate chiffon cake.—L. T.

ANSWER:

CHOCOLATE CHIFFON CAKE

(You must follow instructions to the letter in making this cake.)

Mix together and stir until smooth, 6 tablespoons boiling water and 4 tablespoons cocoa. Sift cake flour and measure 7-8 cup (1 cup less 2 tablespoons), and sift flour with 7-8 cup sugar, 1 1-2 teaspoons baking powder, 1-2 teaspoon salt. Make a well in the sifted flour and add 1-4 cup cooking oil (salad oil), 4 medium-sized unbeaten egg yolks, the cool cocoa-water mixture, 1-2 teaspoon vanilla, 1-8 teaspoon red food coloring (if desired). Beat this until very smooth. Into a large mixing bowl put 1-2 cup egg whites (4 whites) and 1-4 teaspoon cream of tartar. Beat these until they are very stiff and stand in tall peaks that do not slump. Now gently fold the egg-yolk-flour-mixture into the whites with a rubber scraper until barely blended. Do not become impatient and start stirring this—just fold. Pour into ungreased pan at once. This may be 9-inch tube or 8x8x2-inch square, or 5x10x3 loaf pan. Bake tube at 325 deg. for 50 to 55 minutes; square at 350 deg. for 30 to 35 minutes, or loaf at 325 deg. for 50 to 55 minutes. When done cake springs back from light touch. Let hang inverted over cake rack until cool, then gently loosen from sides with the 4 finger tips and give pan a sharp bang on table top. It will loosen, Good with chocolate butter icing.

QUESTION:

Praise to your good work. I clipped a cutting out of the paper "Cheese Spread" which calls for Refrigerator Dough. I have no recipe for that. Could you kindly oblige?—Mrs. W. H.

ANSWER:

I am wondering if this is one of my recipes. It does not sound familiar. However here is the recipe for

REFRIGERATOR DOUGH

(For hot rolls)

(This is the dough you make refrigerator bread rolls with.) One cup hot water, 1 teaspoon salt, 6 tablespoons shortening, 1-4 cup white sugar, 1 cake fresh or dry granular yeast, 2 tablespoons lukewarm water, 1 well-beaten egg, 3 1-2 to 4 cups sifted all-purpose flour. Mix together hot water, salt, shortening and sugar in large warm bowl. Cool to lukewarm, add yeast softened in lukewarm water five minutes. Add the egg, half of the flour, and beat until smooth. Stir in more flour—enough to make an easily handled dough. Grease top of dough in bowl. Cover very well and store in refrigerator. It will keep 4 or 5 days. Cut off dough as needed. Shape into rolls and place on greased pan. Cover and let rise in warm place until doubled in size. Bake at 425 about 12 or 15 minutes.

QUESTION:

Right now I am looking for a recipe for Pearl Tapioca Pudding. I have three cook books and they all mention quick-cooking tapioca. Would you have a good recipe on hand, as my husband and I love that pudding. I tried it in the pressure cooker once and it turned out a grey glue. Counting on you.—Madeleine.

ANSWER:

I love it too. Pete calls it Fish-Eye Puddin'.

TAPIOCA CUSTARD

One-quarter cup pearl tapioca (or sago may be used for this), 2 1-4 cups milk, 2 eggs, 1-3 cup sugar, 1-8 teaspoon salt, 1-2 teaspoon vanilla. Wash tapioca and soak in cold water to cover four hours. Add milk, then cook in top of double boiler over boiling water until tapioca is clear. Beat the eggs, add sugar, salt and tapioca mixture. Return to double boiler and cook until egg thickens slightly. Remove from heat and add flavoring. Or add only yolks when cooking over hot water, then beat whites and fold them in or use either of these methods but finish pudding by baking in oven about 25 minutes at 375. The latter is good when egg whites are folded in.

Variation—Use all water and no milk; add 5 or 6 sliced apples, finish cooking by baking and serve with brown sugar hard sauce.

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

A 14-year-old girl and her birthday party problems

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

(1) My fourteenth birthday is to be next month. I want to have a party on the Saturday before my birthday. Is this proper? (2) I don't know whether to invite only girls, or both girls and boys. In either case, what plans should I make for entertainment? The party would be in our nice basement game-room. (3) If I have the party for both boys and girls, could I still expect to get presents?—Sharon.

(1) When a party of any kind is not to be given on the actual date, but for convenience on a Saturday or Sunday, it is usually given on the Saturday or Sunday after the actual date.

(2) I hope you can plan to invite both girls and boys to your party . . . usually more fun! But if you can corral only a very few boys, better settle for an all-girl party. . . and make it a delightful-memory party. Ask several of your friends who have given birthday parties recently to suggest games that will appeal . . . or get a game-book from your local library. And plan as "wonderful eats" as you possible can . . .and attractive favors for each guest, take-home loot.

(3) I'll be hoping that every guest will bring you a present . . . every birthday-party guest, girl or boy, should. Though I must admit boys too often resist the suggestion that you must always bring a gift to a birthday party . . . even though it's a simple, inexpensive gift.

The sending of graduation invitations

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Our son is graduating from high school this spring. Does an invitation to a graduation mean that a gift is necessary? Several close relatives of ours live in distant states. We know that they will not be able to attend, yet we would like them to know of the graduation. Should invitations be sent to them, or would writing a letter and mentioning the graduation be more proper, make them feel that a gift is not expected?

2. Should each family sending a graduation gift receive a graduation photograph, or is just a thank-you note sufficient?—D. H.

1. First—have you inquired as to how many invitations your son is to have? Today invitations to graduation exercises are generally limited to a very small number for each student, and it is very often a problem to supply enough for the members of the graduate's immediate family. In this circumstance, relatives and close friends of the family are told the news in the usual course of correspondence. If your son is to be assigned enough invitations to be sent to these out-of-town relatives and friends, it's quite all right to send them, and then, perhaps in a separate note sent by the same mail, write, "Tommy wanted to send you a special invitation to his graduation, so you would know he would so much like to have you with him on this important occasion, if this were possible." (Or, even better, your son would write this message himself.) An invitation to a graduation doesn't mean that a gift is a 'must' . . a gift is sent if the receiver of the invitation wishes to send one.

2. A thank-you note is sufficient. . . but it would be natural to send a photograph to grandparents, to godparents, and perhaps several others most interested in this commencement-milestone in your boy's life.

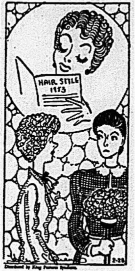
BEAUTY

HELEN JAMESON

Naturally curly hair

Don't imagine that the wave set is a new idea. It is as old as the hills. Hairdressers at the time of Marie Antoinette employed this method of forming undulations in the beautiful white towering wigs that were worn at that period. Manufacturers of what used to be called false hair, now referred to as "extra pieces", pin these items on a board and moisten them; then, with a fine-toothed comb and their fingers, make pleasing patterns with wave lines.



The first permanents made the hair look like a floor mop.

It was the permanent that made the set popular. The first permanents produced a frizz that made the hair look like a floor mop. A way had to be found to put it under control. So waves were made, and were held in place with small combs; later the present method became popular.

Naturally curly hair should be trained by this method if the pattern is not wide and fluid. Often a slight undulation can be developed into a perfect design. Many girls have natural waves and are scarcely aware of the fact. The cowlick is the beginning of a wave. Start with that, making it strong, and follow along with others.

An experienced hairdresser is wise to these facts; when she gives a set, she notes the natural inclinations of the hair, decides which way it wants to go. If the hair is inclined one way, no amount of coaxing will make it remain in the other direction. If your set goes limp in a day or two, change operators.

Careless shampooing, that leaves soap deposits on the shafts, will weaken the natural wave the same as it takes the coil quality out of the permanent. Teen-agers who try to get their tresses clean with a single application of a shampoo liquid, and a casual rinsing in the washbowl, may wonder why their ringlets go stringy, why they have to give themselves a pin curl every night. Cleaner hair will solve this problem.

Curly hair responds to moist heat and steaming. It should never have a cold water rinsing. After the shampoo, Curly Locks should turn on the hot water faucet and give her hair a vapor bath.

After the set or the pin curl, the hair should have a thorough drying. Arrange it with the comb, instead of the brush. The brush is likely to make the hair frizzy unless you train it over your finger in rolls.

Sometimes, when naturally curly hair is cut, the ends are blunt. They can be permanently waved with no ill effects on the natural pattern.

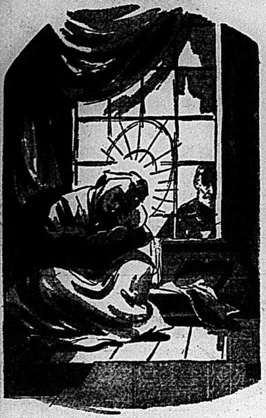
The Greatest Story Ever Told

By Fulton Oursler



THE VIRGIN AND CHILD

Joseph is looking in through the window in this interpretation of a Rembrandt etching (1654) from the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

Chapter 10

JESUS BAR-ABBAS

Nearly two years passed before Joseph had another supernatural experience, but at last it came.

Once more the angel interrupted their quiet lives with a sign from the other world; one last dream for Joseph, a vision with great news, the angel declaring:

"Arise and take the child and go into the land of Israel. For they are dead that sought the life of the child."

They are dead! They meant Herod! He was king and spoke plurally of himself as "we" this and "we" that, and of him the angel spoke plurally, too, in proclaiming the end of him.

With no question in their minds Joseph and Mary, the most perfect believers in history, obeyed the directive. From his sleep Joseph sprang up and began to pack at once. Taking the child and mother on a donkey, he turned again to the gray and yellow desert that lay between them and home.

As the long desert days passed and the little family drew nearer to their own part of the world, other travellers in wayside camping confirmed the news.

Yes, Herod the Great was dead!

Back to Galilee

To his son Archelaus he bequeathed Judea with the precious title of king. The troops had given Archelaus homage as soon as the will was read, now all the world knew he was the new ruler in the capital. But not of Galilee To Herod Antipas, another son, Herod bequeathed Galilee, with Perea, and with the title not of king, but of tetrarch.

What would life be like in Jerusalem — or any part of Judea — under the new king? Joseph had often heard that of all the sons Archelaus was most like the wicked Herod. He decided not to settle in Judea as he had been planning for the last two years to do, but to go back to Galilee, back to Nazareth, where Joseph had a good trade as a carpenter.

There in Nazareth, in Galilee, then it was that Jesus learned to toddle, and grew into boyhood; there in Galilee that he studied the Scriptures in the synagogue —and heard the troubles of His people proclaimed loudly in the streets.

Little Revolutionists

The boys of the village liked to talk everlastingly about deliverance of the nation from foreign tyranny. At heart they were all little revolutionists. Their games, like cowboys and Indians of today, were of Zealots and Romans, patriots and tyrants. On street corners, around fires in the field, on the steps of the synagogue, their elders too—peddler, shepherd, everybody —talked of a king who was to come one day and free Israel by force of arms. But Jesus showed scant interest in the boys' games of revolution though He heard every day about the crimes of government.

And indeed the years of His childhood were no improvement for Israel over the sway of the late King Herod. The acute misery of the people brought about a rebellion in Galilee when Jesus was eleven years old.

That abortive uprising began and ended in the town of Sepphoris, only four miles away from Nazareth. There was a patriot called Judas of the forbidden Zealot party, and he led a desperate crew—of whom Joseph's old friend Samuel was a vigorous lieutenant — on a madman's enterprise. Judas was going to save everybody, free everybody from Roman tyranny. "No Lord but Jehovah" was the rallying call; "no tax but to the Temple; no friend but the Zealot." So Judas, the Galilean, raised an army of rebels, a rag, tag, and bobtail valiant crew who, following his bidding, raided the king's armory in Sapphoris and then began to march. Soon enough the Roman colonial troops cut the army of Judas to pieces, and Sepphoris was burned to the ground.

Sold Into Slavery

Jesus would always remember the smell of the cremated city which filled the nostrils of Nazareth. Those inhabitants of Sepphoris who did survive the fire were sold into slavery.

That was a time of panic for the Nazarines: Judas beheaded, on the field of battle, the rebel soldiers in flight and hiding, perhaps in his own cistern. All the neighbors of Joseph had stood on the heights and watched in despair the fury of Roman punishment.

Two thousand men, suspected of complicity in the schemes of Judas the Galilean, were crucified in the open country — two thousand crosses with hanging victims—between Sepphoris and Nazareth. Those two thousand crucifixions — some of the victime men He had run errands for —were among the early memories of the boy Jesus.

In the midst of such civil clashes there was the gravest anxiety in Joseph's mind, when one day a long-bearded stranger in Syrian dress walked into the shop and whispered a name. Then Joseph knew the stranger was Samuel in disguise. Samuel, who had survived the broken rebellion and escaped the Romans; Samuel, who now, very casually, dropped in to tell of new, even more desperate plans.

"King Archelaus is worse than Herod but not so smart," Samuel told Joseph late that night as the two stood talking in hushed voices near the front door. In the dim light Joseph looked at his old friend with misgiving. Formerly Samuel, wild as he was, his blackholly eyes full of rebellious zeal, had always in his voice a ring of idealism. Now he sounded tired and disillusioned.

"Have you heard the news, Joseph"

"What is it now, Samuel?"

A Committee to Rome

"The new king's cruelty has stirred up the people so that they have sent a committee to Rome —secretly, of course — to complain against the puppet ruler to the real boss — the Emperor!"

"The Emperor!" Joseph repeated, and clucked his tongue. He was no politician, but he knew enough to realize that great Caesar Augustus on his throne would not be pleased at such reports. Already he had mastered the world; now he meant to keep it in order and, as he had said, wherever possible in an atmosphere of intellectual liberty.

What, then, Caesar was likely to ask, was all this disorder in the land of Israel? He was certain to be most majestically annoyed, was he not?

"That is just how it turned out," agreed Samuel. "The committee is back and we know now what is going to happen."

It seemed that the Pharisees on the committee has leagued with envious relatives of Archelaus and fell at the Emperor's feet to report vastly exaggerated accounts of the only disturbances left in his empire."

A New King

"This will never, never do," complained the Emperor angrily, according to Samuel's reports. "I am going to see to it that after this there shall be peace in Bethlehem forevermore."

"That is an admirable idea," agreed Joseph ironically. "How can it be done?"

"By order of the Emperor, the king will be banished and we will get a new one."

"A new one! Another one? Is that a remedy? Why cannot the Emperor learn that peace in Palestine can come only from God?"

"There can be no peace. It is as I have always told you — Israel must fight, fight to the death. The trouble has been that we have no leaders. Well, at last I am going to become a leader. Joseph—your hand.

"I am going away from Nazareth and you will know me never again. My old self dies tonight. I shall haunt the caravan roads, pounce and rob and plunder—and slay when I have to; I shall stop at nothing to finance a new rebellion. My old name is forgotten; Samuel is no more."

A New Name

"Alas, my old friend, will nothing stop you from this craziness?"

"Nothing, Joseph. Someday the people of this land will have to choose between your views and mine."

"Your new name? Have you chosen it? What will it be?"

"I have chosen it. Only you may know—because I can trust you. My new name will be Bar-Abbas!"

"I commend you to God, Bar-Abbas"

"To freedom, if you please! And, Joseph—kiss the little Son for me. Tell Him I have also taken His name. Hereafter I shall be known as Jesus Bar-Abbas!"

And Samuel rushed down the road. Joseph was never to see him again. But Mary was to see him in the darkest hour of life.

"If he would only put his trust in the promises of God," murmured Joseph. "In the Messiah. And yet, he did ask me to kiss our little boy!"

ST. PAUL'S M.A.

STIRLING. — The February meeting of St. Paul's Missionary Auxiliary was held in the church parlors with 1st vice-president, Mrs. George Carlisle, in the chair. The prayer missionary for 1953 was announced as Mrs. A. R. Graham, of Central India. The supply secretary reported two quilts for Overseas Relief ready for quilting.

Mrs. E. G. Bailey presided for the program period. The theme for worship was "The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper".

Mrs. Bailey read an appropriate Psalm and Mrs. George White read the Scripture lesson. The meditation on these verses was given by Mrs. Morley Ayrhart. Mrs. A. Armstrong closed the worship service.

The study chapter "Europeans in Africa" taken from the book, "Along African Trails", was given by Mrs. J. E. Munro. With the aid of a map, Mrs. Munro showed how many of the European nations had invaded Africa and with mixed motives their governments had carved out protectorates and spheres of influence.

European Administration

European administration has undoubtedly brought many benefits to Africa but there were other obligations which must be fulfilled for the benefit of Africa's own people.

There are still too many people who believe that the black man is ordained of God to be the servant of the white race. The color bar in its various forms, cannot be maintained indefinitely.

Europeans have exploited Africa for more than 200 years and as a result, today, the sinister threat of the Mau Mau terrorists falls.

Theirs is a problem arising from religious, political and national issues, and it is essential that Christians in Africa and all other countries face prayerfully, the problem of race relations.

"Surely it is a case once more of whether the black or white, brown or yellow race of not merely repeating the Golden Rule with our lips but living it in our hearts and in our lives".

Mrs. William Wilkins rendered a pleasing solo, previous to singing John Browning's hymn, "In the Cross of Christ I Glory". She told how it came to be written. This number was most appropriate for the Lenten season.

Letters from the moderator, Rev. A. A. Scott, and Mrs. Scott, were read by Mrs. A. Armstrong and Mrs. S. Elliott. Before repeating the benediction, Mrs. Elmer Post and Mrs. S. Elliott were especially welcomed to the Auxiliary by Mrs. Carlisle.

The social period followed and thanks was expressed to the program and lunch committees, for providing such a pleasant and profitable meeting.

MOIRA W.A.

MOIRA. — Mrs. Donald McInroy was hostess on Thursday for the February meeting of Moira W.A. At 12:30 nearly 40 guests sat down to a delicious pot-luck dinner. The president, Mrs. Donald Holbert, presided and opened the meeting and extended a welcome to visitors and members.

Scripture reading was given by Lieut. Peterson of Salvation Army, Tweed, and Lieut. Brown, also of Tweed, was present. Reading was given by Mrs. Nelson Welsh, "The Real McCoy". Music was given by Lieut. Brown on an euphonium and Lieut Peterson accompanied him at the organ, "Take Up My Cross and Follow Me". Recitations by Lieut. Peterson, "A Lion Ate Albert", "Albert Comes Back". A solo was given by Lieut. Brown, "Love of God" and a reading by Mrs. Frank Emerson, "Plane It a Little More".

The president called on Lieut. Brown for an address on "Faith, Love, Humility and Humor". It was an impressive and interesting address.

Rev. Mr. Norman spoke briefly.

Business followed.

Habs Make Fall Out Of Spring As They Send Leafs 'Afluttering Down'

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By Geo. H. Carver, Sports Editor

THAT MAN AGAIN!

Michael J. Rodden, whose peace of mind has had more ups and down than an elevator boy, depending on the fortunes of his beloved Goodyears, comes up with another for the "book." He accuses this department of admitting "the Glens had been fruitlessly pursuing a will-o-the-wisp." We cannot recollect saying any such thing, in fact, for the moment the meaning of the expression escapes this mind. (No cracks, Mike.)

He goes on to say that the "worrying burden will likely be shouldered jointly by Mr. Carver and the Glens. Goodyears will not collaborate nor approach the Wailing Well (he means Wall), the while they strive with might and main to erase Belleville hopes as rapidly as possible."

The hon. Michael didn't care for this department's statement that schedule statistics are so much water under the bridge as far as playoffs are concerned. And just to keep peace in the sports writing fraternity we'll go on record as repeating the statement.

As far as the Wailing Wall goes, come, come Michael, me bhoy, you know that if the truth were known the Goodies would hold a lot of stock in that tear-drenched edifice. Those noises that emanated from Kingston and the honorable column were not exactly cheers when the saucy Pontiacs whipped you 17-5, albeit they spoiled the victory by playing an unsigned goalie.

All this, of course, before Wednesday night's battle in Kingston when a surprised Michael witnessed the spectacle of the upstarts from the banks of the Moira not only holding his beloved Goodies to a five-all draw, but nearly snatching the laurel from under their very noses.

Michael J goes on: "The Belles . . . staggered to an even break in their last four tests by beating Stouffville and Orillia—and were defeated 13-8 in Peterborough and edged in Community Centre 6-5." And get this, after berating this department regarding the use of schedule statistics, he says: "Those are the facts, but needless to say they will have no bearing regarding results in playoff time." How inconsistent can some people be?

That, too, is water under the bridge. Tonight is another night and another battle of the G's. The Rodden-picked favorites to win the series, will be here to engage in second combat with the Glens, and there should be plenty of whoop-de-do at Memorial arena. The Glens won a more or less moral victory in Kingston by depriving the Goodies of that all-important first-game nod, and in addition, tonight they'll be on home ice and before a home crowd. It all helps.

Incidentally, Glens' manager Don McNevin informs us that tickets for Monday night's game in Kingston are now available at the Glen Roy Creamery, Pinnacle Street. No mail orders please. The pasteboards must be picked up.

BATTLE OF THE BLUES!

Barrie Craig, Martin Kane, Hawkshaw, Mr. Chameleon and even Sherlock Holmes may be called into action before the annual hockey battle of the "Law vs. Smoke-Easters," scheduled for March 5th. gets under way.

We understand Fire Chief Gerald Vance has already assigned two private eyes to investigate mysterious goings on in Millbrook the other night when two teams, said to be O.P.P. limbs of the law from Belleville and Peterborough battled four or five hours with the latter reported to be the victors by 107½ to 6¼.

No injuries were reported although two of the combatants, said to be non-swimmers, did not report for duty until late the next day. They were detained, it was stated, by dew-worms poking curious snouts above the bottom of the rink, and which wound themselves, octopus fashion, around the pinkies of the bobbies, doing a neat anchoring job.

The more fortunate of the bluecoats wore frogmen shoes. These, an undercover shamus reported, enabled them to get over the ice surface in much less time than their blade-shod confreres. In fact the U.S. said, when the defence duo of one of the teams became firmly anchored, the opposing forwards merely splashed the puck between them. They thought they were goalposts.

However, on the other side of the ledger it might not be amiss for the "coppers" to do a little private scenting. The "Smoke Eaters" are not like Caesar's wife, and have been known to indulge in a spot of undercover skullduggery themselves. In fact you can expect almost anything on the night of March 5th.

Seriously, the police and firemen of the city have arranged a fine program for their annual "hockey do" in aid of the Crippled Children Fund of the Belleville Shrine Club. They're bringing three ex-National Hockey League stars here to act as referees in the persons of Turk Broda, Dit Clapper and Gus Marker. And don't be surprised to see either or all of the three in hockey action before the night's over.

Also adding to the entertainment will be several members of the Quinte Skating Club, figure skating stars in their own right, who will perform between periods. Club prexy Jack Dickens said the acts will be the star presentation of the club.

And speaking of the skating club, here's a tip. Don't miss the colorful Ice Show in the arena tomorrow night. Three outstanding skating acts are being brought here and these plus the talented members of the club appearing in brand new settings round out an evening of fine entertainment.

Thirteen Entries Listed In Que. Dog Derby

QUEBEC (CP)—Thirteen entrants were listed Thursday in the Quebec international dog-sled derby to be run off in three daily, 30-mile laps starting today.

The second and third laps will be run Saturday and Sunday.

Wilfred Lepine, veteran Quebec musher who won the classic last year, will defend his title against a field which includes Mrs. Jean Lane of Lunenburg, Mass.

Emile Martel of nearby Loretteville, a former international champion and winner of many derbies in the last 25 years, will be taking part in competition for the last time. He is giving it up because of pressure of business.

Martel's last victory in international competition was the Ottawa international derby in 1951.

Mrs. Lane, the only woman entered, recently proved her ability when she placed fourth in a 60-mile derby at the Laurentian winter carnival at Ste. Agathe, Que.

Whip Smythemen by 4-1 Score For 7th Straight Victory; Standing Spots Remain As Is

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Canadiens Thursday night made it seven straight over Toronto Maple Leafs this season, routing them 4-1 before 14,340 rabid National Hockey League fans.

The last time the Leafs were able to win over Montreal was Dec. 24 in Toronto.

Goalie Harry Lumley's injury Thursday night might have had something to do with Toronto's loss. He suffered a 14-stitch cut over the right eye in the second period and the game was held up for 25 minutes while he was treated in the Forum clinic.

Ken Mosdell's second-period goal proved the winner. Floyd Curry shot the Canadiens ahead early in the first period, but Toronto's Tod Sloan tied it up. Bert Olmstead and Bernie (Boom Boom) Geoffrion completed the scoring in the final period.

The Maple Leafs drew six of the 11 penalties and two Montreal goals came while they were shorthanded.

Referee Red Storey disallowed a goal claimed by Montreal's Paul Meger, which brought the light flash by the goal judge.

The victory kept the Canadiens safely in second place, four points behind Detroit Red Wings, but the Wings have two games in hand. Toronto remained in third place, in danger of being overtaken by either Boston Bruins or Chicago Black Hawks before the season runs out.

A Detroit-at-Chicago encounter, originally scheduled for Thursday night, was postponed to March 21 to give the Black Hawks a breather for tonight's game with Boston Bruins—rescheduled from Jan. 6 because of an ice show in the Chicago Stadium.

Four games are on tab for the week-end.

Saturday, Detroit is scheduled to play here against the Canadiens, while the tail-end New York Rangers tangle with the Maple Leafs at Toronto. The Maple Leafs are at New York Sunday and Boston is at Chicago.

Television Boon To Small Clubs Says Promoter

DETROIT (AP)—"Who says TV is killing boxing—it's the best thing that's ever happened to the sport."

At least that's what promoter Julius Piazza said today after staging one of the most successful "small club" fights in the history of this area.

A crowd of 10,124 jammed into the University of Detroit fieldhouse Thursday night for a fight between two comparative unknowns, Tom Leedle and Pat Lowry.

They paid a gross gate of $17,183.40 and were rewarded with a wild-action two-rounder. Lowry, a mean-swinging ex-marine from Toledo, O., floored Leedle, a local favorite, twice in the second round before the referee stepped in and called a halt to the massacre.

But that wasn't the big news. The crowd was. It was a damp, misty night—the kind you like to stay home and watch TV, or catch up with back reading. But the crowd turned out in droves.

Why?

"Television did it," said Piazza. "TV made this fight. We started these boys on TV in four rounders. Next it was six, then eight.

"Now you look at this crowd. . . They've seen these kids on TV and now they want to see 'em in the flesh.

"Don't let anybody kid you, television is the best thing that's ever happened to boxing."

Annis Stukus Happiness Boy With Vancouver

TORONTO (CP)—Annis Stukus, newly-appointed manager-coach of the Vancouver club in the Western Interprovincial Football Union said Thursday he is "happy and I guess the Vancouver club is happy" about the signing announced at the West coast city.

The likeable sports writer conceded in an interview that the problem of getting experienced Canadian players would be "tremendous." He added that "we have 18 months to work on this situation and I'm sure that we can come up with some good ones when Vancouver enters the league in 1954."

Stukus said he would shop around on the United States west coast for American players.

Twelve Horses Burn to Death

CHARLES TOWN W. Va. (AP) — Nine thoroughbreds valued at more than $15,000 and three other horses burned to death Thursday night when fire swept an old maintenance barn at the Charles Town race track.

Leeds Reily, track secretary, said the thoroughbreds were stabled in the log barn because of crowded conditions preparatory to tomorrow's opening of a 25-day spring meeting at the half mile track.

The fire of unknown origin, quickly spread through the barn, trapping the race horses, two work horses and a pony.

Some 600 other thoroughbreds stabled in nearby barn were not threatened, Reily said, because two fire companies quickly controlled the blaze.

Don Hogan Sparks Trappers To 7-3 Win

SUDBURY (CP)—Sparked by the blue line combination of Roly McLenahan and Lennie Speck, who fired two goals apiece, Sudbury Wolves Thursday night defeated North Bay Trappers 7-3 in the opening game of their best-of-seven Northern Ontario Hockey Association Senior A southern group championships series.

The Wolves, leaders in the final league standing, led 2-0 at the end of the first period and 5-2 at the end of the second.

Other Sudbury marksmen were Yacker Flynn, Gordie Hale and Johnny Mestan.

Don Hogan sparked the Trappers notched the other. Valenti, back in action after being out with a back injury, was converted to a forward from a defenceman for the series.

Second game in the series will be played here tonight. Then the series moves to North Bay for the third and fourth games next Tuesday and Thursday.

Consider Pike As Coach New York Rangers

NEW YORK (CP)—The New York Journal-American said Thursday rumors continue that Alf Pike, now coaching the Guelph, Ont., Biltmores, is under consideration as coach of New York Rangers to replace Bill Cook.

The story, by Stan Saplin, former Ranger publicity chief, said that Gen. John Reed Kilpatrick, Ranger president, denied Wednesday night that Cook will be replaced as coach.

But the story said whispers that Pike was negotiating with Madison Square Garden have been heard in Canadian ice circles for several weeks.

Cook's work in his season and a half as bench leader of the Rangers has not been "altogether pleasing" to his bosses, the newspaper said.

"Also there has been evidence that Boucher and Cook, inseparable pals in their playing days, have not seen eye to eye on many matters pertaining to the team."

The newspaper said the big hitch in developments concerning Pike is believed to stem from his contract demands. Pike, 35, played for the Rangers as a forward from 1939 until 1947 except for three years service with the RCAF.

Diminishing Strike Zone Nemesis For Young Pitchers, Says Coach

By GAYLE TALBOT

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)—Young pitchers who come to the big leagues sporting brilliant minor league records and yet have to be sent back down perhaps two or three times before they finally stick under the main tent are in most cases victims of the "diminishing strike zone," says Frank Shellenback, pitching coach of New York Giants.

Like the average fan, we had been under the impression for many years that the strike zone was fairly stable, extending from the arm pits down to the knees and taking in the width of the plate. This, says Shellenback, is true only in theory, and it takes some pitchers longer than it does others to find it out.

There's a Difference

"The difference in ball and strike umpiring between the low minors and the big leagues is tremendous," he explained. "It gives us one of our biggest headaches. Yet we understand why it must be that way and are by no means critical of the minor league umpires. We know why they must call a game much more loosely than it is called in the majors, where we expect something close to perfection.

"A young pitcher in the lowest minors expects to get a strike on anything across the shoulders or the knees. The umpire has to give it to him or too many games would develop into farces.

"Gradually as he works in leagues of higher classification the pitcher finds the calls getting a little tighter, but even when he reaches triple-A and continues to blow the batters down he still is not prepared for the things that are going to happen to him the first time he faces big league batting.

"We try to prepare him the best we can in the short time we have, but even so the chances are that he will come back to the bench after the first inning and complain that the umpire is calling balls on what he alwways was given strikes before. All we can do is remind him again that he's throwing at a smaller target now.

"A few of them catch on quickly, but mainly they don't."

QAHA Appeals to CAHA Branches; Refrain from Approving Suspension

MONTREAL (CP)—The Quebec Amateur Hockey Association appealed Thursday night to "the other self-respecting branches" of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association to refrain from approving suspension of the QAHA by the CAHA officers.

President Martin Conway of the QAHA set forth in a statement his organization's position in the Ron Atwell case—a case that revolves around eligibility of the 18-year-old hockey player to play for Montreal Junior Canadiens, a team under QAHA jurisdiction.

Conway flayed the CAHA officers for requesting confirmation of their suspension recommendation, terming it "not only high-handed but quite unnecessary."

The CAHA has asked its nine branches to vote on the issue. A two-thirds majority is necessary to back up the suspension recommendation.

Secretary-Manager George Dudley of the CAHA said in Midland, Ont., that result of the vote is not expected to be known until today. A meeting of the CAHA executive has been called for Saturday in Montreal.

Under Ontario Hockey Association regulations, Atwell was drafted in 1951 by the Waterloo, Ont., club from Nobleton, Ont., a club of lower junior classification.

He came to Montreal that fall but was refused a transfer to the Quebec branch of the CAHA. He was also suspended by the CAHA but a year later was reinstated when the Waterloo club went out of existence. But his transfer still was not approved.

He remained out of hockey a year and when he was allowed to play early this season by the QAHA, trouble again arose with the CAHA. He did not play again till last week and the big rumpus was set off.

Conway listed "two important points which, up to the present time, the CAHA has given no consideration to whatsoever."

He maintained: (1) After Sept. 1, 1952, Atwell became an absolute free agent under the CAHA's own regulations, and (2) "Even assuming the right of the OHA to its draft," Atwell was not eligible for draft when it took place in May, 1951.

Sport in Brief

HAMILTON (CP) — Toronto YMHA staved off a last-period drive by Hamilton YMCA Mountaineers to register a 65-55 victory here Thursday night and win the best-of-three inter-city senior basketball final in two straight games. YMHA now will meet Toronto Northtown Tri-Bells in a best-of-three series for the eastern Ontario title.

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Rangers announced Thursday the recall of forward Ron Murphy from their Guelph farm club in the Ontario Hockey Association. Murphy, who had a three-game tryout with the National Hockey League team earlier this season, will report Saturday.

CONINGSBY, England (AP)—Harold (Tony) Adams, 19-year-old member of the RAF, died Thursday after being carried from the ring in an amateur boxing match Wednesday night. The referee stopped the bout—Adams' second of the evening—in the first round. Adams was down for a count of eight and after getting back on his feet had collapsed again.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP)—Ed Lopat, 35-year-old southpaw of New York Yankees, signed his 1953 contract Thursday and promptly participated in a light workout. Lopat, bothered by a sore shoulder much of last season, signed a provisional contract, the first offered by the Yankees in four years.

ROME (AP)—For the first time, an Italian baseball star is flying to the United States for a big-league tryout. Giulio Cesare Glorioso, 21, six-foot 180-pound right-handed pitcher, will leave by air Saturday for a tryout with Cleveland Indians, he announced Thursday night. There is no contract but Cleveland has agreed to send him home if he fails to make the grade.

QUEBEC (CP) — Detroit Red Wings, leaders of the National Hockey League, defeated Quebec Citadelles of the Quebec Junior Hockey Association 8-2 in an exhibition game Thursday night. Tony Leswick and Ted Lindsay paced the Red Wings with two goals apiece. Camille Henri scored both goals for Citadelles. The teams switched defence players for the game.

SCHENCK RESIGNS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Joseph M. Schenck, long a prominent figure in the movie industry, resigned Thursday as executive production head of 20th Century-Fox. A studio announcement said Schenck was "withdrawing because his immense theatre and other interests apart from the company were commanding his entire attention. He is the major owner of the United Artists theatre chain and has many other financial interests."

U.K. Millionaire Evaded Currency Laws, Is Charged

LONDON (Reuters) — Sir Bernard Docker, British industrial millionaire, told a court today that his best win at the gambling tables of Riviera casinos had been around £780 in one night.

He added he and his wife had one rule when they found themselves losing: "We got up and left."

Docker, 56-year-old chairman of a group of automobile and other companies, was identifying himself against charges of conspiring with the crew of his luxury yacht to by-pass British foreign currency laws.

The prosecution claims that on voyages to the south of France the millionaire himself spent franc allowances granted by the treasury to his crew for their personal use.

British travellers abroad are allowed only a limited amount of foreign currency which they are not allowed to pass on to anyone else. The allowance this year is £25.

The defence is that the crew's francs were put into a pool and used to buy them fresh food and comforts.

Docker denied that he had received personally a single franc of the crew's allowances.

Aussies Cannot Afford Olympics Says Labor Man

MELBOURNE (AP)—An Australian labor leader said Thursday he hoped Melbourne would not get the 1956 Olympic games because "the city cannot afford them and it will not be able to run them properly."

"If we have to choose between the games and jobs," Denis Lovegrove, Victorian secretary of the Labor party, told the trades hall council, "I'll take jobs every time."

This view followed an announcement by Premier John Cain of Victoria that he has authorized architects to draw plans for an Olympic swimming pool at Fawkner Park in Melbourne.

The pool will cost $784,000 and may house some other indoor sports, A. W. Coles, chairman of the Olympic games' control committee, said.

Lovegrove earlier had protested site of the olympic pool as "a filch of public lands, a white elephant and a drain on the community."

Melbourne is plagued with other problems in connection with the games. One is a six-month quarantine on all horses from countries outside Australia, Britain and New Zealand before they can enter the country. The United States has protested it will be unable to compete in equestrian events if this ban holds.

Red Embree Quits Baseball

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (AP)—Pitcher Charles (Red) Embree, who put in six full seasons with Cleveland, New York Yankees and St. Louis Browns, has quit baseball.

Embree, not yet 35, informed Charleston Senators of the American Association that he has applied for voluntary retirement from the game, it was learned Thursday.

With his fast ball gone, Embree wound up a 14-year career last season with the cellar-dwelling Senators, compiling a 6-10 record.

Providence Reds Defeat Bisons

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Striking for five goals in the final period, Providence Reds defeated Buffalo Bisons 6-1 Thursday night to remain in the scramble for an American Hockey League play-off berth.

Goalie Jacques Plante's remarkable play in the first two periods kept the Bisons in contention, but he was unable to withstand the Reds' blistering attack in the finale.

Ray Laplante and Ken Smith led the Providence attack with two goals each. Barry Sullivan and Johnny Denis added singles for the winners and Gene Achtymichuk tallied to save Buffalo from a shutout.

Edmonton Star Has Slim Lead In Skate Contest

OTTAWA (CP)—Sonja Currie, 15-year-old Edmonton skater, tonight takes a slim lead into the final stage of competition for the Canadian junior women's figure skating championships.

Miss Currie, Western Canadian Senior women's champion, Thursday glided through the precise routine of the compulsory school figures to take 539.9 points of a possible 650.

Close behind was Ann Johnston, 14, of Toronto's Granite Club, who scored 530 points in the five figures. Yarmila Pachl, 15, of Montreal was third with 517.5 points.

Tonight the 15 competitors show their best in three minutes each of free skating. Points will be added to the score for compulsory figures to decide the title.

The two other junior championships will also be decided tonight—the junior men's singles and junior dances. All senior competitions will be held Saturday, last day of the three-day championships at the Minto Club here.

Miss Pachl, who came to Canada a few years ago from her native Czechoslovakia, was ahead after three of the five compulsory figures selected by the panel of five judges. In the last two figures, however, she was passed by Miss Currie and Miss Johnston. Mildred Harris of the Toronto Skating Club was fourth with 514.1 points.

In the only other competition Thursday, the 12 pairs entered in the junior dances skated in an elimination contest and four couples were chosen for tonight's finals.

They are Claudette Lacaille of Montreal and Jeffery Johnston of London, Ont.; Geraldine Fenton and Glenn Skuce of Oshawa, Ont.; Patty Lou and George Montgomery, brother and sister from Toronto, and Barbara Wegner and Bob Paul, also of Toronto.

Five boys are entered in the junior men's competition starting this morning with compulsory figures and ending tonight with free skating.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Luck is where you find it, and a bridge player does not ask why when a flood of good fortune starts pouring into his lap. Like what happened in the deal shown here:

NORTH
♠ A J 3
♥ 10 4 2
♦ A 3
♣ Q 9 8 7 5

WEST	EAST
♠ K Q 9 5	♠ 10 8 7
♥ 7 6 5	♥ K J 8
♦ Q J 10 8	♦ 7 6 5 2
♣ 6 2	♣ J 10 4

SOUTH
♠ 6 4 2
♥ A Q 9 3
♦ K 9 4
♣ A K 3

There is nothing worth discussing about the bidding. It simply went like this:

South	North
1 H	2 C
2 NT	3 NT

Not the slightest suspicion of a slam. And a grand slam was not even dreamed of as south played it in three no-trump and the opening lead from west was the queen of diamonds. When dummy hand spread it looked as if there might be four losers in the major suits.

A good player who ponders a situation like this thinks of two important factors. One is: Where are chances of saving one or more of these losers? The other is: Where do I need the entries?

Dummy hopped up with diamond ace to win the first trick and led the heart ten. When east covered with the jack, south coppered it with the queen and ran five club tricks, sluffing two south spades.

Another heart lead from dummy was covered by east with the eightspot and won by south with the nine. South now banged out with the ace of hearts and picked up the east king when the suit broke even.

This made the south heart trey a 13er. It was led and on it was sluffed a small dummy spade. By this time west was squeezed. He could not protect both spades and diamonds. So, he held a diamond and K Q of spades.

South led the diamond king that picked up the west diamond, and the diamond nine was good. This with spade ace made all 13 tricks. Give you a reason? Page Lady Luck.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Touring the three-dimension front—

According to the gagsters, Hollywood is suffering from dimension praecox or the 3-Dts. Whatever the ailment, the patient seems to be enjoying it.

The big event of the week was the start of "The Robe," the first feature film to be made with the cinemascope process. Cinemascope is the 20th Century-Fox gadget that projects movies on a huge, wide screen. No glasses needed for this baby.

The big outdoor set was in a slightly confused state. The camera seemed normal enough (it is merely equipped with a trick lens that widens the scene.) But there were three microphone booms instead of one. You see, we have new dimensions in sound as well as sight.

It seemed strange to see actors busy in all parts of the set. The camera takes them all in.

"It's frightening," commented Richard Burton, the star of the picture, "to think that some actor 200 feet from you can be stealing the scene!"

Producer Frank Ross reported the picture would require 11 weeks' shooting, compared to 10 when it was planned for the old-fashioned "flat" screen. "And if we weren't pioneering, it would take about 45 days," he said.

Warners' first 3-D epic, "House of Wax," was unveiled to the press this week. It's in natural vision and requires the glasses.

The film is a thriller, and the third dimension makes the proceedings seem real and life-like. The color is true-to-life. In fact, everything looks as though you're there while it's happening.

Paramount also unveiled its "paravision," another process that creates depth via glasses. The color is also good and the illusion of reality is remarkable.

HABITUAL CRIMINAL

TORONTO (CP)—Frank Kirkland, 35, was convicted Thursday on the first habitual criminal charge in Ontario for other than drugs since the Criminal Code was amended. Judge J. Egerton Lovering sentenced him to two years in penitentiary for pickpocketing and then sentenced him to an indeterminate term for being an habitual criminal. The latter sentence will be reviewed every three years.

Taft Predicts Congress Will Cut Spending

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator Robert Taft (Rep. O.) predicted today Congress will cut deeply into U.S. military spending in an effort to balance the budget.

The Senate Republican leader told reporters he doesn't believe the military can claim exemption from some sharp budget cuts in the fiscal year beginning July 1.

Members of the House of Representatives who heard Defence Secretary Charles E. Wilson testify Tuesday in a private session said they got the impression he believes few substantial reductions can be made in the $46,000,000,000 military program outlined in former president Truman's $78,000,000,000 budget.

Told about this, Taft retorted: "I think the military budget will be cut."

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

FOR SATURDAY, FEB. 28, 1953.

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—Matters to watch today: Excessive speed; last-minute attention to duties; saying "I don't think I can," the supposed easy way out. Avoid these and fare quite well.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus)—Favorable period for most useful activities. Don't over-estimate your ability or returns, and you won't be disappointed.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini)—Know what you are doing, then go ahead sensibly with no rushing. Mechanics, building, mining, industrial interests highly sponsored.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer)—Cheerful attitude for best results. Generous day on whole, especially for hard tasks, matters requiring extra effort, intelligent thinking.

July 24 to August 22—(Leo)—Stars' aspects with you. Doctors, nurses; training children, teaching banking and investment activities can look forward to gains.

August 23 to September 23 (Virgo)—Progress from intelligent effort, well managed affairs can expect better-than good returns. Good time to try new ideas, methods.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra)—Seek your opportunities, they won't come to you. Plan for future advancement. Romance, marriage rate more attention.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio)—Try to improve present work. Your progressive nature a valuable asset, but also can lead into complications.

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius) — Stimulating for personal advantages. Be not afraid to take on responsibilities that conform with your capabilities. Heart interests favored.

December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn)—Fine for industry, manufacturing, live stock activities merchandizing new and essential commodities. Aim to finish routine duties each day.

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius)—May be approached on profitable propositions. Weigh value and cost before collaborating. Meet problems with confidence.

February 21 to March 20 (Pisces)—You'll need pep and fortitude to bridge today's tasks. Give them all the know-how you have and trust in God. That's the best one can do.

YOU BORN TODAY: Intuitive nature, observing, with appreciation of real values; scientific and artistic ability. You also have histrionic talent, business or professional leanings. Should take to one of these fields with marked success. Birthdate of: Michel de Montaigne, great Fr. essayist; Geraldine Farrar, noted singer.

ASTHMA Get welcome relief from the wheezing, gasping struggle for breath caused by Asthma. Take RAZ-MAH, specially made to relieve Asthma misery. Helps you sleep and work in comfort. Don't lose another night's sleep. Take Templeton's RAZ-MAH today. 65c, $1.35 at druggists. 8-38

Rumor Spreads Russia Planning A New Coup

BERLIN (AP)—A rumor sped through Berlin today that the Russians are planning a new coup to regain the political initiative in Germany.

Diplomatic quarters buzzed with talk that the Russians contemplate:

1. Announcement around mid-May that they would withdraw their troops from Germany June 1.

2. Demands from Moscow that Germany be re-united from the Rhine to the Oder-Neisse.

The cocktail circuit which passed the report around came up with one hard fact—diplomats said Moscow has already assigned General Sergei Shtemenko to organize the withdrawal of the 300,000 Red Army troops and assignment of quarters and equipment to the East German "People's Police."

Catch Off Balance

As the diplomats see it, the Russian game would be to catch the Western powers off base by a lightning move. They calculate the Germans, once the Russians have physically left their soil, would be something less than friendly to any Allied troops who remained. At that point, both West and East Germans would be highly susceptible to unity.

Timing of the reported move was viewed in foreign quarters as significant even though West Germany ratifies the European defence treaties next month. They said that the French will not act before the May-June period in question and such a step might be the very monkey wrench the Russians seek in order to keep France from going along with the defence scheme.

$7,000 Damage In Kingston Fire

KINGSTON (CP)—Fire early today gutted the upstairs of a home on the western outskirts of the city, causing $7,000 damage and leaving seven persons temporarily homeless.

The outbreak was discovered by Robert Parslow, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Travers Parslow, owners of the house. Robert roused his parents and helped snatch the remaining four children—ranging in age from eight months to 11 years —from their beds.

Fire chief V. C. Brightman said the flames apparently started from a defective stovepipe.

Given 19 Years

MANILA (AP) — Ang Tui Choc, who shot and killed two crew members in an effort to commandeer a transport plane Dec. 30, was sentenced to 19 years and eight months in prison today for attempted murder of a school girl.

Ang still is charged with murder of the Filipino pilot and purser of a Philippine Air Lines plane which he attempted to divert to Red China.

Bookstore, Established in 1844, Has Not Been Changed Much By 82-Year-Old Man in Charge

By BERTRAND THIBAULT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

QUEBEC (CP)—A Quebec book store which has not changed much since it was established in 1844 is run by a spry 82-year-old man who is apparently unimpressed by high-pressure sales methods.

J. P. Garneau has retained his store's traditions and customs of the last century when there were no clients and clerks as such, but only friends who haggled over books on display.

There is no catalogue for the 40,000 titles—400,000 books—in the store founded by Octave Cremazie, the father of French-Canadian poetry, but the clerks have been around so long that they have every title and author on their finger tips.

Mr. Garneau, who has a prodigious memory, has sold books to cardinals, members of the French Academy and leading international personalities who visited Quebec. The youth who earned $60 a year in 1891 as a clerk in his uncle's wholesale fruit and vegetable business at one time counted Prime Minister St. Laurent as a director of his firm.

Famous Customers

Among customers of international fame who have come to shop in a leisurely fashion Mr. Garneau recalls British Foreign Secretary Eden and the former French foreign minister, Robert Schuman, who bought books on Canada during visits here.

Others include Louis Bertrand and Rene Bazin, late members of the French Academy.

As a delivery clerk Mr. Garneau lacked the benefits of a profit-sharing plan such as he established for his own employees. He entered the book business when his uncle refused to raise his wages to $100 a year.

Starting out in partnership with Samuel Chaperon, who had acquired Cremazie's business earlier, Mr. Garneau became sole owner three years later.

"Librairie Garneau Ltee," a landmark of the Latin quarter in the shadow of Quebec's Notre Dame Basilica, may be the only place in the world where religious books are found in shelves above the "inferno," a small display of books with doubtful moral value.

If a book is suddenly listed on the "index," the Roman Catholic Church's list of banned books, those in stock—no matter how many—are dumped into the store's furnace to help heat the four-storey building.

Comprehensive Stock

Mr. Garneau recalled that when he became sole owner of the store he set out to make it the most complete in town. His first problem was to import books from France.

One day he ordered a few hundred copies of a biography of St. Francis of Assisi. He was sure he could sell them like hot cakes to Roman Catholic orders or lay members of the third order of St. Francis. He did, until a priest walked in waving a copy at arm's length.

It seems that a member of the Sisters of the Good Shepherd had been reading the biography aloud during meals when, all at once, there were blushing faces around the table.

"This book," Mr. Garneau quoted the nuns' chaplain as saying, "is by Paul Sabatier, a Protestant who attacks the church and its dogma."

Mr. Garneau promptly committed to the fire all of Sabatier's books still in stock.

Amusing Incidents

There have been "queer" customers, too. One man, equipped with a foot rule, measured out $400 worth of books to fit perfectly into a book case he had built for his living room.

Another, an old farmer, got down on his knees to plead with a clerk for a copy of "Le Petit Albert," (Little Albert) a book on sorcery used by old time Quebecers. The farmer claimed a treasure was buried on his land and he hoped to find it through black magic methods alleged to be given in the book.

The clerk tried without success to explain the book was not in stock. Finally, he sold the treasure hunter a biography of Albert I, King of the Belgians, and sent him away.

Some years ago, Mr. Garneau established a touring exhibition of books with showings in colleges and seminaries in many points of Quebec province. A salesman then goes around to take up orders.

Mr. Garneau claims fewer novels are sold now than a generation ago. The demand for travel and adventure books is growing while religious books are popular among laymen.

Someone to Love

By Irene Lonnen Ernhart

—She looked at him as he started to work over his new textbook. The light from the student lamp above the small desk in the corner, lit up the handsome lines of his face, the clean sweep of his dark brows. No wonder, she thought, the girls at the University had all been wild about him. The typical football hero, with those tremendously broad shoulders, the thick strong neck, the rough tumble of dark curls on his head.

"This course'll sure be a bore. I can see that," he said suddenly, looking up and tossing the book aside. His face was sullen.

A sharp retort sprang to Jenny's lips, but she choked it back. What wa sthe matter with her; feeling tender one moment and wanting to slap him the next? "Maybe I could help you, Tod. I'll be able to do some of your outside reading and things like that."

He got up and began to pace back and forth restlessly. "D'you think we can stand living in this hencoop for a whole winter?" he said bitterly.

"When we once get used to the smallness, it won't be so bad," she answered calmly.

"You're an incurable optimist, Jenny," he said, without smiling. He paused by the sink and stared out of the diminutive windows at the trailer next door. All evening there had been coming intermittently from their neighbor's dwelling the sound of a baby crying. "All I can say," he added with grim emphasis, "is thank heavens we don't have a squalling infant caged up here with us."

Jenny fastened her eyes upon the magazine she held in her lap and began to turn the pages. "Yes," she murmured, "that would be a tragedy, wouldn't it?" Perhaps she should tell Tod how she had been feeling during the past few weeks, that she had wondered only this morning if perhaps she ought to ask Nina to go to the doctor with her.

The mood he was in now precluded any confidence of that sort.

She'd have to give up her job, before the end of the school year and that would mean money difficulties. Besides that, and worse, Tod didn't want a baby.

Tod had noticed Jenny's irritability. How could he help it? You couldn't say two words to her without she flew off the handle. And he blamed himself rather, for he knew she had been hurt. But after all, he had made all sorts of concessions trying to make up for it. One was moving into this lousy trailer camp.

"I wonder," he said abruptly one evening, "how Ma and Harriet and Joe are getting along? Wonder if they ever found another place to live?"

"Maybe you ought to go look your mother up," Jenny suggested, when he mentioned them. She wondered if Mrs. Duncan would be different if she knew they were going to have a baby. It might change things.

Still she put off telling Tod.

—XII—

October came. The campus across from the trailer camp was wreathed in flaming red and gold. The walks and streets were carpeted with fallen leaves.

On the busiest day of a hectic week, an afternoon when Max was holding a special showing, Jenny fainted in one of the fitting rooms. After the doctor had come and she was revived and rested, Max himself took her home.

"Don't you worry about a thing Jenny,' he told her. "Take the rest of the week off, even two weeks, and come back rested."

"I'll have to see what my own doctor says, Max," Jenny told him, "about coming back to the shop, I mean. You see, I'm going to have a baby."

"Oh no!" The dismay on Max's face made Jenny want to laugh. And when he saw the trailer camp, he was more put out than ever.

"Jenny, you shouldn't have come to a place like this to live! It isn't even sanitary!" He wrinkled his nose at the smell which she no longer noticed. "Nobody could be happy living in a dump like this!"

"But I'm happy, Max," Jenny said gravely, as she prepared to leave the car in front of the small blue trailer with its printed sign reading "The Duncans."

Max regarded her seriously for a moment." Are you, Jenny? It has seemed to me that you've been troubled ever since you married this Tod of yours.'

"Everyone has troubles now and then," Jenny said defensively. "It wasn't pleasant living with his people, but now we're to ourselves, we'll have time to get adjusted. We're going to be happy and we love each other."

"Tod's lucky to have a girl with so much common sense," Max said.

Later, after Max had gone, she fixed herself a cup of tea. She would have to tell Tod tonigh about the baby, and she dreaded it. But it was silly. After all, a baby was something anyone ought to be happy about. She would feel happy.

And then, after all her worry, it turned out she didn't have to tell Tod after all. Nina came knocking on the trailer door before Tod got home. Nina had throught three T-bone steaks, to celebrate the occasion, she said. She was standing by the skillet as they simmered when Tod opened the trailer door and came in. "Hello Nina!" he said. "This is a surprise. Where's Jenny? And what's cooking?"

"Jenny's lying down, per my orders," Nina said, "and steaks are cooking, if you mean 'what's cooking' literally."

"Well what's cooking not literally then,' Tod said, flinging his books down on the daybed.

"You are going to be a proud papa one of these days," Nina said.

"Oh, no." Tod exclaimed. The color ebbed from his face. Jenny had come to the doorway of the tiny bedroom at the other end of him and she wished desperately the trailer. She tried to smile at that Nina wasn't around, because she couldn't seem to think of any of the right words to say.

Tod recovered himself and came and put his arms around her, rather awkwardly. "When did you find out, hon?"

"Several weeks ago."

"But why didn't you tell me?"

"I meant to but I kept putting it off, because it's going to upset our plans quite a bit, and besides I wasn't sure how you'd take it."

Tod's jaw tightened a trifle. His smile was obviously forced.

It was an awkward meal. Nina tried to be sprightly, but only half succeeded. And after it was over, Tod said he believed he'd go for a little walk while they did the dishes. Jenny knew he wanted a chance to think. He was in one of his moods. If Nina hadn't been around they might have been frank with each other, talked things out.

"I shouldn't have come," Nina said ruefully, when Tod had gone.

"It doesn't matter Nina," Jenny said. She wanted to go into the tiny bedroom and fling herself down and give way to tears. But she couldn't let Nina know how disappointed she was.

Tod swung aimlessly along the broad walk through the campus and then down one of the town streets. His mind was blurred with shock.

Nina said Jenny had fainted this afternoon, that she might have to quit working. Jenny's salary paid for groceries and rent. He had enough saved for his tuition, fees, books and so on. They would probably have to sell the car if she couldn't work. There would be a hospital bill, too.

He knew he had been abrupt to pretend to like the idea of a with Jenny, and that his efforts baby had been transparent to her, if not to Nina. That was why he had come out walking. He must talk himself into liking it. For Jenny's sake.

He went into a small snack shop not far from the campus. There was a broken down piano in one corner and a lot of students lounging around talking. He bought some cigarets. The piano began tinkling one of those nostalgic old tunes. Only last year he and Liz had danced to it at one of the fraternity dances.

One of the fellows at the piano disengaged himself from the group suddenly and came over to Tod. ~~Tod~~ looked up at him and then yelled:

"Rick! Ricky Morris! Where on earth did you pop up from?"

• • •

—XIII—

Tod returned very late that night, much later than he had planned. Nina had long since left, and Jenny had gone to bed.

He tiptoed in, hoping she would be asleep. But she wasn't. He went to the bed and kissed her. His hand felt the wetness of the pillow where she had been crying.

He sat on the edge of the bed then, and rubbed his hand up and down her bare arm. "Gosh, Jenny, I'm sorry I didn't get back sooner. It wasn't on account of what you told me tonight —— about the baby, I mean."

"Wasn't it?" Her voice sounded choked and tight.

"Honest it wasn't. I'll admit I was bowled over, but, well, not what you think. I stopped in for a beer and met Rickey Morris, we had a lot to talk about. It got late before I knew it."

He waited for her to ask who Ricky Morris was, but when she didn't he lit a cigaret and presently went on.

"Rick went to the State University. He and I were in the same house, and he was a big shot on the campus, edited the school paper and was president of the Forum. His old man died last summer and his mother wanted him closer to home, so he's finishing here at Markwood and goes home to Centreville weekends. Rick's swell. You'll like him, Jenny. He's strictly class, too."

"Oh." Jenny hadn't heard him sound so enthused about anything in a long time. "Funny you hadn't run into him sooner." She could not stay angry with Tod even when she wanted to.

Before they went to sleep that night he spoke about the baby again. "I'm really glad about it. Jenny now that I've had time to get used to the idea. I hope it's a boy. We'll make a football player out of him. And you're not to worry about the money angle, either. Even if you have to quit work, we'll manage some way. I'll get a job on the side, and—" He broke off, afraid he might be overdoing it.

"Oh, Tod!" She went into his arms and was comforted at last.

It was strange not to go down to the shop every morning. All their days began like Sunday, with Tod dawdling over caffee and the morning paper while Jenny made the bed and tidied things.

They could have sold the car. They didn't really have to have it. But Tod was so proud of it. Then Jenny happened to think of the cottage on the river. Much as it wrenched her heart to sell Pop's shack, still it would bring in some money. They wouldn't be going out there much next summer with the baby, anyway.

Tod went at once to a real estate agent. The cottage brought $500 after the agent's fee was deducted, which Tod thought was a fabulous sum. Jenny knew the money wouldn't go far, but she refused to let herself worry.

Tod brought Rickey Morris home for supper one evening that week. Ricky was tall and rather slender; dark eyes with a humorous glint; a pleasant mouth and straight dark hair that he had to keep brushing back from his forehead. Jenny liked him instantly.

Adventurer Goes On Trial For Theft of Jewels

NICE, France (Reuters)—Dario Sambuco, 24-year-old Italian adventurer, went on trial Thursday on charges of lifting some $300,000 worth of jewels from French Riviera villas and hotels.

Up to 2½ years ago, when he was arrested, the handsome young man specialized in fascinating wealthy hostesses on the Cote d'Azur. They thought the gleam in his eyes was for them. But it was their jewelry he loved, Sambuco testified.

Sambuco worked out of a modest tent in a trailer camp here.

"I had no money," he said. "There was only one way — to steal."

His biggest social and financial coup was during a party in 1950 at the lavish villa Le Roc near Cannes, rented by Mr. and Mrs. Norman Winston of New York. He chatted charmingly with the guests who included Hollywood hostess Elsa Maxwell, Paris fashion designer Madame Schiaparelli, the Prince and Princess de Faucigny and Madame Irene de Heeren, wife of a wealthy Brazilian.

But when the guests drove away, three of them discovered they were minus $50,000 worth of jewelry.

He told the judge he did not pretend to be an expert on jewels.

"I always took the ones that shone the brightest."

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON OF THE WEEK

Religion Is An Adventure

By ROY L. SMITH

The popular religion of Jesus' day was a slavish, complicated affair, consisting of literally thousands of rules, commandments, interpretations, and instructions, as to how to act under every circumstance. Every act of life was classified as to whether it was "right" or "wrong" So intricate had the whole matter become that, even though the Pharisees demanded that everyone obey every law, it was impossible for any man to do it.

Now there was much good hidden away under this maze of regulations, and Jesus recognized the good for what it was. He seems to have been aware, as few modern Christians realize, that this system of laws had produced in the Jewish people the finest and most moral body of citizens to be found in the entire ancient world. But something had to be done to systemize it; the great underlying principles had to be lifted up so that the basic ideas of godliness might not be lost in the innumerable details of regulation. This was exactly the task to which Jesus set himself.

Being and Appearing

One of the first mistakes he attacked was the popular idea that one was good because he put up a good appearance. The Pharisees, in an effort to impress the common people with their piety, dressed themselves in garments which were intended to shout aloud about the holiness of their wearers. They posed and strutted for the purpose of putting up a front; they were always present in the most conspicuous places at religious meetings; and they talked very solemnly as though an unnatural tone of voice made an impression on God, as they hoped it did on the people.

Against all this Jesus protested with all the power at his command. He said it was not the clothes that a man wore which made him acceptable in the sight of God, nor the pious pose, nor the pretense of solemnity. No man becomes great in God's sight because he is able to command adulation from the people.

Serving is True Piety

At one point he cut squarely across the customs of the times, and the concepts of the leaders, by saying that the greatest was not the one who sat in the highest seat, but the one who rendered the most service.

That was revolutionary. It left the self-seekers and the posers, with so little to commend them. It reduced the man who had paid a big price for the front pew to the status of a pauper unless he had served as generously as he had paid. It deflated the conceited leaders who had fed their souls on applause. It took the wind out of the sails of all those who had puffed themselves up with their own importance.

Making Life Hard

There were literally thousands of priests, rabbis, scribes, and Pharisees all of whom seemed to consider it their duty to draw lines of distinction between the right and the wrong, and then demand that all the people regulate their lives according to those distinctions. No one knew quite who was right. Moral judgments were settled by the noise of controversy. In the meantime the plain people became more and more confused.

The Uniform Sunday School Lesson for March 1: "Jesus Condemns False Leader-Ship," Matthews 22:34—34:39.

Jesus undertook to lift the load off the minds and hearts of men by making religion a great adventure of the spirit, in which a man would deal with God like an obedient child dealing with a loving father, and with his neighbor as though he were a brother.

Let any man set out to live that way and every day will become exciting. It will be a sure cure for boredom.

Shah Abandons Abdication Plan Over Mossadegh

Report Says 'Public Demand' Cancels Trip to Europe

LONDON (AP) — Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlevi sought to leave Iran and then cancelled his plans today, Iranian Radio announced. There were hints he was seeking to abdicate because of a dispute with Premier Mohammed Mossadegh.

The 33-year-old shah announced plans for his departure at 5 p.m. (8:30 a.m., EST), but a little later Tehran radio broadcast a palace communique saying he had changed his plan. This communique said he had planned to leave for Europe because of his health but changed his plans because of public demand.

A short time before, the foreign office announced it had received a report from the United States embassy here "dealing with the future of the shah of Iran." A spokesman said he had no direct information of reports that the shah was abdicating.

Tehran dispatches said Ayatullah Kashani, Moslem religious chief and speaker of Parliament, had initiated steps to prevent the shah's leaving the country.

Earlier this week a crisis blew up between Mossadegh and the shah. The aged premier was reported to be accusing the palace of intriguing against his regime. They conferred four hours last Tuesday, however, and sources close to Mossadegh indicated the differences had been patched up. Mossadegh, who had planned a country wide broadcast, abandoned it.

The handsome young shah took over the throne during the Second World War, after his father was forced to abdicate in 1941 by Britain and Russia, who accused him of permitting Nazi intrigues in the country.

Former brother-in-law of King Farouk, who was ousted from the Egyptian throne last July, the shah has found his own throne increasingly uncomfortable since the advent of Mossadegh's National Front and the nationalization of British-owned oil properties in Iran.

His lot has been far from happy for at least two years. Determined to reign as a modern constitutional monarch he attempted to stay aloof from politics, but found himself squeezed between the ultra-nationalist, anti-aristocratic Mossadegh forces and the determined absolute monarchists of the palace.

Governor-General Awed by Loyalty Of North People

OTTAWA (CP)—Rt. Hon. Vincent Massey has come back "outside" with $290 for European flood relief and memories of being stalked by Indians and shamed by boy scouts and girl guides in Canada's north.

One year in office today, the first Canadian-born governor-general came "outside"—to use the northern term — chuckling over some of the things that happened in his trip and still awed by the virtually-untouched world that unfolded before his eyes. He returned to Ottawa by plane Thursday night after visiting Churchill, Man., Yellowknife and Fort Smith in the Northwest Territories.

The Dogrib Indians stalked him intermittently for two days in the booming mining town of Yellowknife before finally working up enough courage to say their piece—they wanted him to express their loyalty to the Queen.

The scouts and guides put him to chuckling shame when he arrived in fur coat and fur hat at Fort Smith and found them waiting in zero weather with their arms bare and in full regalia. He told that story from then on.

In Fort Smith, administrative headquarters of the territories, Mr. Massey was presented a cheque for $275 for European flood relief on behalf of the citizens and another for $15 collected through sales of The Effort, a paper published by the intermediate class in the government school.

Cremated Body Of Woman Pilot Found in Wreck

COURTRIGHT, Ont. (CP)—The cremated body of a woman was found Friday in the burned and still smoking wreckage of a single-seated aircraft, four miles southwest of this village.

The charred body was identified as Mrs. Eugenia Edwards by her husband, Lee S. Edwards of Marine City, Mich.

Officials of the St. Clair county airport in Port Huron told police Mrs. Edwards had been missing since Friday morning when she made a brief stop at the airport with a red Piper Cub.

The small craft, evidently lost in dense fog and snow that blanketed the area later in the day, crashed through small trees and tore down telephone wires when it came down.

Fred Fellows, a telephone lineman, found the burned wreckage of the plane and the almost completely cremated remains of the pilot.

Four Are Rescued

TORONTO (CP) — Four persons were rescued by firemen from second-storey apartments today when a $26,000 fire raced through a group of Yonge street stores in central Toronto.

Firemen said the four, Mrs. J. Blacklock, Mr. and Mrs. R. McDonald and their seven-year-old son John, were uninjured. Cause of the fire was unknown.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO. (CP) — Synopsis: Following an outbreak of cold air from the north temperatures have dropped sharply across the entire province. Early Saturday morning temperatures ranged from 15 to 20 degrees in the lower lakes regions to temperatures well below zero throughout central and northern regions. Sunny skies and cool temperatures will feature today's weather but the outlook for Sunday is a little less settled. No significant snow is expected during the next 24 to 48 hours but a few flurries appear likely for Sunday.

Duplessis Will Be Highest Paid Of All Premiers

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Duplessis of Quebec is the highest paid provincial premier in Canada.

Increases adopted Thursday by the Quebec Legislature for its members boosted his salary to $16,000 including an expense allowance of $4,000. His sessional indemnity is $8,000, bringing his total earnings to $22,000.

Second highest-paid provincial premier is Premier Frost of Ontario who receives $15,300, including $1,300 for expenses.

Prime Minister St. Laurent receives $19,000, including $2,000 for expenses and $2,000 for car allowance. His sessional indemnity brings his total to $23,000.

FIRE OUSTS WORKERS

OTTAWA (CP)—Some 1,000 civil servants evacuated the nine-storey Hunter Building in uptown Ottawa Friday when fire broke out in the sub-basement transformer room.

Big Wheat Yields, Strawberries Grown in N.W.T. Short Season

EDMONTON (CP)—J. A. Gilbey, officer in charge of the federal agriculture department's experimental sub-station at Fort Simpson, Northwest Territories, says far north wheat yields of from 45 to 50 bushels an acre have been obtained on observation tests.

Fort Simpson is about 825 miles north of Edmonton.

Mr. Gilbey said horticultural crops hold a primary interest in work at the Fort Simpson station. The part played by vegetables in raising the standard of living in northern communities is realized, along with the need of building up scientific data.

Mr. Gilbey and his wife are sold on the possibilities of the northland. Mrs. Gilbey was amazed when she first saw the lush wild strawberries and beautiful wild roses the land produces during its average of 86 frost-free days.

There is a pressing need for garden vegetables and potatoes, a need which the Gilbeys say will be stronger when mineral discoveries bring development of the area and a bigger population.

Northern housekeeping has its advantages and disadvantages, Mrs Gilbey said. Her sun porch makes a first-class home freezer in the winter and the house boasts the conveniences of indoor plumbing, electricity and a telephone.

COASTAL TANKER COMPLETE LOSS THROUGH FIRE

Engineer and Five Firefighters Injured

SAINT JOHN, N. B. (CP)—Only a charred hulk remains of the little coastal tanker Mollie G., destroyed Friday in an explosion-punctuated fire at East Saint John. For a time the blaze threatened oil storage tanks and other property along the Courtenay Bay waterfront.

Early today flames still flickered from the 188-ton vessel, owned by Irving Steamships, Ltd, of Saint John, but the wreck was well out in the bay.

Her 22-year-old engineer, Morris MacPhee, Parrsboro, N. S., and five firefighters were injured. One of the firemen, James Mcphee, 26, and the engineer remained in hospital.

Rtturned to their homes after hospital treatment were James Smith, 25, William Kelly, 29, Albert Robertson, 39, and Raymond McAllister, 39, of the Simonds fire department.

The tug Rockswift went to the rescue when an explosion blew Robertson from the tanker's deck. Two members of the tugboat crew also were knocked overboard.

Nearby residents prepared to leave their homes, anticipating more explosions.

The fire started with an explosion in a supercharger on one of the tanker's two diesel engines. It was the second in the harbor area within eight days. The hold of the Norwegian freighter Hoegh clipper was damaged last Friday night.

West Germany Promises to Pay $3,270,000,000

LONDON (AP)—The West German government formally pledged Friday to pay $3,270,000,000 in German debts that have piled up since before Hitler seized power. The money is to be earmarked for governments and investors of 30 countries.

The United States and private U.S. investors will get the biggest share—almost $1,750,000,000—in the settlement under what amounts to a financial peace treaty.

About 300 Canadians will receive about $1,725,000.

West German diplomats first signed a multi-nation pact tackling debts accumulated from the end of the First World War to the end of the Second World War.

Then they signed a series of agreements with Britain, U.S. and France covering debts piling up since Germany's military collapse in 1945.

Girl Is Injured By Exploding Egg

BRANTFORD (CP)—An egg exploded Friday and hit seven-year-old Sandra Welsh smack in the left eye. Sandra, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William B. Welsh, was boiling the egg when she lifted the kettle lid to check it. The kettle was dry, the egg exploded. Doctors said she will be well again within a few days.

NOMINATED MODERATOR

PORT ARTHUR (CP)—Rev. J.A. McMahon of the First Presbyterian Church here has been nominated for the post of next moderator of the general assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Canada.

Union Organizer Promises To Tell More of Sabotage Plans Reds Have for Canada

QUEBEC (CP) — Pat Walsh, who resigned from a number of Communist-front organizations Friday and told of Kremlin-directed orders for wartime sabotage in Canada, promised today to tell more in his self-styled "declaration of war to awaken public opinion."

The 37-year-old Irishman, former organizer of the independent Canadian Woodworkers Union, said he will expose Communist plans for sabotage in unions, the army, shipping, forests and paper mills, smelting plants, Yukon mines and elsewhere.

Order Direct From Kremlin

Walsh said orders to prepare sabotage plans in forests and hydro-electric plants in Canada came directly from Moscow through Bruce Magnuson of Port Arthur. Magnuson visited Russia last year.

Walsh said Magnuson, former leader of the lumber and sawmill workers' section of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America (AFL-CIO), is boss of the Labor-Progressive (Communist) party in the Lakehead area. Magnuson was squeezed out of the lumber and sawmill workers' section during an anti-Red house - cleaning about two years ago.

In Toronto, Tim Buck, national leader of the Labor-Progressive party, termed the sabotage charge a "fabrication."

Never a Member Claim

Buck said Walsh was never a member of the LPP "much less an organizer of the party."

Magnuson in a statement from Port Arthur, said Walsh's statement was "an outrageous lie."

He said he had not talked to or communicated with Walsh since 1951. Magnuson visited Moscow last fall as one of a group of left-wing trade unionists who reported to a Toronto rally in September, 1952, on their trip to Russia. He was expelled from the sawmill workers section last fall.

In the House of Commons Friday night, Justice Minister Garson said statements such as those made by Walsh, are checked as a matter of routine, for security purposes.

War Veteran

Walsh, a veteran of the Second World War with the famed Regiment de la Chaudiere, became the third labor official to resign from Communist-led Canadian unions in recent years.

The others are J. A. (Pat) Sullivan, founder of the Canadian Seamen's Union, who resigned the presidency in '48, and T.G. (Gerry) McManus, who resigned as CSU secretary about 1½ years ago.

Walsh, however, said he had never been a card-carrying party member but was only known as a "fellow-traveller" who held the esteem of Communist leaders in Canada and elsewhere.

Walsh said he had remained as a member of the Communist front groups only to obtain information on their activities, and did so on the insistence of a group of "patriotic" citizens. He did not name the group but said neither the RCMP nor the government was involved.

Wanted Rosenbergs Saved

Walsh said he decided to come out into the open because of the Communist insistence that United States atom spies Julius and Ethel Rosenberg be "saved at all costs."

"Moscow's emissaries want to save the blunderers, otherwise it would become much more difficult to keep and recruit Communist spies.

Walsh said there are experienced saboteurs in almost every section of Canada. He said most of them were trained in the international brigade in Spain, but others were initiated by damaging goods shipped to Chiang Kai-shek.

Walsh said the Quebec padlock law proved a stumbling block to the Communists. "This anti-Communist measure prevents the Communists from becoming a more serious menace in Quebec."

Reds Ask Human Barter Deal Exchanging Briton in Hungary For Girl Guerilla in Malaya

By MILTON MARMOR

LONDON (AP)—World communism today offered a sensational human barter—a British businessman in a Hungarian jail for a Chinese girl guerrilla chieftain facing the gallows in Malaya.

The figures in the offer—authoritatively said to have been made to the British legation in Budapest and to Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden in London—are:

Edgar Sanders, 43-year-old cousin of film star George Sanders, who was sentenced to 13 years in prison on espionage charges at the time of the Vogeler case in February, 1950.

High-Ranking Red

Lee Meng, alias Lee Ten Tai, now 25, accused by British authorities of being one of the highest ranking female Communist terrorists in Malaya. She was seized in the rich tin mining state of Perak in July, 1952, and after two trials was sentenced to be hanged for possessing a hand grenade in violation of Malayan emergency regulations.

This most unusual exchange offer, spreading over two continents, points up markedly the intricate ties of the world Communist movement. It also indicates the high value placed by international communism on the head of the petulant-looking woman jungle leader for whom the Malayan government had posted a reward of $40,000 (U.S.) for her capture.

In Budapest, the Hungarian capital, British Minister Robin Hankey said "I'm sorry but I can't comment nor can I confirm nor deny" the story.

The offer would be the first time since the Malayan fighting began in 1948 that European Communist leaders have openly come to the aid of a Red chief in the rubber-rich British-ruled peninsula.

Has Eden Support

The foreign office maintained official silence in the strange case, but the Daily Express said it learned that Eden supported the proposal while the majority of the cabinet turned it down.

There was no word from the Communist government of Hungary.

Trapper Declares 'Open Season' On Mounted Police

KELOWNA, B.C. (CP) — A 50-year-old trapper who declared an "open season" on the RCMP was holed up in the hills back of this Okanagan valley city Friday as police sought means to bring about his capture without bloodshed. The trapper is said to be a crack shot and expert woodsman.

Constable Sandy Harvey was fired at when he made a "routine call" at the man's cabin at Bear Creek, five miles west of Kelowna. When Harvey announced from 250 yards distance that he was from the police, the man grabbed a rifle and fired two shots which hit the fender of the police car.

Later the trapper posted a "proclamation" in which he declared the RCMP refused to arrest a man who threatened to murder him. The proclamation, posted on a tree near his cabin, said in part:

"As RCMP have refused to arrest . . . although three competent witnesses will swear he tried to murder me on New Year's Eve, it is open season on all Mounties in the area . . .

"Last night marks the 1th. attempt to murder me since New Year's eve. These attempts are instigated by Marijuana peddlers—whose purpose is to make a reefer addict of every Canadian school child in order to overthrow our Canadian democracy and Chirstian religion . . ."

Three neighboring families also were included in the "open season" list.

RCMP denied the man's claim that a marijuana ring was operating from a nearby Indian reserve.

WOMAN DIES IN FIRE

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — An elderly Windsor woman, Mrs. Margaret Thatcher, 75, died on the way to hospital this morning following a fire of undetermined origin in the closet of her bedroom.

ROWE SUGGESTS POSSIBLE DELAY IN ELECTION

Former Cabinet Minister Is Critical of Budget

OTTAWA (CP) — One of the Progressive Conservative opposition's old political hands thinks the Liberal government may be holding more tax cuts up its collective sleeve as a voter come-on for a delayed election.

Hon. Earl Rowe, one-time Conservative cabinet minister and member of Parliament almost continuously since 1925, made the suggestion Friday in the Commons as he criticized Finance Minister Abbott's 1953-54 budget.

The representative of the Ontario constituency of Dufferin - Simcoe said it is obvious the budget isn't as enticing as the pre-election budget of 1949 with its big tax slashes.

Perhaps this was because the government had ideas about delaying the election until next year. In that case, the government then could give the voters a "real gunshot prescription" just before polling time.

Looking directly at the cabinet ministers, Mr. Rowe said they had better "beware of rumbling in the mulberry bushes."

Expires in 1954

"You had better think twice," he said. "You might get one more year in office, one more year in power, if you consider that discretion is a better part of valor and do not go to the country until next year, because your days are numbered when you do go."

Life of the present Parliament does not expire until August, 1954, but it is generally expected the government will call an election this year, probably in October. However, some Liberals are known to prefer an election in the spring of next year.

The parliamentary day produced one formal division in the Commons. It voted 76 to 29 to reject a CCF-sponsored bill for payment by the Canadian wheat board of storage fees to farmers who store grain on their farms. The vote came after Trade Minister Howe opposed the proposal.

Baby Left in Car, Mother Is Charged

BARRIE (CP)—Mrs. Margaret Moreau of Fenwick was charged Friday night with leaving a child unattended and John Heibergar, 24, of Welland with having beer in a public place after police checked on a car in which a one-year-old child had been left. Police said they found the child, plus empty bottles of beer in the car. They waited until the pair returned to the car and then charged the couple.

HIT BY TRUCK, DIES

HANOVER (CP) — Frederick Gateman, 81, died Friday in Hanover Memorial Hospital of injuries received when struck by a truck here Feb. 14. He was hit while trying to cross the intersection of Durham Road and the county line. Samuel Gateman of Kitchener is a brother.

ARMED ROBBERY TERMS

TORONTO (CP)—Wesley Stinson, 27, was sentenced Friday to 15 years on four charges of armed robbery. David Crockett, 25, Stinson's partner on one occasion, was given a total of nine years, seven for armed robbery and two for receiving stolen goods. The two men forced grocer Raymond DuGuay at gunpoint to open his store, then robbed him, shoved him into a car and left him on a country road after a beating.

'Spare the Rod, Spoil the Child' Foreign to Philosphy of Eskimo

REGINA (CP) — That old proverb "spare the rod and spoil the child" doesn't mean a thing to Eskimo parents.

Mrs. A. G. McKinnon, who spent two years in the Arctic, told the annual meeting of the League of Women Voters that Eskimos believe that when a child is born it takes on the spirit of an ancestor. Mrs. MacKinnon, who lived for two years in Pangnirtung, Baffin Island, with her husband, a doctor, said the Eskimo children are a "carefree lot."

Eskimos have their faults "the same as we have faults," she said, but they are a very understanding people.

"Their idea about white people is that they feel they must protect them," she continued.

As an example, Mrs. MacKinnon told of the death of an Eskimo baby in a hospital. The Eskimo survivors shook hands with the nurse and said how sorry they were. They believed the nurse should have the sympathy because she had been with the child at the time of death.

It took Mrs. MacKinnon a while to understand the Eskimos but after two years on Baffin Island she left with tears in her eyes for "love of the country and the natives in it."

Doctor Arrested As Baby-Selling Probe Continues

Allege Toronto Man Gave False Birth Certificate

TORONTO (CP) Detectives, stepping up their investigation into the Toronto baby racket, arrested a doctor Friday and charged him with making a false statement in connection with the birth of a baby boy here Feb. 20.

Dr. Joseph S. Chaikoff of Toronto was charged under the Ontario Vital Statistics Act.

His arrest followed that of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Shinder of Brooklyn, N. Y., who were stopped Wednesday when they attempted to board a plane for New York at Malton airport. They had the baby boy with them.

Out on Bail

They are charged with obtaining a birth certificate by false pretences. All three persons have been released on bail of $2,000 each.

Toronto detectives and United States immigration officials are working together to uncover a baby sale racket. It has been indicated that several more arrests are to be made.

District immigration director Arthur J. Karnuth said at Buffalo there is evidence that several babies have been taken illegally into the U. S. and added that investigation shows that organizations exist through which babies can be bought in Canada by Americans.

Inquiry in New York

In New York, a Brooklyn grand jury, which has been inquiring into baby sales in Kings County for two years, asked Toronto officials for all details of the baby ring.

J. H. Sturdy, Saskatchewan's welfare minister, urged that the problem of illegal traffic in babies be referred to the United Nations. He said he is afraid the racket in Toronto may spread to Saskatchewan.

Friendly Tussle Ended in Death Says Accused

KITCHENER (CP) — Kenneth Wiles, speaking firmly but with tears streaming down his face, testified Friday at his murder trial that when Marie Huras, 17, discovered a sawed-off gun in his car Jan. 27, a friendly tussle over it ended in her death.

Wiles, 21-year-old Kitchener carpenter, is accused of slayng her with a .22-calibre rifle. The girl was found in his car.

In court, he said the girl asked him not to carry "the little gun."

Wiles continued: "I said it's not going to bite you and I shoved it towards her. Then she pushed it back. I don't know whether she was lighting a cigaret or not. I was going in low gear and all of a sudden there was a bang.

"I grabbed Marie and said, 'Marie, are you ok?' I shook her but she would not speak to me.

"I lifted her up and then saw blood on my hand. . . I was going hysterical. I threw the little gun out."

He then stopped a policeman and asked him to help as there had been an accident, he said.

Crown evidence given earlier indicated that Wiles and the girl quarrelled just before the shooting and that Miss Huras had returned Wiles' engagement ring.

Wiles testified that the affair was a joking argument. "She said I had more time for hockey than for her and she gave me the ring back, but it was just a joke."

Accused's sister said she helped her brother write love letters to Marie. It had been previously stated in evidence that Wiles cannot read or write.

Believe Chaplin Will Make Home In Switzerland

VEVEY, Switzerland, (AP) — Comedian Charles Chaplin, facing immigration examination if he attempts to return to the United States, is going through all the motions of making Switzerland his permanent home.

The British-born actor has been living with his family since last December in an 18th-century manor house in the neighboring village of Corsier. Local press reports that the famous screen star purchased the 15-room mansion outright never have been denied.

Chaplain, 63 appears to have no immediate intention of returning to the U.S., where he would have to prove at an immigration service that he is admissible under Amerian alien laws.

Last Monday the justice department in Washington said a stop order against Chaplin's return still stands. The order was issued by the immigration service last year on a directive from former attorney-general James P. McGranery.

McCranery said then that Chaplin's name had been linked with communism and "grave moral charges."

BABY'S BODY BURIED

PORT COLBORNE (CP)—The body of a male newborn infant, its right leg severed, was discovered Friday buried in the sand of the hills of nearby Nickel Beach.

Ontario Indians May be Given Right to Vote

TORONTO (CP)—Ontario Indians will be given the right to vote and allowed to buy liquor under legislation being prepared by the province, it was reported Friday at Queen's Park.

Indians who have served in the armed forces now are entitled to vote. The new enfranchisement will be voluntary. Either individual Indians or tribes may apply for it.

Purchase of liquor is one of the privileges going with enfranchisement, giving Indians full citizenship equality with other Ontario citizens.

Full two weeks earlier than in the normal season, maple syrup was offered on the local produce market Saturday.

The first season's offering was made by Mrs. A. E. Kleinsteuber of West Lake in Prince Edward county, who said that several farmers in her district had tapped and that the sap had run well during the week. A year ago, March 13th saw the first tapping. Sugar bushes are bare of snow in the county, it was stated.

The first offering of syrup sold for $5.50 per gallon, with quart lots bringing $1.50 and pints 75 cents.

Egg prices remained firm with firsts selling at 53 cents and mediums at 50 cents per dozen. Extras were 55 cents per dozen. There was a limited offering of fowl with 50 cents per pound being the general price asked for chicken. A few ducks were quoted at 60 cents.

Pork by the quarter was offered by several vendors at 32 and 36 cents per pound for fronts and hinds. Potatoes held at $2.95 per bag with vegetables at regular prices.

Delicious apples were quoted at $4.50 to $5 per hamper; Spys and McIntosh were $4.50. Basket lots were 90 cents and Snows bringing 75 cents.

To Hold Clinic For Oil Dealers

Imperial Oil Limited dealers in the Belleville area have been invited to attend a newly developed, streamlined presentation covering automotive fuels and engine service, A. D. McLean local Imperial representative has announced. Presented by Ethyl Corp. as the 'Product-Sales Clinic," the program will be conducted at Brighton Town Hall on Monday, March 2, at 8 p.m.

"The clinic will assist Imperial dealers in rendering complete and up-to-date service," Mr. McLean said, "by providnig them with the latest authoritative information on engines, fuels and lubricants."

To assure motorist maximum fuel economy, trouble-free performance and long engine life, the clinic stresses the importance of correct lubrication and proper engine adjustment and service. Dealers will be shown the most frequent causes of mechanical troubles and how to prevent them. The clinic will point out that the majority of driver complaints can be traced to faulty engine adjustment or operation under severe conditions with inadequate maintenance and service.

Aids used by Ethyl engineers in presenting the clinic include giant-size brilliantly colored cutaway working models of vital engine parts, and specially-animated motion pictures. The "black lighting" technique used throughout makes the presentation particularly effective according to Mr. McLean.

In announcing the clinic Mr. McLean added, "An automobile is one of the biggest investments the average person makes. The more a service station dealer knows about its inside workings, the better he is able to protect the motorist's investment. That is why we're glad to sponsor this outstanding Ethyl presentation in Brighton.

One hundred year old Mrs. Ben Oliver, Plainfield, with family Bible which she has read completely through. She never went to school but learned to read and is now reading the scriptures for the second time.

Threading Fine Needle at 100 Poses No Problem For Mrs. Ben Oliver, Plainfield

Threading a fine needle would be a big chore for many people half her age, but it poses no problem for Mrs. Ben Oliver of the Plainfield district who recently celebrated her 100th birthday.

Mrs. Oliver not only threads her own needles, but also takes care of all the family mending and darning chores for her granddaughter, Mrs. Ross Lott, with whom she lives.

Still active and in remarkably good health, ocnsidering her age, Mrs. Oliver wears glasses. But she can get along without them. One day recently after mending for over an hour she put away her kit and was heard to comment, "well for goodness sakes, I forgot to wear my glasses."

Mending is a chore, which the kindly old Plainfield lady thoroughly enjoys doing. In the words of her granddaughter, "she can hardly wait until the wash is dry."

Born Near Holloway

Born in the Holloway district only a few miles from her present home, she has lived all her life in Hastings county and is a firm believer that hard work never hurt anybody. Neither does she believe in allowing pleasures to interfere with work that has to be done.

"When I was a girl I enjoyed dancing and liked to have fun, but I liked to get home in good time," she said. "You can't dance until three or four o'clock in the morning and then expect to get up at daybreak and get the cows from the pasture."

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sylvester Reid who were pioneers of the Holloway district, Mrs. Oliver did not have the advantages of schooling when she was a girl. Thre were no schools near her home at the time.

"I didn't go to school a day in my life, but I learned to read just the same," she says.

Proof is the fact that she has read her family Bible completely through and still takes pleasure in reading the Scripture.

She remembers well when the first United Church was erected at Holloway and recalls how the people of the district walked miles or drove horses to attend Sunday church service.

Two old family Bibles in which births of her brothers and sisters are recorded fail to quite agree on Mrs. Oliver's age. One Bible gives her age as 98, while the other indicates she has now passed her century milestone. She believes the record giving her age as 100 is the correct one.

She comes from a family noted for its longevity. Two sisters, Mrs. Belle Abrams, of Holloway, and Mrs. George Linn, of Coulter, Manitoba, are both in their 80's, while a brother, Peter Reid, also of nearby Holloway, is 82.

Twice Married

Twice married, she has one son David Lockwood, of Sulphide, who is a mere 74. There are eight grandchildren and 20 great grandchildren.

She appreciates the comforts, but doesn't entirely agree with the ways of modern living. She doesn't think girls of today would stand the hardships that were the accepted mode of living when she was young.

Asked if she liked to watch television, the elderly lady replied, "No, I don't bother much with it. Anyway it hurts my eyes."

Lack of Birthdays Not So Fine, No Tomorrow for Bill at Nine

There's no tomorrow.

Why? Well, because, tomorrow is today for at least one youngster in the city.

William Henry Kelly, 53 Front Street north, son of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Kelly, last year celebrated his second birthday, but . . . Bill is nine years old. He is one of that exclusive group born on February 29, the extra day that comes every Leap Year.

According to his mother, Bill isn't too impressed with the singular honor of having a birthday party once every four years when other children have one every year. As a matter of fact, Mrs. Kelly said her son is downright displeased.

"Somehow he simply can't understand it," Mrs. Kelly said. When asked the age of her son, she replied. "He'll be nine tomor . . ., Well, he's celebrating it today, anyway." So this afternoon, Billy Kelly had a few of his friends into his home, cut the cake, and received his gifts just the same as if it really was his birthday.

Born in Belleville on February 29, 1944, the boy attends Holy Rosary School, where he is in grade three.

Booth Radio and Television Observing Ninth Anniversary

A radio repair service that had its beginning as a hobby nearly 20 years ago and which now has grown into Central Ontario's largest radio and television service, is this week observing its ninth anniversary as a business establishment.

Booth Radio and Television, Ltd., 170 Front Street, had its beginning with the late Arthur Booth, who as sergeant with the local police department, was responsible for Belleville having the first police radio communication system in Ontario.

That was back in 1935 when Sgt. Booth, who for many years had been a short wave radio enthusiast, put together a two-way radio communication system for the local police department. It was the first police radio in Ontario and possibly in Canada.

Shortly after the war Sgt. Booth retired from the police department and with his son, Howard, established Booth Radio Service. That is the business which has seen a remarkable growth until now there are 23 persons on the payroll, including seven salesmen and eight service men.

Started on Modest Scale

Art Booth and Son Radio started on a very modest scale in the market weigh scales building, where general repairs of all household appliances were carried out. Then the premises got too small and quarters were acquired in the Warren building.

Two years ago the firm entered the television field and this branch of the business grew with such rapidity that soon larger premises were again needed. It was then that they moved to the present location.

Howard Booth was well versed in television before the firm entered this field. During the war years he was with Research Enterprizes, where radar saw rapid development. A brother George Booth is now sales manager.

Seven different makes of television are handled, as well as a full line of other household appliances.

Their television service department has kept pace with their sales until now they lay claim to having the largest service department in Eastern Ontario. Service manager is Ray McCauley, who has eight service men under him.

Home Servicing

In order that TV owners may not be without the use of their sets, home servicing is carried out wherever possible. In many instances this obviates the necessity of taking the set out of the home to be serviced at the shop. Booth's have three television installation crews.

Servicing of sets has been done for customers as far away as Prescott and they even have installed sets in that centre. Their servicing area ranges from Brockville to Cobourg.

Since moving to their present quarters, space has again become cramped and a separate servicing department at the rear of the Warren building has now been opened. Here all new TV sets are received and checked before being installed in customers' homes.

Testing of new television antennas as they come on the market is a phase of service which is paying dividends for Booth's. As each type antenna is introduced it is thoroughly tested through portable set-ups and customers can be advised of the right antenna for best reception in any particular area.

Feverish Pace Set at Rehearsals For Guild Show

The advance sale of tickets speaks well for the success of the coming presentation of "The Happy Time," a hilarious three-act comedy which is being presented on Wednesday and Thursday, March 11th., and 12th., in the Belleville Collegiate, under the auspices of the Belleville Theatre Guild, Inc.

Cast entirely with members of the local guild, and under the direction of Sydney Rose, rehearsals are going ahead at feverish pace and all will soon be in readiness for "opening night."

The play is a folksy, affectionate comedy about a merry and philosophical French - Canadian family in Ottawa, in the early 20's. It builds steadily to a finish which brings yells of laughter from the audience. The Bonnards are a carefree family. Papa plays the violin and conducts the orchestra in a local theatre. Mama is a Scotch Presbyterian whose notions fo propriety are ignored by all her French relatives. Their son, Bibi, is on the brink of adolescence, and in his case it is indeed a perilous brink. The play is a series of sketches, all of them comic centred around young Bibi's awful business of growing up. The scene in which the father tells his son the facts of life is a fine mixture of tenderness and gentle comedy.

All in all, this newest production of the Belleville Theatre Guild gives promise of being their finest effort yet, and one worthy of the support of everyone.

STRUCK BY AUTO CROSSING HIGHWAY

Rickie Bowler, 6, son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Bowler, R.R. 3, Belleville, escaped with little more than bruises and a shaking up Friday evening when he was struck by a car as he attempted to cross the highway in front of his home. The accident occurred about three miles west of Belleville.

Police said the lad was attempting to cross from the north side of the highway when he ran in front of an eastbound car driven by Archie Closs, 45, Brighton.

The lad was taken to Belleville General Hospital by Bush's ambulance where he was given a check and later allowed to return home. Provincal Constable Toll investigated.

Stories of Famous Hymns

by HORACE B. POWELL

THE HOME OVER THERE

O think of the home over
there,
By the side of the river of light,
Where the saints, all immortal and fair,
Are robed in their garments of white.

O think of the friends over
there,
Who before us the journey
have trod;
Of the songs that they breathe
on the air,
In their home in the palace of God.

My Savior is now over
there,
There my kindred and friends are at rest;
Then away from my sorrow
and care,
Let me fly to the land of the blest.

I'll soon be at home over
there,
For the end of my journey
I see;
Many dear to my heart, over
there,
Are watching and waiting for me.

This hymn of heaven, written by the Rev. De Witt Clinton Huntington, was a favorite in the days when all America was ringing with the songs and sermons of mass evangelism.

Its author was a Vermont clergyman, and Tullius Clinton O'Kane, who supplied its sweet flowing tune, was an Ohio musician. Both men were born in 1830; their birthdays were but a few days apart.

The hymn had a swinging refrain which, sung by hymn-loving audiences in the days of our grandparents, made many a church tremble to its very rafters.

"The Home Over There" belongs in the same collection with such gems as "The End of the Road", "When They Ring the Golden Bells for You and Me", "Someone Shall Enter the Pearly Gate" and the famous "Good Night and Good Morning" song:

"When comes to the weary a blessed release,
When upward we pass to His Kingdom of peace,
When free from the woes that on earth we must bear,
We'll say 'goodnight' here,
but 'good-morning' up
there."

What Is the Baha'i World Faith?

(This article is inserted and paid for by the Belleville Baha'i Group.)

Most of us are aware that there are Baha'is in our community but perhaps many of us wonder what they believe and why their Faith is called a 'World' Faith.

The word 'Baha'i' comes from the name of the founder of the Faith— Baha'u'llah, ("the Glory of God"). Baha'i simply means "a follower of Baha'u'llah."

The Faith of Baha'u'llah is called The Baha'i World Faith chiefly for these three reasons:

First, Baha'is live in more than one hundred and twenty-six countries of the world. Baha'is are people who formerly had different and conflicting religious backgrounds. They were Buddhists, Jews, Muslims, Zoroastrians, Hindus, Protestants, Catholics, or else they had no religion at all. They have found in the Baha'i Faith a basis of unity that makes the competition of sects and denominations seem unimportant to them. Baha'is are people of different economic and social classes. Through a common devotion to God, rich and poor mingle as equals and work together to establish a world order for all men and women. They are people of different national and racial backgrounds. But the Baha'i teachings have given them a higher loyalty—the loyalty to humanity. Baha'is have no "color line" or racial segregation. In this Faith, people of all races find equality with each other because they are equal before God.

Second, the Baha'i Faith develops world-mindedness. Two well-known Baha'i quotations are: "Let your vision be world-embracing, rather than confined to your ownselves." "That one indeed is a man who, today, dedicateth himself to the service of the entire human race."

Third, the Baha'i Faith offers a clear pattern of world order. It does not have any secret mystic doctrines; it does not have any priesthood or professional clergy. People find this a practical, spiritual religion with the mission of uniting the world in one common faith and one order. Baha'u'llah declared that in our time religion must unite people or else it has no social value. He declared that religion must show men how to build a just world. He emphasized that justice is the greatest good in the sight of God. To show men how to achieve this, he outlined a pattern of world order.

Baha'u'llah's vision of a united world begins with each man and woman. Individuals must have high moral standards and a new basis of belief if they are to become citizens of one world.

Baha'is believe in, one God even though men have called Him by different names. God has revealed His Word in each period of history through a chosen individual whom Baha'is call the manifestation of God.' He restates in every age God's purpose and will. His teachings are a revelation from God. Abraham, Moses,Buddha, Zoroaster, Christ and Muhammed were manifestations of God. Each gave men divine teachings to live by. Baha'is believe that true religion is the real basis of civilized life.

Since there is one God, these manifestations of God have each taught the same religious faith. They have developed and adapted it to meet the needs of the people in each period of history. This unfoldment of religion from age to age is called progressive revelation". Baha'u'llah, the founder of the Baha'i Faith is the manifestation of God for our time.

This is the basis of Baha'i belief: one God has given men one Faith through progressive revelations of His Will in each age of history, and Baha'u'llah reveals the Will of God for men and women of the present age. This basic belief enables Baha'is to unite and work together in spite of different religious backgrounds.

The Oneness of Mankind is like a pivot around which all the teachings of Baha'u'llah revolve. This means that men and women of all races are equal in the sight of God and equal in the Baha'i community. People of different races must have equal educational and economic opportunity, equal access to decent living conditions, and equal responsibilities. In the Baha'i view there is no superior race or superior nation.

Baha'u'llah declared that a House of Justice must be established in each community. This body, elected by the people, is to be composed of men and women so qualified that they may be "trustees of the Merciful among men." Each national will have a Secondary or National House of Justice whose members will elect the International House of Justice. This international legislature will make the laws for a federalized world.

Baha'u'llah emphasized certain principles to help bind people together in a united world: Men must seek for truth in spite of custom, prejudice and tradition; Men and women must have equal opportunities, rights and privileges; The nations must choose an international auxiliary language to be used along with the mother tongue; All children must receive a basic education; Men must make a systematic effort to wipe out all those prejudices which divide people; Men must recognize that religion should go hand-in-hand with science; Men must work to abolish extreme wealth and extreme poverty.

This Faith and these challenging ideas originated in Persia (Iran) in 1844. In that year a young Man who called Himself the Bab (or 'Gate') began to teach that God would soon "make manifest" a World Teacher to unite men and women and usher in an age of peace. The Bab attracted so many followers that the Persian government and the Islamic clergy united to kill him, and massacred more than twenty thousand of his followers.

In 1863 Baha'u'llah announced to the few remaining followers of the Bab that he was the chosen manifestation of God for this age. He called upon the world to unite; he said that only in one common faith and one order could the world find an enduring peace. He declared that terrible wars would sweep the face of the earth and destroy the institutions and ideas that keep men from their rightful unity. His teachings are a ringing call to action; they offer hope, courage and vision. Many volumes of his writings are translated into English. Baha'u'llah was not greeted with enthusiasm by the religious leaders of Islam. As his Faith spread, their hatred grew. He was forced into exile to Baghdad, Constantinople, Adrianople, and finally to Akka, Palestine, (fulfilling all Biblical and Koranic prophecy), and died there an exile and a prisoner in 1892.

Baha'u'llah appointed Abdul-Baha, his eldest son, as the interpreter of his teachings. Through him the faith was introduced to Europe and America upon his release from prison in 1908.

In 1921 Abdul-Baha died and left a will naming his eldest grandson, Shoghi Effendi, the first guardian of the Faith and the interpreter of the teachings. Under the guardian's direction the Baha'is throughout the world have adopted an administrative order that is an application of Baha'u'llah's teachings for a world order. Thus Baha'is have begun to practise in their own affairs the social teachings of Baha'u'llah. Local and National Baha'i Spiritual Assemblies are the pattern for the Houses of Justice of tomorrow. Baha'is know from increasing experience that differences of national, race, class and religion can be removed by the uniting power of Baha'u'llah—that men and women can be saved from the hatreds, the pessimism, the corruption and materialism of our age. They know this because they have seen it and experienced it.

The manifestation of God comes to the entire world, therefore the peoples of the world are invited to investigate this Faith and share in this spiritual adventure.

This article is presented by the Belleville members of the Baha'i World Faith because it is their sincere conviction that only through an investigation and understanding of the oneness of religion can World Peace be achieved and the Kingdom of God established upon the earth.

URANIUM IS THE MAGIC WORD

Abracadabra is the potent word for working wonders in the ancient art of legerdemain. In Canadian stock market circles these days its powers of magic have been eclipsed by the single word, uranium. The word itself has created one of the most spectacular trading booms on the Toronto Exchange.

And in the midst of it has come a frenzied uranium rush at North Bay where almost the entire population awoke one morning to find that the backyards, the front lawns and the streets had been staked by enthusiastic professional and amateur prospectors. All this in response to the name of the magic mineral which has become synonymous with the atomic age and its incredible possibilities.

Such a human reaction is a familiar one to experienced stock traders and a great many smaller dabblers "in the market." But it is when the speculative fever spreads far outside the normal clientele of the brokerage offices that we see new trading records, such as those chalked up in recent days.

The whole thing is looked upon with a rather blase eye by the Port Arthur News-Chronicle, long close to the mineral possibilities of the northwestern section of the province. In chiding terms it reminds local speculators that their frenzied interest in the current boom centres upon faraway and unproven ventures in the Northwest Territories while all the time there are things just as "promising" right around them.

"If it is uranium showings the fraternity are after, why go so far away? They can be had right at home in Port Arthur," says the News-Chronicle.

Uranium is reactive to the Geiger counter, a sort of hand battery which sets off a ticking reaction in the presence of radioactive material. Most of the rock formation characteristic of the territory about Port Arthur will set off a Geiger counter on a ticking reaction, says the News-Chronicle. Students at the local Technical Institute could get these reactions without going off the school property, the paper says.

"Remember the sensation over a find north of the Soo, near Batchewana, a few years ago and the organization of the Camray company?" asks the News-Chronicle. "It was based on similar findings. Ground was staked for miles around and many companies went in. It is all quiet now and the hunters and fishermen are free to use the abandoned camps of the neighborhood."

The moral is that a ticking Geiger counter doesn't necessarily mean uranium. But for all that, uranium is still the magic word on the trading floor of the Toronto Mining Exchange. It will probably continue to be an exciting one for some time to come.

POLITICAL MAGNANIMITY IN THE U.S.

In the unaccustomed role of a minority party in the United States the Democrats appear to have become imbued with a remarkable spirit of political magnanimity. As a leader-at-large, Adlai Stevenson continues to use his gifts of common sense and oratory with the same impressive effect which marked his bid for presidential office last fall. His recent public statements have met with unreserved approval in the American press.

This week at a Democratic gathering in Los Angeles he was making new friends when he said: "Upon the new President have been laid great burdens in a time of peril for us all. As he labors under their crushing weight, he will have our goodwill, our good wishes and our prayers . . . I for one hope and pray that we shall be spared the spectacle of Democratic orators taking a leaf from recent history and mouthing nonsense about 'Eisenhower's war.' Rather we stay out of office forever than win it back that way."

Mr. Stevenson, of course, is without a seat in Congress and will have no opportunity of carrying forward this spirit of political unity in practice, but it appears that he is not without congressional support among quite a few party leaders.

In the New York Times magazine this week Senator Paul Douglas, of Illinois, was echoing the new Stevenson line of co-operative opposition when he wrote: "For an opposition to concentrate entirely upon the bad features of a given policy, without also considering the good, and without suggesting a superior substitute, is to fail in its duty".

Specifically, the Senator said: "We Democrats should support the new administration vigorously when we think it is right. Be tolerant and understanding when our opponents make minor mistakes . . . Many decisions have to be made quickly and it is inevitable that some of these should go wrong . . . We Democrats should treat President Eisenhower as we thought the Republicans should have treated our Democratic presidents."

This strange atmosphere of sweetness and light is bound to make an impression in many quarters. But we imagine Harry S. Truman must have read some of these statements with a wry smile. As a veteran and past-master of the "give-em-hell" political school, Mr. Truman could, without any trace of cynicism, entertain some profound doubts about it all.

JUST FOLKS

GETTING HOME

Getting home is best, I say!
Though it's fun to go away,
And there's pleasure in a trip
Overland or on a ship,
Taking you to splendors new,
After all the journey's through,
Makes no difference where you roam,
There's no thrill like getting home.

Maybe with a thumping heart
You look forward to the start,
And you think you'll never get
Quite enough of travel, yet
After you have journeyed far
Where the nation's wonders are,
Soon you'll find you hunger for
All the folks at home once more.

You may laugh and sing and shout
As you wander, in and out,
Meeting new friends everywhere,
Seeing glories here and there,
But these joys at last will pall
And you'll wish above it all
For that happiest moment when
You'll be starting home again.

Trips are glorious things to take,
Journeys everyone should make,
There are places good to be,
Much the eye of man should see,
But no matter where you go,
This you'll surely come to know—
Best things trains can do is when
They get you back home again.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

February 28, 1933.

Mr. Earle Weese entertained the members of the Rednersville softball team, champions of the Ameliasburg league and the present cup holders, at a combined oyster and turkey supper at his spacious home recently. Games were enjoyed following the supper and Mr. Frank Walkom, captain of the team, expressed the thanks of all present to Mr. and Mrs. Weese for their most enjoyable hospitality.

For the first time in many years no building permits were issued by the city engineer for the month of February which is now ending. January of this year was also a non-productive month in the building trade. Permits were not even requested for alterations or the building of a garage during this month.

Miss Minnie Fleming is spending some time with relatives in Rochester, N.Y.

Mr. Allen Lennox of this city, who has been manager of a shoe store in Port Hope for some time, has been transferred to a similar position in Perth.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Satterthwaite of Toronto spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Harry Langabeer, Henry Street.

30 YEARS AGO

February 28, 1923.

The United Empire Loyalist Association at its annual meeting recently in Toronto decided that the 140th anniversary of the settlement of Upper Canada by United Empire Loyalists will be held in Belleville. The invitation to meet here was extended by Mr. W. C. Mikel of this city. The coming of the Loyalists occurred about June 16, 1784.

Over thirty loads of wood were offered for sale on the market Saturday. Green hardwood in cord wood lengths was sold at $10 per cord and stove lengths sold at $6 to $8 per cord. Hay sold at $12 per ton.

Mr. J. C. McCarthy is in Toronto to purchase equipment and fittings for his theatre here which is now in the course of construction.

40 YEARS AGO

February 28, 1913.

Mr. A. Blake Chown, an old Belleville boy who has many friends here, has been promoted to the position of travelling passenger agent for the Grand Trunk Railway at Pittsburgh, Pa. He is now here on a visit to friends.

The regular meeting of the Senior Literary Society in connection with the high school took the form of an old fashioned spelling match and was greatly enjoyed.

Mr. N. Vermilyea, Reeve of Thurlow township, has been elected president of the Good Roads Association of Ontario.

Warden Thompson of Hastings County was presented with a gold-headed cane recently by his associates in the county council.

Mr. Jack Lee of the G.T.R. offices, Montreal, spent the week-end with his parents here.

Mr. Robert Cooke M.P.P. for North Hastings, was in town today en route to Toronto.

50 YEARS AGO

February 28, 1903.

Col. Michael J. Hendrick, U.S. Consul here, left today for New York City where he will visit friends.

The Rev. T. C. Robinson of Stirling preached in the Baptist Church here on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. John McLaren of Toronto, formerly of Belleville, spent yesterday here with friends.

Mr. Jack C. Maclean and Mr. Lou. Yeomans have returned home after taking a course at Stanley Barracks, Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarke T. Raymore of Toronto spent yesterday here with friends.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

NEW OCCASIONS

Every new experience is a lesson in life. If we are thoughtful we will take advantage of each changing hour, day, or year. We will hoard the essence and make it serve a purpose, if not for the moment, then when most needed, like money banked for the emergency.

From one of the books by Erich Maria Remarque — "The Road Back," I believe it was — he said: "There is no such thing as the same day, the same year, or the same experience. Every day we enter a new world — every day we enter we meet new currents of life. Perhaps this is one reason why we so easily forget our friends that we have known and loved."

It is a common experience for each one of us to get wrapped up in the thing at hand, often forgetting to give credit to those who have contributed to our personal happiness or success. New occasions have a magic to them but we should not allow them to divorce us from the contributed richness on the part of others that has meant so much to us.

Every new day or occasion has its meaning for us. New objectives, new roads to travel. New interpretations, and new friends. We should take care that these "new currents of life" do not carry us too far from the source of our happy existence. It is not a wise idea to drop our pilots throughout life, upon entering new ports! What an asset are our friends, when carried along with us through every "current of life,"!

I find myself continually going back in memory to those who have done so much to make life for me worth while. Each new advance in life I look upon as some sort of substance that entered into my inner consciousness along the way. The generosity of a friend, a song, a bit of natural beauty, or an uplifting line from the mind of a great human being, like an engraving in his book. Aliveness is the true success!

Cycling For Sightless

(Windsor Star)

The "bicycle built for two" has a new use in England, and perhaps its best one. A group in the London suburb of Willesden is arranging to have blind persons taken for rides on those bicycles next summer. The guide pedaling in front will follow the course and describe the places of interest they pass.

Thus healthful outdoor exercise can be combined with a virtual sight-seeing tour for the unsighted. This sounds like a fine idea, and one likely to spread. Its progress will be watched.

Universal adoption in Canada, however, is not apparent, or perhaps desirable. Britain has special facilities for cyclists, whereas in Canadian cities they either endanger pedestrians on sidewalks or run their chances in street traffic.

The British plan does not contemplate the exposing of blind cyclists to traffic hazards. Relaxation with security is the objective. We would have difficulty recapturing that double gift, even if we had enough tandem bicycles and knew how to handle them.

Words 'Andor' Semantics

(New York Times)

A United Press dispatch, less than three inches in length, managed to squeeze itself into the lower left-hand corner of the front page of the late editions of this newspaper yesterday, in the process rudely shouldering off page one a paragraph or two of a big story on a strategy conference at the United Nations. This U.P. dispatch did not come from Washington, London, Paris, Rome, Berlin, Belgrade, Moscow, Peiping or Tokyo— any of the world capitals that emanate big news at all hours on short notice. Nor did it deal with war, peace, flood, famine, democracy or dictatorship—any of the big topics that agitate mankind. It came from Atlanta and dealt with semantics.

The dispatch stated that the Georgia House of Representatives had unanimously passed a bill to create a new word "andor" which shall mean "either", "or," "both," "and," "and or or" and "and and or." It is to replace the designation "and/or," and this, according to the bill's sponsor, would "eliminate much confusion over the interpretation of legal documents." That, as semanticists living in Atlanta andor its environs (meaning either or both) might well observe, remains to be seen. Our own guess is that a will, in Georgia, or elsewhere, that left a substantial bequest to, say, Second Cousins Harold andor Wilmer would cause as much confusion in the courts, not to mention dissension between Harold and Wilmer, as a will which left the same bequest to Second Cousins Harold and/or Wilmer.

Perhaps the conclusion to be drawn from this episode is that one cannot reform the English language by removing one slanted line any more than one can create a better world by removing one surface irritation. In language as in life one must get at the roots of the problem and work long and hard to eradicate them. The way to end the confusion caused by "and/or" is not to create a synonym just as confusing but to avoid the word altogether by saying precisely what is meant—"either," "both," "and" or "or." Real solutions are always harder to find than panaceas, but they have the advantage that they work.

Human Progress

(Sherbrooke Record)

We believe, and we think most people will agree with us, that all human progress dates from the time when man first learned to talk and to commune with his fellows, and that if he had not been free to talk and think there would never have been any progress or any civilization.

We little know how much we owe to the fact that men learned to talk before they learned to set up governments.

We are convinced that the greatest threat to our present civilization is the growing power of the state and the willingness of the people to allow it to direct their thoughts and their actions.

No Lack Of Brass

(Hamilton Spectator)

We take it for granted that our neighbors to the south do things in a big way. Still it is something of a shock to read some statistics which Representative Walter Norblad, a Republican from Oregon, has given to a congressional committee and which he says come from an official source: The United States Air Force (which retains Army-style ranks despite its change from khaki into RCAF-style blue) has more colonels than lieutenants and second lieutenants combined; five times as many lieutenants as second lieutenants; one general for every two second lieutenants.

But No Pigs To Market

(Ottawa Journal)

Back in 1948, when Socialist planning was more fashionable than now, the Governments of Britain and Australia embarked hopefully upon a gigantic state-run farming project in the state of Queensland. Some 700,000 acres of land were provided by Australia and a substantial amount of capital was allocated by the British Government to turn the area into a source of food supply for the United Kingdom market.

Unfortunately for the planners this grandiose scheme crashed in failure. Disheartened officials of both governments, meeting in London to wind up the project, confess that mismanagement stifled cattle-raising, that pork production never even got past the experimental stage, and that grain wouldn't grow because of the dry climate. After a loss of $1,250,000 they called it a day.

The moral? Well, one moral at least, or so it may seem to many, is that those "resource development projects" for certain corners of the Commonwealth and Empire will require to have more behind them than rosy optimism of planners before investors take them seriously.

Barley Once Sacred Grain

(Sudbury Star)

A speaker before the Canadian Barley and Oil-Seeds Conference at Winnipeg was reported as saying that barley was a grain that farmers formerly considered as suitable for feeding hogs.

Tut! Tut! Barley has a much more honorable ancestry. It is a grain that has been known and cultivated from remote antiquity. It was the grain that the Egyptians cultivated to make their beer, and in Northern Europe, barley ranks in major importance for making bread.

Principal barley that is cultivated is known as two-rowed, four-rowed and six-rowed. A small variety of the six-rowed barley was the sacred grain of the ancients. Pig feed indeed!

And we need to turn back no further than the last century to read of the barley-carrying sailing vessels of white oak hewn from Ontario forests that plied the Great Lakes.

There are old pioneers in Southern Ontario who still harbor boyhood memories of the long lines of horse-drawn wagons waiting to unload their bulging bags of barley at such ports as Oakville on Lake Ontario.

There is no doubt that the export demand has made barley an important cash crop, but the reputation of this grain has always been much higher than something applicable to food for hogs.

Fresh Lobsters

(Saint John Telegraph-Journal)

Fresh lobsters are shipped from New Brunswick every day right across the continent to California and Mexico. And a refrigeration car leaves St. Andrews every night for Boston, laden with food for the finest tables of New England.

New Brunswick's famed lobster pound at Deer Island, the largest in the world, has helped stabilize an industry which was once entirely seasonable.

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

GLORIOUS NARROW-MINDEDNESS

Are you narrow-minded? Praise the Lord if you are; for believe it or not, the Bible commends narrow-mindedness. Listen to these words of Jesus: "Enter ye by the narrow gate . . . For narrow is the gate, and straightened the way, that leadeth unto life, and few are they that find it" (Matt. 6:13-14).

Salvation comes to the narrow-minded and destruction to the broad-minded. In this same passage, Jesus declares that "broad is the way, that leadeth to destruction, and many are they that enter in thereby."

We live in an age which has positively gone daffy over the glories of broad-mindedness. There is, of course, a narrow-mindedness which refuses to look facts in the face and which sets up individual opinion in a spirit of impish perversity. The narrow-mindedness which Jesus was talking about was the single-minded determination on the part of a good man to do the right thing no matter what is costs and no matter what others think about it. The people who follow the broad highway are going along with the crowd. The higher life always depends on our ability to take ourselves in hand, to discipline our impulses and our passions — say No to ourselves — to buffet our bodies and bring them under subjection.

Don't be afraid of narrow-mindedness. Be afraid only of that broad-mindedness upon which Jesus put the stamp of His disapproval.

Personal Health Talks

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

RABIES NOT A PUBLIC HEALTH PROBLEM

A reader incloses a clipping of a letter which bears the signature of a physician. The letter tells of the death of a man six weeks after he was bitten by a dog. The dog died of rabies four days after biting the man. The man died of rabies six weeks later — in both instances microscopic examination of brain tissue proved the death was from rabies.

If that implies finding Negri bodies in the brain tissue, which many physicians and health officers arbitrarily call "scientific proof" that death was caused by rabies, I beg to remind such physicians and/or health officers that good authorities do not regard Negri bodies as "proof" that the tissue is from animal or man that had rabies. Babes, for instance, believes so-called Negri bodies are merely products of tissue reaction and that they no more identify a specific disease than do leukocytes in the tissues in any suppurative inflammation.

Physicians and health officers who prate about "proof" and "scientific" identification of rabies by the finding of so-called Negri bodies make themselves and Medicine ridiculous. Such self-constituted "authorities" ought to realize that this is the twentieth century and we can no longer establish our opinions or beliefs by merely pronouncing them, no matter how eminent, leading or wellknown we may be.

Adelchi Negri (pronounced na'gre) first described the masses or cells now called Negri bodies in 1903, eight years after the death of the great Louis Pasteur. Keep this chronological detail in mind, lest some irate medical or health "authority" attempt to confuse you about it.

The experience of most of these emotionally excitable physicians and health officers who regard any laboratory worker's finding of "Negri bodies" as scientific proof is insignificant in comparison with the experience of Geo. A. Dennison, M.D., Director of Laboratories, and J. D. Dowling, M.D., Health Officer, respectively, of Jefferson County health department (Birmingham, Alabama, which has been called the "rabies capital of North America"). From 17 years of experience these qualified experts drew some conclusions which make good sense but which will probably irk you small time "authorities" no end:

"In advising (Pasteur) treatment one should carefully weight the possibilities of death or permanent injury from vaccine against the possibilities of death from rabies.

There appears to be little relation between mortality from rabies and the administration of (Pasteur) vaccine.

Rabies is primarily a veterinary problem. Regardless of its prevalence among dogs, it will probably never cause sufficient morbidity among human beings in this region (Birmingham, Alabama) to allow its classification as a public health problem of importance.

If rabies were as easily contracted by man as is commonly supposed, it would in Alabama become one of the leading causes of death. Instead, it continues to be a very rare disease."

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

Western Canada has a thorough, almost a religious respect for water. But in the east, where so many millions of Canadians still dwell amid the rapidly diminishing bounties of a badly beaten-up natural wealth, governments local and provincial are having difficulty arousing the citizenry to the fact that water is the number one element of life itself. Everything living from man to hard oak tree, is mostly water. There must be half a hundred schemes now in hand, in the older parts of Canada, for the conservation of water.

The first thing that strikes you on driving through Kentucky, which is an old and experienced area of this continent, is the amount of pond building that has been and is being done by individual farmers and land owners in the state. Some ponds are no larger than fifty feet across, their built-up retaining banks nothing but earth revetted by stumps. Others are fine large ponds, with concrete dams at the outlets. There are many farming areas in Kentucky where you will see at least one pond per farm during fifty miles of travel.

Not a stream is allowed to bypass a farm. Even if it only a trickle, it is not allowed to get away. I asked one farmer, whose pond was extremely small, what he hoped to gain from having bulldozed an earth bank around what must surely, in midsummer, be a dry mudhole.

"Isn't this ditch bone dry after April?" I enquired.

"Yes," he said. "But every time it rains, it runs high and full with water. For acres and acres around, everything drains into this dry creek bed; and for years I allowed it all to drain away in an hour or two. By building this pond, I have a full pond all fall and winter. It begins to dry up in early summer. But every rainfall, it refills. The main thing is, I am not letting the rainfall on my hundred and fifty acres all wash off, taking topsoil with it, in a matter of minutes, really. I hold it. Some of it leaches into the earth for a wide area around. The rest of it evaporates into the air that covers my farm and its soil, its vegetation, its growth."

Water delayed is not entirely lost.

Soon Know The Worst

(Montreal Gazette)

Mr. Harry S. Truman for more than half a million dollars, is to write his memoirs. No doubt he will be quite outspoken in his opinions of those who have disagreed with him. But anyone who is likely to come under Mr. Truman's attack will at least know what he says.

More sinister are those memoirs written by men in public life but which are not to be published until after the persons mentioned in them are dead. The existence of such memoirs must place the persons concerned under an anxiety that will never be satisfied. They know they must die without ever learning what other people will one day be reading about them.

Mr. Truman's memoirs are not of that kind. He says they are already half-written. Now that he is relieved of duties of the presidency, the second half may be soon completed. Anyone who is wondering what will be said about him will not have long to wait to find out.

Of the two kinds of memoirs, the kind that is published promptly is best. Those who are attacked at least know the worst and perhaps may have the chance to answer back. But the other kind of memoirs are like a delayed bomb. Or, as Benjamin Disraeli would have said, they "add a new terror to death."

Canadian Meat Consumers Likely to Get Cheaper Beef As Embargo on Cattle Lifted

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian consumers may get slightly cheaper beef through Sunday's opening of the long-closed United States market to Canadian meat and livestock, in the view of some federal experts.

Ending of a U. S. embargo based on Canada's 1952 foot-and-mouth disease outbreak in cattle—which would normally be regarded as tending to send up Canadian prices—was considered as possibly having the reverse effect because of special circumstances.

With Canada planning to reciprocate by eliminating—with some exceptions—import restrictions of her own, Canadian meat prices once again will be free to fluctuate with American prices.

U. S. Prices Slip

And U. S. prices have slipped to a few cents below Canadian. Even with a surplus here, Canadian packers could dip into the U. S. market for some beef unless Canadian producers trim their charges. A similar situation occurred in January, 1952, when Canadian packers imported about 3,000 cattle.

Apart from that possibility, the Canadian trade generally is happy about the reopening of the huge U. S. market. It was shut off abruptly by an embargo Feb. 25, 1952, with the announcement of the discovery of foot-and-mouth disease among cattle in a small area of south Saskatchewan.

This first Canadian outbreak of the feared disease—which destroys animals for market and spreads like wildfire—apparently had originated on a Saskatchewan farm Nov. 26, 1951.

Tight Areas

Despite its contagiousness, the disease was contained in a tight area around Regina. It affected fewer than 2,000 animals.

Animals and poultry in the area were slaughtered and buried. Farms were disinfected. By last Aug. 19, the government was able to declare Canada free of foot-and-mouth.

It then stood back for the passage of a waiting period before the reopening of the U.S. border.

Normally, the U. S. market absorbs about 400,000 or 500,000 head of Canadian cattle a year, either alive or as meat. Sunday's move will free a $120,000,000-a-year meat and livestock trade covering about 20 per cent of Canda's meat production. The U. S. is the biggest market for Canadiah cattle.

The short-lived outbreak brought chaos to Canada's meat-marketing business.

Shortly after the U. S. embargoed imports from Canada some provinces erected import barriers of their own.

Federal Aid

The federal government dipped into its treasury for millions of dollars to prop up meat prices. It undertook an expensive pork canning program, buying about 150,000,000 pounds of pork, and canning about 100,000,000 pounds. Warehouses still are filled with some 70,000,000 or 80,000,000 cans of surplus pork, in addition to millions of pounds of pork cuts.

In addition, the government purchased about 82,00,000 pounds of beef, shipping some 72,000,000 pounds to Britain, accepting payment in lower-priced frozen New Zealand beef. About 10,000,000 pounds is still in storage.

Canada, officials said, took a a heavy beating on the deal.

It added to the economic cost of the disease. The total cost probably never will be known. However, some economists have estimated it may range between $50,000,000 and $100,000,000.

The beef and pork price support programs have cost about $42,000,000 for 1952—more than four times the total of all federal support programs since legislation was enacted in 1944.

Removed This Week

The beef price support was removed Feb. 23. But pork price support—at 23 cents a pound basis Toronto—still is continuing. Eventually, the beef and pork program may run to perhaps $50,000,000 or $60,000,000.

Now the big problem to the farmer is: what will he get for his beef in the U. S.?

The outlook is not too good. Good steers were selling in Chicago last week for about 20 cents a pound wholesale; they were about 22 cents a pound at Toronto.

Dressed commercial beef was selling at between 36 and 43 cents a pound in Canada; 33 cents in the U. S.

And the Canadian dollar was against the Canadian exporter—it was at a premium of about two cents.

Possible Drop

Federal authorities believe the Canadian exporter will have to come down a few cents a pound if he wants to compete with the American producer.

American prices may increase later. Canadian producers have been cautioned against heavy shipments when the border opens. Heavy shipments now may leave them short at a time when they could make more money.

While some Canadian housewives may end up eating American beef, they won't be eating American pork.

Canada still will maintain controls on imports of American live hogs and raw pork, through an embargo imposed last August.

Many American porkers have been hit by vesicular exanthema, a disease somewhat similar though not as damaging as foot-and-mouth disease. It affects only swine.

This embargo will remain until the American infection is cleaned up.

Carman Lowther, with the Royal Bank of Canada for 17 years, recently vacated the position of assistant manager at the local branch to enter the insurance field. He joined the sales staff of the Mutual Life of Canada, located on Bridge Street East.

Mr. Lowther, a resident of Belleville for the past seven years, served in the R.C.A.F. as a pilot-instructor during the war. Born in Summerside, P.E.I., he took his formal education there and on leaving school, entered the bank at Summerside.

While stationed at Trenton during the war, he met Ruth Oliphant, prominent electrician of phant, prominent electrition of this city. They were later married and after the war settled in this city. They have two children, a boy and a girl.

UNION ORGANIZER

He said in Quebec City, prior to the Padlock Law, there were meetings in St. Roch and St. Sauveur parishes, attended by many thousand workers, where prominent Montreal Communists spoke.

He said these speakers ridiculed religious beliefs and Canadian politics.

Walsh praised Premier Duplessis for adoption of the Padlock Law. He said propaganda is hardly put into circulation in Quebec before it is seized.

Walsh said the woodworkers union was founded in 1950. He said an office was opened in Quebec City and it soon became the front for a number of Communist organizations.

He said a convention was "cooked up" at which a Communist executive was elected and a short time later Marc Leclerc, president of the Lumber and Sawmill Workers' Union, taught them how to "invade" lumber camps and spread discontent among the workers.

"Using 'Stalin' methods we soon started strikes in different camps. We aroused workers, already dissatisfied with working conditions, and were able to get 5,000 members for the union."

BURLESQUE HOUSE SHUTS

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal's last burlesque theatre closed Friday. The city, as part of a street-widening program, took possession of the Roxy Theatre on a run-down section of St. Lawrence Boulevard after a warrant, held up by lengthy delaying court actions, was served.

Four Members Of RCAF Held For Car Theft

For young RCAF personnel stationed at Trenton are being held by Belleville police for car theft following the disappearance of a local car which was later wrecked in an after midnight police chase west of Trenton.

Apprehended by Brighton Provincial Police after the car, which they were chasing failed to make a curve four miles west of Trenton on No. 2 Highway, were: Harold W. Kerry, 20; Christopher Christofferson, 21; Robert Stevenson, 21, and Edward Gay.

Gay was pinned under the wreckage of the car and was freed only after passing transport drivers assisted to lift the vehicle off. He was taken to the Trenton Memorial Hospital, where he was kept under guard. The other three men were lodged in the Trenton jail and were brought to Belleville this morning.

Brighton Provincial Police Constables H. R. Cook and L. H. Stinson received the radio report of the stolen car as they were patrolling. They spotted the wanted car as it passed them and wheeling their police cruiser, turned and gave chase. They were right on the tail of the other car when it failed to make a turn on the highway, ripped out two telephone poles and turned over in the ditch after proceeding along the shoulder for 100 yards.

Max Wodzak, Gordon Street, Belleville, said he had parked his car outside a Front St. restaurant and when he emerged some time after midnight the car was gone. He notified police, who broadcast the alarm.

Senator Fraser Life Member

TRENTON — Senator William A. Fraser was presented with a life membership to the St. Peter's School Parent-Teachers Association here last night with president of the society Jack O'Neill making the presentation.

The Senator addressed the gathering on the subject of "Canadian Citizenship" saying that citizenship followed religion and freedom of thought as the greatest privilege Canadians have today. He placed the responsibility of instilling citizenship in children on the mothers and fathers and sugegsted they look in a mirror every day and say to themselves, "Am I good enough to bring up this boy or girl?"

He advised the parents to encourage children to follow the teachings of the church.

Senator Fraser asked his listeners to put everything into building a good Canada. "We are an invigorating people who are raising the status of English people throughout the world," he said.

Father Carty, making a few remarks, said the Senator was a citizen of very high calibre. Hubert Campbell, in introducing the guest speaker, said the Senator was one Trentonian who had made good and ranked with the great men of the country.

Councilman James MacDonald presided as master of ceremonies.

The parents looked through the new part of the school recently completed and opened to the pupils.

Police are looking for a Trenton girl missing from her home since yesterday.

Description given for Marjorie Loveless, 15, who lives at 26 Quinte street is as follows:

Dark complexion, slim build, five feet six inches tall, wearing a corduroy "shorty" coat and carrying a brown handbag.

It is understood she may be somewhere in the Belleville area.

Frankford Sport

FRANKFORD.—Sixardee evened things up in the first round of the Trent Valley league Southern Division playoffs, as they edged Frankford 6-4 last Thursday night in the Frankford Lions' Club Arena. The soft ice made it a very ragged game.

Sixardee outscored Frankford in the first period, Lomax getting the first for the Airmen, from Schmidt and Brill. Meloche scored from Attrill and Attrill got two, one from Chevis, Schmidt getting the other assist. Carey scored from Stevens for Frankford, and then Hood tallied unassisted.

Carey scored the only goal of the second period, Hood and Wright siding on it. Schmidt scored from Meloche and Attrill for 6RD, and Meloche got the final one for the Airmen from Attrill. Rankin scored Frankford's only goal of the period from Watson.

In a desperate effort to gain a tie, Frankford pulled Foshay from the net in the last minute of play, trailing by one goal. The strategy backfired, however, as Meloche fired one into the open net.

The boys from 6RD were well worthy of the win. Next game will probably be Monday night, depending on the condition of the ice.

Sixardee—Goal, McGinnis; defence, Schmidt, Daigle; centre, Attrill; wings, Meloche, Hipson; alternates: Brill, Chevis, Lomax, Cowick.

Frankford— Goal, Foshay; defence, Bone, Wright; centre, Stevens; wings, Carey, Moran; alternates: Graham, Watson, Hood, Courtney, Farmer, Cooke, Rankin, Reid.

Referee, J. Aquino; linesman, M. Carson.

"A" BOWLING LEAGUE

Frankford Bowling league has only three nights remaining in the schedule, but two of the positions are virtually settled, first and eighth. Roy Scott's Outlaws need only win two games, or have the second place team lose two or a combination of the two, to sew up first place. Resting in the cellar for many weeks, Preston Chase's Jets must win every game, while the seventh-place team loses every game to get out of last place. One loss for the Jets, or one win for Curley's Crew will do it.

In last week's bowling, Ray Scott's Outlaws won two games, but failed to take high total from Karl Austin's Curley's Crew. A short-handed Racketeers team, without the help of their captain and league's highest average, Ross Huffman, managed to take one game from Gib Gilmour's Gib's Gang. They were sparked to their one win by Doug Montgomery's 355 game, the second highest in the Frankford league for all time, and the highest for the current season. Lloyd Hanna's Robbers seem to have snapped their losing streak, as they took five from Bob Arbuckle's Hopefulate. The Robbers got a lift in the second game on Ray "Corky" Lohnes' 316 game. In the other series, Preston Chase's Jets took five from Jack Farley's Jokers, although the Joker's captain came through with a fine 348 game.

Standing:

Outlaws 115; Gib's Gang 96; Racketeers 95; Hopefulate 86; Jack's Jokers 86; Robbers 82; Curley's Crew 79; Jets 59.

Immediately following the bowling, the league executive met at the home of the secretary, Wayne Arbuckle in Batawa, to discuss plans for the playoffs, and for the bowling banquet. The playoffs are to continue in the same manner as last year, namely 1-5; 2-6; 3-7; 4-8, for the first round.

Teams were drawn from a hat to elect a decoration committee. The Hopefulate and Gib's Gang will represent Division "A" and the Kareless Kids and Screwballs will be on the committee from Division "B". Francis Murphy is chairman.

Cleanup Committee is the Jets from "A" and Aristocrats from "B". Program chairman is Ed. Loucks.

REDS ASK HUMAN

Sanders was tried on spy charges by a Communist Hungarian court alongside U.S. citizen Robert Vogeler. Both were employees of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company. Vogeler was released in April 1951.

The woman Hungary wants in exchange for Sanders now is in jail at Ipoh, Malaya.

The Privy Council recently refused Lee Meng permission to appeal her sentence. The sources said Hungary's offer followed immediately.

These sources pointed out that Lee Meng has no connection with Hungary and the offer to free Sanders in exchange for the life of the jungle girl held responsible for the deaths of nine Britons obviously stems from Moscow.

The regular meeting of the Quinte Stamp Club was held on Thursday evening at Kiwanis Centre. There were twenty in attendance. President Ernie Pugh occupied the chair.

Many items of club business were brought before the meeting. The possibility of a public exhibition was discussed at length and was laid over for further study and obtaining of information by the executive.

Following the business portion of the meeting, a contest on the style of a spelling bee was participated in by those present. This was well contested. The final two contestants in the senior group were Martin Hamerlink, and Alfred Arthur, with the former emerging as the winner.

The junior prize was awarded to Mary Bristow.

The next meeting of the club will be held in March.

Shapely Italian Brunette Making Long Leap Toward United States Film Stardom

By ALLEN JACKS

ROME (AP)—A shapely Italian brunette with an improbable name seems to be making the long leap toward U. S. film stardom with success.

The meteoric rise of Gina Lollobrigida (accent on the "bridge") as a European star has left even the bosomy Italian girl somewhat incredulous.

Miss Lollobrigida — that's her real name—is a five-foot, four-inch bundle of ambition with an hour-glass figure who has packed European movie houses with almost every picture she has made. She just won a poll as Europe's top feminine draw.

There are differences of opinion about the reasons for Gina's tremendous popularity, but most experts on the subject credit her looks, especially her 36-inch bust and a trim 22-inch waist.

Gina currently is making her first American film, teamed with Errol Flynn. When she finishes she will start immediately on another, directed by John Huston, with Humphrey Bogart and Jennifer Jones as co-stars.

Flynn himself is putting up 50 per cent of the capital for his film with the 24-year-old Italian beauty which will be released this fall.

Gina makes no effort to hide the delight with which she would receive a good Hollywood offer but in the absence of same she is doing quite well right here.

She will receive 30,000,000 lire for her eight weeks work with Flynn. That's $48,000. She will do four or five other pictures this year for a total of $250,000 to $300,000.

On this side of the Atlantic, where the tax collectors don't take their work too seriously, that's a bigger fortune than even Hollywood can offer.

Miss Lollobrigida literally fell into the gold mine.

Italian director Mario Costa saw her at school in Rome one day and offered her a small part in a picture. That was in 1946, when Gina was 18.

With her Italian reputation established, she was teamed with French star Gerard Philippe and went after the franc. Their picture, "Fanfan la Tulipe," took France by storm.

The European version of a western, in an 18th century french setting, the film was full of action and Lollobrigida in low-necked gowns.

Now comes the assault on the dollar in a 15th century costume piece with castles, sword play, horses and lots of Lollobrigida in low-necked gowns.

Gina learned French passages well for "Fanfan la Tulipe." She is doing the same with English for her American debut.

Not only is Gina's income tremendous by European standards, but she has a very practical method of keeping it in the family. Her husband, Miko Skofic, a Yugoslav who escaped a German concentration camp to become a doctor in Italy, manages her affairs.

Clothes-Renting Firms See Big Trade in Coronation Year

By MURIEL NARRAWAY

Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—Coronation Year means big business for Britain's clothes-renting firms.

In discreet premises in London's West End, peers and peeresses are fitted with robe and coronet at a charge of £25. Full-dress uniforms and evening dresses for wear under the robes can also be hired for eight guineas and under.

If a peeress wishes a gold-and-satin gown in the latest style and material, for wear in the Abbey, eight guineas covers a model that has not been worn before. Prices drop with the number of times a dress has been worn. All clothes, however, require a deposit of £20, refundable when garments are returned unharmed.

Can't Meet Demand

"We have already had requests for more robes than we have in stock," said a representative of one of the best-known hiring firms (Moss Bros.) The number of robes already hired was not given.

This firm is finding it a bumper year for hire trade from royal banquet crinolines to the ordinary evening dresses hired at £2, favorite choice of working girls for that special date.

Many women whose families are traceable in Debrett's Peerage are keeping coronation costs down by hiring clothes, in advance, for the numerous functions that will be part of a glittering "season."

Most society women consider a London season requires at least six evening dresses of notable design. Stylish numbers costing £40 to £60 each and hired for six to seven guineas mean a fair saving on a dress bill that would otherwise mount to around £300-£600 if the dresses are couture models.

Overseas Customers

Clothes-hire companies, as they are called in Britain, say that many orders have come from the provinces and overseas, including Canada. Popular demand from overseas is a grey topper and striped pants for wear at Buckingham Palace garden parties, race meetings at Ascot and the Derby course at Epsom.

For such events women are not so lucky. Afternoon dresses are not for hire; trends change too quickly. But each big race meeting means a last-minute rush to hire fur capes and stoles as a guard against the generally inclement weather.

Overseas requests include evening suits—especially white tie and tails. Current requests show increasing popularity for the old-fashioned evening cape with its red or white lining.

Women's Activities

ZION W.A.

Zion Women's Association held its February meeting recently at the home of the president, Mrs. George Fox, in the usual style of a pot-luck dinner and quilting.

The meeting opened with the motto, theme song and prayer.

Mrs. K. J. Crawford was in charge of the devotional period.

During the business period, it was decided to have a quilting and pot-luck dinner at the home of Mrs. William Coe, on March 4.

The regular March meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Ford Chambers.

Kinettes Provide Birthday Supper For White Cane Club

The third anniversary of the white cane club was held on Wednesday evening at the Y.M.C.A., in the form of a birthday party. Members of the Friendship Club of Kingston, the Advisory Board and representatives of service clubs of Belleville were in attendance.

Guest speakers were, Mr. Goodwin, manager of the Bank of Montreal, Mr. Fuke, manager of the Bank of Commerce, Mr. Wishart, chairman of the Advisory Board, and Mr. Timmins, field secretary of Kingston.

The topic of the different speakers was the building project for the blind, which is to be built at Kingston.

A vote of thanks was expressed by each one for the co-operation of the people of Belleville, during the blitz campaign that was held recently.

A special vote of thanks was given to the boys and girls of the Belleville Collegiate and Vocational School for their splendid efforts.

Miss Beverly Buck favored with solo selections also Mr. Robert Burke, after which a game was played, winners being awarded prizes.

The ladies of the Kinette Club provided a splendid birthday supper and a cake which was nicely decorated was placed before the president and best wishes extended to the club by Mrs. Ted Follwell, president of the Kinettes.

A vote of thanks was tendered by Mr. Clarence Morris to those who had made the evening another fine success, one to be remembered.

'Opportunity' Shop To Hold Spring Opening

With the coming of spring my lady's thoughts turn to clothes, whether lightly or no, is the question, but one thing is certain, they turn, some to French salons, and some to local merchants, while others again turn to the "Opportunity Shop", in the market building.

The women of the Hospital Auxiliary are busily preparing for the Spring opening next Saturday, when a most interesting stock of merchandise will be on display, coats, dresses, and all the necessary wardrobe articles suitable for the entire family.

In the season just passed, the Opportunity shop made $1,000, which was used to purchase equipment for the hospital. Perhaps you know of a baby who owes its life to the humidcrib, or an adult whose life was saved by an oxygen tent. In purchasing here, you help not only yourself, financially, but add to the comfort of the sick in the local hospital.

Ontario School for The Deaf Displays Interesting Art Exhibit

An interesting display of school art, by the students of the Ontario School for the Deaf, is on exhibition in the lounge of the McCarthy Theatre at the present time and will continue to be shown for several more days.

This exhibition demonstrates the versatility of the young artists, both by paper work, India ink, crayon, paste patterns, special paints, in fingerpainting and the many uses to which the latter may be put.

The India ink work, which borders somewhat on the modernistic type, showing fish, flags and Indian designs, is remarkably well executed. The paste patterns, used for book covers, are colorful and full of life, in shades of green, reds and orange browns, with blends of scarlets and yellows, pale blues and pink, crisp and clear lovely bits of color.

The street scene in winter, the school bus, the robins, one in flight, one with the "early worm," were well drawn; the paper birds with glorious tails, especially the gorgeous parrot; pink fish, and inky squib, not to mention the elephant, showed appreciation of form and imagination.

Musical Notes

The designs to music were unique, the result of vibration of a musical note, producing a sense of color or colors, depending on whether the note is high or low in vibration frequency, showing whorls and curves.

The oil designs, done by drops of specially treated oil paints on water, through which the article to be painted is immersed, were vividly interesting, showing shades of wine, reds, greens, blues, yellow, all different but each color remaining distinct and clear.

Finger painting is one of the favorite student past times and those shown wer beautifully crisp and full of graceful sworls; one in greens resembling fern work.

Picture Making

The picture making was quite interesting also, showing farm scenes with barns, home, evergreen trees; another of a wild duck, nicely colored; while others showed wild ducks in flight with the hunter concealed behind the "blind." A tree with two squirrels was well drawn, and lent to the imagination, whether there was a dispute as to the ownership of the snug retreat, or just an airing.

Other scenes depicted the lumbermen in the act of sawing down a tree: so real one could almost hear the familiar, "Timber!"

The paper cutting, clever scissor work, showed appreciation of form, as well as color, and careful adherence to the subject in hand.

Fine Leather Work

In the alcove were shown samples of leather work, all beautifully executed; these included change and coin purses, billfolds and wallets, belts made of lines of fishes, some brown, some dark, and lines of Peter rabbits, as well as some purses in light blue mottled effect. On the mantel piece were also displayed note books showing the fine covers done by painting and finger work.

Aside from the students' work which deserves the highest praise, for its neatness, beauty of clear color, and carefulness of design, were some new arrivals by the local artists; "Winding Stream", an autumn idyll showing the golden willows, and the distant purple hills; (Moult); "Storm Clouds", depicting the farmer gathering the harvest of wheat, the anxious look of the horse that is seen, and the swaying stooks of grain and the red silo beside the barn.

"The Hamlet", nestling in a cuplike hollow of the down, the church with its nestling houses, an appealing bit of color.

Much credit is due the art teacher or teachers of the Ontario School for the Deaf, for an attractive and interesting exhibition, as well as to the little artists themselves who demonstrate the liveliness of their artistic abilities.

SISTERS ALL

By Jean Love Galloway

If you leave getting your 1953 car licence plates until the last minute, it's always an ordeal to struggle through the long line-up. But even a worse struggle than this, is the annual struggle to tear the old plates off . . . Strange thing how the nuts and bolts supposed to hold a car together gradually loosen with vibration and the elements when the nuts and bolts on licence plates tighten up, rust and weld themselves together as if unto death do us part.

More knuckles will be skinned and more wrenches flung down in hot temper this week-end than at any time throughout the year. Few people know that service stations will come to the rescue of motorists by attaching licence plates for a very small charge.

For those men who are not known to be the most patient individuals, it is best that they head in to the nearest service station, or better still, that their wives take the car and licence plates in for them.

We can bet that home will be a much happier place if professional help is enlisted in this painful ordeal.

Money to Waste

Around about now, luxuriously printed annual reports of industries and insurance companies will be coming in the mails to impress stock and policy holders with the stability and prosperity of such firms.

These fancy sheets do not impress us. They make us hot under the collar. They appear to be a costly waste of money.

Why don't the big industries economize by sending around a brief mimeographed financial report? A statement could be contained in it that all those wishing to see the complete report could have this on application to the company. Such a procedure would impress us much more as to the firm's judgment in economical administration and common sense.

Spare Stamps

Now that cheques no longer require excise stamps, this is the first time we are to be found with a couple of strips of them just bought and resting in a glass jar at the back of the writing desk.

They say that refunds by cheque will be made by the government department concerned, if you mail your stamps in with a covering letter. This would be to the Department of National Revenue, Ottawa.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

A woman. . .her gloves. . .and her cigaret

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have a black velvet halter-dress which is definitely very dressy. To complete my costume I wear long black gloves past the elbow. When I smoke, should I remove the gloves and keep them off, or only for the time during which I am smoking? Or would you recommend that I wear fingerless gloves? Cigaret holders are, I think, too obvious!—D.G L.

I suggest you take off your right glove, keeping it off while you smoke your cigaret, and then recapture the harmony of your dramatic costume by putting on your glove until you smoke your next cigaret!

Note 1: I wouldn't recommend fingerless gloves; to me they look like sawed-off arm-covers, haven't any of the smart style of gloves.

Note 2: I agree with you about cigaret holders for women, who look as if they are trying to save their gloves or trying to save the effort of taking off their gloves.

It is not good form or good taste to give weight of baby on birth-announcements

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Regarding your reply to the question from "Mother-to-be" about birth-announcement cards, I am in complete agreement with you about sending such cards only to relatives and close friends. But why do you consider the cards with a space for "Weight" bad form? I cannot recall seeing a birth-announcement card without a space for weight, and have had occasion to buy them for the past few years. My friends are always curious about the new baby's weight . . . and I am, too. So why is it bad form, or, as you really said, "not the best form?"

2. Incidentally, someone recently told me it is bad form to send birth-announcement cards for other than your first baby. I thing this is ridiculous. Parents are just as eager to announce the second, third, and fourth arrivals, and I think friends are equally eager to receive such news.—E. M. H.

1. According to best form and best taste, a birth-announcement card consists of three items of information: (1) the baby's name, (2) the date of birth, and (3) the names of the parents. Actually this is all the information necessary to send out. It is not considered good form to give the weight of the baby or the name of the hospital in which it was born, or any other information other than the name and date of birth. The standard is set by the formal form, the attaching of a tiny, engraved card (carrying the baby's name and date of birth) to the engraved card of the father and mother. Never the weight on the tiny card, of course.

I think that broadcasting the weight of the new baby is unattractively on the side of bragging or gloating . . and I always wish I could solace the newcomer by persuading him or her that the birth-weight isn't as desterately important as his "proud parents" are inclined to believe. That 6-pounder-at-birth may very soon be personality and character champion, if not weight champion over that 9-or-more-pounder! Personally I think you shouldn't bow to your friends' curiosity. . that you should, with taste and dignity, give only the dear newcomer's name and date of birth.

2. I agree with you. . . that it is "ridiculous" to limit the sending of birth-announcement cards to the first baby.

Sweet Dreams

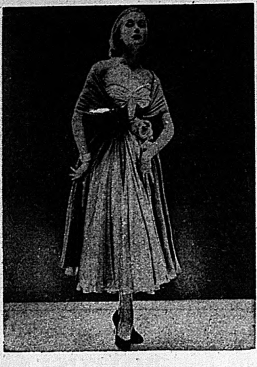
Petal pink nylon crepe is used for a simple but very pretty nightgown. The bodice is gently gathered below a flattering ruffled bertha of ecru lace. The midriff is defined by seaming and punctuated with little embroidered rose buds. A lace hem on the skirt has enough fullness to be graceful.

Evening Chiffon



By ALICE ALDEN

The dreamy, airy charm of chiffon makes it an ideal fabric for gala evening gowns. Pierre Balmain fashioned this beautiful evening dress for his New York collection, and used yards and yards of silk chiffon, shading from brown through beige to greige, that subtle melange of beige and gray. The corselette waistline is shirred and boned to diminutive proportions, and a large pale pink rose is attached to the narrow belt. The ankle-length skirt is prepared to billow as it swirls through a waltz.

QUESTION:

. . . . I would so much like to have a recipe for a low-calorie dressing.—Violet M.D.

ANSWER:

LOW-CALORIE DRESSING

While this of course has plenty of calories, it is a low-calorie dressing when compared to most. One-quarter cup each strained well-packed cottage cheese, mineral oil (or salad dressing if your doctor objects to mineral oil), lemon juice, catsup, 3-4 teaspoon each salt and paprika, 1 1-2 teaspoons sugar (or 3 sucaryl tablets), 1 teaspoon bottled horseradish, 1 1-4 teaspoons prepared mustard, 1 slice garlic, 1-2 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce. Shake all ingredients together in covered jar. Shake well just before using.

QUESTION:

. . .I have two boxes of your recipes. . it was following Pete's recommendation that got me into difficulties with the enclosed recipe though (Lebkuchen) . . is it possible there is no shortening? They were very hard. . .I have so many things to ask. . .a woman told me in Ontario they used Epsom salts to make jelly instead of. . . . is it added before the sugar or after?. . .this year the vinegar I bought smelled sour. . .a friend told me she bought acetic acid from the drug store and added water. Is that healthful? No. 3 question is how to pickle pork hocks? Once I had a recipe from Mexico or Brazil. . .Roughly speaking it was a few quarts whole milk; quite a few pounds white sugar and boiled slowly seven hours. It was eaten with a spoon. Any ideas?. . . Hope I haven't asked too much.—Grace K.

ANSWER:

I'll answer all that I can Grace.

I have moments when I wish I had never heard of Lebkuchen, let alone print a recipe for it. German cooks expect them to be hard. They don't contain shortening, but they do soften and mellow with age and good storing. If you would like to try once more to make them up in a smaller batch I will give you the ingredients only that Garny (my friend who has all German ancestors) uses every Christmas.

Garny's Lebkuchen: 1-2 cup each honey and molasses, 3-4 cup brown sugar, 1 egg, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind, 2 3-4 cup sifted flour, 1-2 teaspoon soda, 1 teaspoon each cloves, cinnamon, allspice, nutmeg, 1-3 cup each finely chopped citron and walnuts or almonds. Mix in order given. Chill dough overnight. Cut out 1-4 inch thick dough into small bars, bake at 400 deg. Fahr. When cold glaze them with icing made by boiling 1 cup sugar with 1-2 cup water to 230 deg. Remove from heat and stir in 1-4 cup icing sugar. Brush hot icing over cakes. Store covered for three weeks.

I have the recipe for jams with epsom salts, but not jelly. Maybe readers who use this will see your request and send in their method of using epsom salts for jelly. Jam with epsom salts: 4 cups crushed berries, 7 cups sugar. Boil two minutes. Remove from heat and stir in 1 tablespoon epsom salts. Stir five minutes.

In talking to a vinegar manufacturer about your sour vinegar he said unsealed containers of vinegar might allow it to sour. His advice is to buy sealed bottled vinegar always. All pickle authorities say it is much better to buy sealed vinegar than to make it from acetic acid.

PICKLED PORK HOCKS

Four good-sized pork hocks with feet on, boiled, 1 quart vinegar, 4 bay leaves, 1 tablespoon whole cloves, 1 tablespoon broken cinnamon bark, 1-4 cup salt, 2 teaspoons pepper, 1-2 onion, 1 blade mace. Scrape, singe, clean feet and hocks carefully, cover with hot water simmer until meat will separate from bones, covered. Lift meat out carefully, remove largest bones, place meat in clean stone crock. Save liquid. Heat the vinegar with the bay leaves, cloves, cinnamon, salt, pepper, sliced onion, and mace. Let these steep over extremely low heat for 45 minutes. Remove fat from top of liquid in which meat was cooked. Strain 1 quart of it and add to vinegar. Strain vinegar mixture. Pour over hocks in crock, lifting meat to allow vinegar to flow around. . . . Cover. Keep very cold all of the time, but they are ready for use in three days.

I am trying to get you the Mexican or Brazilian milk dish, but will have to print it later.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Her daydreams grew out of nothing

How easy it is to fashion a big daydream out of nothing!

To do this, of course, is to indulge in what is called "wishful thinking", and while wishful thinking is something it's only human to enjoy, it's not a very good idea to spend too much time that way. For, if one does, it prevents one from dealing properly with the realities of life, which, in the long run, is the only way to live successfully and happily.

What I mean is well illustrated in the following letter from a woman of 34 who has been married and divorced twice, and now is bent on trying to wangle a third marriage."

"I have a friend who is 39, and a major in the regular army air force. I have known him for the better part of eleven years.

"At the time I met this man, I had been married for less than two years to a young man whom all young women seemed to love and who, in turn, seemed to love so many of them that he finally wanted his freedom. He was overseas when I met the major, of whom I began seeing a great deal. In fact, we saw each other daily for several months till he was transferred.

"After my husband returned from active war duty, I lived with him off and on, but after several years we were divorced.

"It was several years before I saw the major again, since he was overseas at the time of my divorce, and then I only saw him once, when he came to see me in the city to which I had moved.

Makes Contact

"Several years later I remarried, and after about seven months of marriage, I contacted the major again and we began to write to each other. Always, however, I have written far more often to him than he has to me. After about a year of marriage to my second husband I decided to divorce him, and after notifying the major of this decision, I saw him once again. For a number of months thereafter we corresponded, though, as before, I wrote more often than he.

"One day he suddenly telephoned me from many miles across the country to tell me his superiors had suggested that he go to Japan for three years of foreign duty and he wished to know what I thought about it. Since I had not yet got my divorce, it seemed a good idea for him to go at that particular time, and he came to see me before he sailed. In the three years he was away, I wrote him daily, receiving just two letters from him in reply. A few days before last Christmas I received a letter from him and noticed that the return address on it was one in this country. He told me he expected to come to see me soon, but due to circumstances which I feel were unavoidable, he was unable to come, and has since been transferred. Before he left for Japan we had talked of getting married, but now he seems to be of two minds on that subject. I have not lost hope, however.

"There is a great deal for me to overlook where this man is concerned, but I feel as though I could never be happy with any man except him. Do you think I am wasting my time on him? I do not just want to get married, having been married twice already, but I do wish to marry this particular man. Yet I do not wish to be a complete fool."

Now if this isn't completely futile wishful thinking, I don't know what it is. With everything pointing—unmistakably I should think—to the practical certainty that this man has no interest whatever in this woman, she continues to dream about him and build up hopes of marriage with him. Could anything be more absurd?

All I can say to her is that if she means what she says in the last sentence of her letter, she will write off this man quickly as a matrimonial prospect, or even as a friend, stop her childish daydreaming and get down to the business of living with reality.

His girl won't say either yes or no

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a young man of 24, and in love with a girl just 21. I want her to marry me. In fact, I recently asked her to marry me, but she wouldn't give me either yes or no.

Since then, she has been out on a couple of dates with other fellows, and I don't like it. I thought perhaps if I went out on some dates with other girls, she might get wise to herself. I really don't want to take any other girl out, but maybe it's the only way. What do you think about it?—Bill M.

Dear Bill:

Since your girl wouldn't say either yes or no when you asked her to marry you, it's obvious that she hasn't made up her mind yet whether or not she loves you enough. Therefore, if you are as certain as you appear to be that she's the girl you want, I should think you'd be willing to wait patiently till she does decide, instead of doing anything that might give her reason to believe that you might be changing your mind. Certaintly, you have no right to dictate to her about her dates, or anything else.

Your best bet is to be as tolerant and understaning as you can. Don't object or criticize if she goes out with someone else occasionally. And when it's you with whom she goes out, don't spend the time urging her to marry you. Instead, put all your efforts on giving her such a good time, and being such a thoughtful, attentive and entertaining escort, that you'll outdo any competitors and make her begin to think you'd be a pretty nice chap to have around all the time.

Glamor for The Wardrobe

Typical of these beautiful furs is a flattering stole made of silver blue mink. Because of its fluid and graceful lines this little fur gem is particularly impressive with the new slender silhouette.

PLAN CLOVERLEAF

TORONTO (CP)—The Ontario department of highways has put up 20 warning signs and lanterns on No. 27 Highway in Toronto's northwest suburbs in preparation for building a cloverleaf joining three of Ontario's most-used highways.

The cloverleaf, which officials hope will be completed next fall, will join No. 27, the Queen Elizabeth Way and the yet-to-be-built Windsor-to-Montreal express highway. Traffic on No. 27 is being detoured.

GRANT MEANS TAX CUT

WOODSTOCK (CP)—New system of per capita government grants to be paid to Ontario municipalities in 1954 will put an estimated $13,000 more into the Woodstock treasury next year. J. D. Hill, city treasurer, said Wednesday night that the revised grant schedule would likely be equivalent to a saving of more than a mill on the 1954 tax rate.

What about your voice?

Your good-looks griefs and your charm lapses may bother you, but they don't bother other people. That doesn't happen to be the case with an unpleasant voice that puts sensitive nerves on edge. Some individuals are particularly sensitive to a high-pitched or rasping voice. It just isn't fair to inflict them on people, since there are means of overcoming them. For the well-being of human ears, as well as for her own sake, every woman should endeavor to cultivate a voice that is pleasing, especially if nature or bad speaking habits have made hers unpleasant.

Heaven help any human being, young, old or middle-aged, who has to live with a shrilling, shouting woman. Her violent vocal efforts may not mean that she is ill-natured or angry; she just does not realize how distressing they are to others. There are whole families that shout as if every member were deaf. Love may dwell there, but tranquility does not.

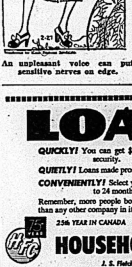
Nothing stirs romance into being like a sweet, compelling voice; nothing takes a crimp in romance like a horrid one. Many a suitor has put on his hat and departed after the object of his adoration has pierced his ear drums with little shrieks that set his teeth on edge.

A woman isn't necessarily born with an unattractive voice; she just doesn't know how to use it properly. The trouble usually is found in using too much volume or in a rapid, inarticulate gabbing in which words are run into each other, so that the listener catches a clear word only now and then. The nervous woman has tightened vocal cords that cannot function normally. Poise and a serene nature may have much to do with a finely modulated voice.

Avoid a high pitch. It is a common error. Think before you speak; know precisely what you are going to say, so you won't be one of those stammerers who seem to be unable to get their vocal engines started.

Read aloud and listen carefully. Regard your voice critically. Practice changes of tone. You may discover vast possibilities of vocal charm. Maybe you have never given the subject a thought; few women do.

Voices reflect character, in a way. The gentle woman speaks with gentleness, never gives way to impulsive speech. The one who is given to over-emphasis is sometimes dramatizing herself.



An unpleasant voice can put sensitive nerves on edge.

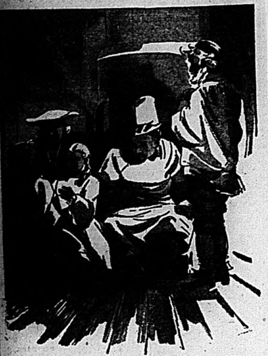
The Greatest Story Ever Told

By Fulton Oursler



CHRIST DISPUTING WITH THE DOCTORS

Interpretation of the Rembrandt etching (1654) from the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

Chapter 11

WHERE IS MY SON?

Meanwhile, in His school and in conversation Jesus heard more and more of the Messiah who was to bring freedom to the people:

"A prophet like unto me will the Lord raise up to thee."

Writers and haranguers at the crossroads constantly assured the tax-ridden people that the long-awaited Christ would soon be with them. Everywhere men were quoting from the prophets to anticipate just how the Son of God would come to earth.

"There will be a great star in the heavens to announce His birth," said one.

"He will be born into the line of the house of David in Bethlehem, but He will live in Gallilee," said another.

Naturally Joseph and Mary had told Jesus of the three Wise Men who brought Him gifts and said that they had seen His star in the east and had come to worship Him. Also He knew that He had been born in Bethlehem and that Joseph and Mary were both of the princely house of David.

People Were Wrong

But very early in life Jesus learned what the people were expecting from their Messiah, and He knew that they were wrong. There was coming to them no Savior with supernatural genius for war and government. No Messiah was to lead them in revolution, free them and make them in turn masters of the whole world. God would not send His messenger to earth merely to rally the glory of David and Solomon. It was in vain that the people waited for such a Messiah—a trinity of patriot, general, and king.

Such was the state of the world, of the Roman empire, Judea, Nazareth, when Mary and Joseph decided to take the twelve-year-old boy on a visit to Jerusalem for the Passover. Year after year the family made this journey, but this was the first time they would take Jesus with them.

In Jerusalem again Mary's growing boy looked around him, fascinated by the splendor and squalor of palaces and slums, the penury in the midst of magnificence, and especially the beauties of the Temple, with its walls of cedar and marble. As He walked with Mary and Joseph through the Gate that was called Beautiful, Jesus carried a few coins that His foster father had given Him: mites and pennies knotted in the hem of His robe; with these copper pieces the boy paid His own way into the Temple courts.

Priests Everywhere

Wherever Jesus looked there were priests. On that very day twenty thousand of them were registered in the Temple and got their living from it. The place swarmed with men in ceremonial costume—Levites with pointed caps and large pockets in which they carried the books of the law; Pharisees with their broad philacteries and deep white fringes on purple gowns; solemn Essenes in white robes—and with them from Galilee and Judea and the land beyond Jordan crowds of earnest believers who came to buy lambs or pigeons and lay them on the altar to be burned: women after childbirth, sick people after recovery, grateful men and women and those who hoped soon to have cause to be grateful. Bargains were being struck, greetings exchanged, psalms sung; genuflections — all day long, the smell of burning flesh, the smoke of incense.

Jesus was gripped with this spectacle of color and noise and movement.

But why did they burn the animals? Why did they imagine God would be pleased when altars bled and smoked? Why did the poor have to spend their money to buy animals? Why must they buy them only from the priests? What did the priests do with the money? Did not such absurdities detract from the dignity and goodness of the Idea of God?

A Surge of Questions

Seized suddenly with a great warm rush of zeal and a surge of such questions, Jesus stood up, while Joseph remained praying with closed eyes. Burning with eagerness, the twelve-year-old strode into an offshoot shelter of the inner Temple where the Fathers of Israel sat with the rolls of Scriptures around them and debated the texts of judges and porphets. A circle of admiring intellectuals was listening in awestruck silence.

Into this ring of professors of the sacred teachings walked the boy from Galilee and His tongue was on fire with the questions He now put to them. He seemed eager to learn from these sages, but they recoiled from His honest inquiries.

Were ever such questions put to these brains before? Never, never! He was not there to higgle and dispute about trifling matters. The savants of the law listened first with scorn and irritation, then with incredulity, with astonishment, friendly, but with awakening alarm.

Day and night came and the fifteen men still tried to answer the questions of this unknown stripling. New judges took the place of weary elderly ones, and the debate went on with the unwearying lad.

It was impossible by logic to dislodge Him from the simplicity of His position; He merely kept reminding them of the beauty of their own neglected teachings; quoting every now and then from the magnificent simplicity of Micah, the prophet, when he demanded:

"What does Jehovah request of you but to do justly, and to love kindness, and to walk humbly with your God?"

The Pale Face of Mary

The new recruits to this famous debate had taken no note of the passing of time until Jesus, looking over the heads of His antagonists, saw the pale face of Mary. Tears glistened in her reproachful eyes; for the first and only time since He was born she seemed not to comprehend.

"Son, why have you done so to us? Behold, your father and I have sought you — sorrowing."

At once Jesus made His farewell to the groggy teachers. Around Mary's shoulders. He wrapped the cloak of deeper blue that she wore now, and took her hand and led her toward the gate, and as they walked together, she told Him what had been happening.

It seemed that Mary and Joseph had started on the journey back to Nazareth, feeling sure that Jesus was following with a troop of other Nazareth boys. But when they began to search for Him, Jesus was not to be found. That was why, as soon as the sun was up, Mary and Joseph turned their faces back toward Jerusalem. There, at last, after weary search, they found Him arguing the law with the elders!

"My Father's Business"

Looking into Mary's eyes, Jesus said with a tender smile:

"How is it that you sought me? Did you not know that I must be about my Father's business?"

Did she not know? Why should He think she would know? And then Mary remembered that dark night when she had fled Nazareth. When the supernatural had awakened her, she could not call her mother and father and hope for their comprehension of her incomprehensible experience—in the conception of this child. Did you not know, Mother?

From that moment it was Mary and Joseph who felt like children and Jesus their instructor. But only for that moment — then He was their boy again. With an impressive gesture He embraced His mother and kissed the gray and golden beard of Joseph. They had no further cause to worry. All the rest of His youth Jesus obeyed them.

For eighteen years, until Jesus was thirty, He and Mary lived in Nazareth. In that long period of obscurity Joseph died, and so did Mary's parents, Joachim and Anna. For His mother and himself Mary's son earned a living carrying on the work in the carpentry shop.

The day was coming, as He had known from the beginning, when He must drop His carpenter's tools, leave mother and home, and devote the remainder of His life to bringing light to the bewildered and frightened. No one else would or could offer them new life or hope, in this world or the next.

The Meaning of Life?

And what would He tell about the meaning of life? The reason for it? He had listened to the talk of oriental travellers through Nazareth, chattering about Nirvana, the denial of individuality. From them He knew the Vedic holy books of India, and the Sutras, and tales of their sacred Mahabharata. As they believed, one human life was like a drop of water falling into the ocean; all identity to be lost, a man being nothing. Jesus would recall to them the truth. Man, individual man, with his infinite capacity to know the bliss of growth, the joy of action, the wonder of beauty, was the creature to whom He would address Himself; to man, who had immortal individuality.

So the maturing Jesus, now nearly thirty years old, and brooding on the tribulations of the world, was ready to offer it joy. No dreary servitude, but a new way of living, a great search to be entered upon to find the kingdom of God. Not the kingdom set up by overthrow and revolt and independence, not the sort of thing Samuel, His foster father's friend, now called Jesus Barabbas, would hope for, but the Father's kingdom, not of this world as yet but one to be brought here by love. Of such unbounded capacity would the subjects of that kingdom become that man or woman could ask what they would and they should have it. All that men and women of good had ever hoped and dreamed of good could come true. Not the shadow but the substance. Only they must first seek the truth and the truth would make them free. And that was a freedom where men were just to other men, kind to their fellows, loving and brotherly, adoring God, their Father. Such freedom in which war could not exist. Not only a world of one God but of one family with God as its Father. Let man love God first and then his fellow men; that summed it.

A Man Named John

In the high hills around His home Jesus the workman slowly dreamed into objective form the message He had been born to deliver. Now His heart was on fire with a dangerous purpose.

Suddenly a strange word came to Nazareth—word of a strong man from the wilderness of Judea, a man who was preaching in various towns down south and blessing people by dipping them in the water of the Jordan River; a new man named John.

"That John," the widow Mary told Jesus, "is your own cousin; he is the son of Zachary and Elizabeth."

And the same John was telling great crowds that he was the herald, the forerunner, preparing the reception for the Savior of the world!

His message was that the Messiah was coming at last.

Victora and Grey Trust Co. Annual Held at Lindsay

There was a splendid turnout of shareholders, customers and friends of the Victoria and Grey Trust company at annual meeting of the company in the Council Chambers of the Town Hall at Lindsay on Wednesday afternoon. T. H. Stinson Q.C. of Lindsay, president of the company, was chairman and R. G. Thomas Q.C. of Owen Sound was secretary for the meeting.

Mr. Stinson and G. D. Fleming of Owen Sound, chairman of the Board of Directors, both addressed the meeting. The 1952 annual report was presented by K. D. Johnston, treasurer of the company and the manager of the Owen Sound office. The report was approved on motion of J. G. Fraser of Owen Sound, who spoke to the meeting, and H. J. McLaughlin, Q.C. of Toronto. Both are vice-presidents.

George Weeks, general manager of the company, dealt in detail with the financial statement, and the profit and loss account. He reviewed the business operations of the year, and the splendid progress made during the year. He particularly commended the Owen Sound office on new business and progress during the year.

Total assets of the company increased by approximately $1,000,000 over the figure for 1951. Net earnings increased by more than $21,000 during the year. Mortgage holdings were higher, and estates, trusts and agencies increased considerably.

The shareholders thanked the staff and officers of the company for faithful service given during 1952. Auditors named were Douglas J. Sales of Toronto and Charles Gaviller of Owen Sound.

All directors were re-elected with the exception of Mr. Justice F. G. McKay of Owen Sound who is now a justice of the Appeal Court. Regret at losing the services of Mr. Justice MacKay and appreciation of his appointment to his present high position were voiced.

A resolution was passed recording the "sincere appreciation of the gift from George Thomson, O.S.A., of Owen Sound, of two paintings by him...and of the high esteem in which Mr. Thomson is held and wishing him many more years of life in which to add to the fame he has already brought to himself and his people with his paintings, ... and further record that this gift has been made by Mr. Thomson to the Owen Sound office of the company in honor of Mr. Wiliam M. Telford who became associated with the company when it was founded in 1889, and whose quiet manner, gentlemanly character and kindly disposition endeared him to all associated with the company for so many years."

Officers re-appointed were: chairman of the board of directors, G. D. Fleming of Owen Sound; president, T. H. Stinson, Q.C., of Lindsay; general manager and secretary, George Weeks of Lindsay; assistant general manager and estates manager, R. G. Thomas Q.C. of Owen Sound; treasurer, Keith D. Johnston of Owen Sound.

The head office of the company is located in Lindsay with branches in Owen Sound, Peterborough, Belleville and Cannington.

BACK IN SERVICE

VANCOUVER (CP)—Steel helmets used by home guards during the Second World War in air raid precautions services are being put back in service. Civil defence coordinators appealed to the hundreds of former war workers either to re-enlist or turn in their old helmets.

CORONATION CANDY

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—The 90,000 school children in Newfoundland will each receive a half-pound box of candy bearing the picture of Queen Elizabeth as a Coronation memento. Each classroom will also receive a photograph of the Queen, while Coronation scholarships are planned by the provincial government and the city of St. John's.

Howe Reviews Canadian Trade Mission Trip

Mr. Howe gave a review of what the Canadian trade mission did and found in each of the nine countries visited.

Mexico

"Mexican representatives formally proposed the creation of a joint Mexican-Canadian Chamber of Commerce or similar association of private trade interests in both countries. . . .

"We are hopeful that direct air services between Canada and Mexico may soon be established."

Brazil

"As part of her exchange saving measures, Brazil continues to maintain strict import restrictions against many dollar goods. These restrictions are affecting a number of traditional Canadian exports to that market particularly codfish, wheat flour, whisky and other consumer goods. I know from my conversations with members of the Brazilian government that they are as interested as we are in an early reopening of the Brazilian market for these goods."

Argentina

"Although possibilities of trade are limited by the fact that our principal products are largely the same, we are hopeful that our trade with Argentina can be substantially enlarged."

Uruguay

"Currently, many items that we are anxious to supply are restricted entry because of Uruguay's exchange situation. I am glad to say that this situation is showing considerable improvement. . ."

Venezuela

"It is perhaps the largest import market in Latin America and imports from Canada are far below the scale that we would desire. The market is highly competitive, but still offers a fertile field for those Canadians who will visit that country in an effort to sell Canadian products. Members of our mission. . . all expressed the opinion that Canada is doing a very poor selling job in that country."

Colombia

"Under the new arrangements being introduced, Colombian importers will have a greater opportunity to plan ahead, and will thus be in a position to buy more wheat from Canada in those periods when local production is insufficient."

Dominican Republic

"This is an open dollar market, and I am sure that the recent establishment in Ciudad Trujillo of a Canadian trade commissioner post will be of great assistance to our trade."

Haiti

"Haiti has long been a market for our fish and flour, and is also buying numerous other goods in Canada. Haiti is particularly interested in developing sales of rum in this market and I hope that some satisfactory arrangement may be reached on this subject."

Cuba

"I expressed the Canadian government's hope that the current problems in world sugar marketing may be solved to the satisfaction of both producers and importers through the medium of an international sugar agreement which will be discussed later this year. It is certainly in Canada's interest that the Cuban economy, so dependent on sugar production and export, should continue at a high level of prosperity and stability."

$1,500,000 Goes To U.S. Town Not on Map

UNIONTOWN, Pa. (AP) — Residents of a little community known as Perryopolis are finally eligible to collect a $1,500,000 legacy.

You won't find Perryopolis on many maps. It's just part of what is known as Perry township. There are some 1,900 residents in the community.

In 1948 Mrs. Mary Fuller Frazier, a native of the community, died. Her will left an estimated $1,500,000 to "the town of Perryopolis."

That's where the trouble started —there was no such town, just a community. So a group of residents petitioned the court for permission to form a new borough.

Some residents of Perry township outside the community of Perryopolis, objected. They contended incorporation of the community as a borough would mean the township would lose much of its taxable income.

The county court approved incorporation of Perryopolis.

Objectors had until 4 p. m. Thursday to file an appeal to the Pennsylvania Superior Court. The court said no objections were filed up to closing time.

Now there's to be the borough of Perryopolis and it will be able to receive its inheritance. How the money will be spent hasn't been determined.

IVANHOE

W.I. Sponsors 'Grandmothers' Day'

Ivanhoe—The regular monthly meeting of Ivanhoe W.I. held at the home of Mrs. Earl McMaster on Tuesday afternoon was largely attended. The meeting was conducted by the president, Mrs. William French and opened in the usual manner.

Mrs. Keith Bray gave a synopsis of the "Life History of Queen Elizabeth II" written by Marion Crawford. A duet "Turn Back the Wheels of Time", was given by Mrs. A. Barnard and Mrs. R. Demille.

As this was "Grandmothers Day", prizes were given to the oldest grandmother present, Mrs. W. J. Tanner and the youngest, Mrs. Sidmer Reid.

District president, Mrs. S. R. Beatty, of Madoc, brought greetings from this district.

"We should begin this year with renewed hope. We would do well to remember the message and petition of the late King George VI in his Christmas message Dec. 25, 1939 beginning 'I said to a man who stood at the gate of the year'. Let us remember our motto, "For Home and Country." The world is full of opportunities, if we fail to grasp these the fault is our own.

All Contribute

"All have something to contribute, after all nations in the final analysis are made up of individuals. To W. I. members especially an important and proud fact is that our organization came into being 130 miles from here and has grown until it is recognized by governments and royalty.

"Freedom is our sacred trust. We are quick to demand our rights but do we secognize our duty to defend them?"

"Every freedom that we enjoy has been bought by some one's life blood. The freedom we enjoy is our trust, hot our right. We are charged with its safe keeping, we are to preserve and hand it on.

"On June 2nd Queen Elizabeth II will dedicate all her life to her subjects. She will be released from this charge only by death. The conference is to be held in Toronto this coming August when W.I. members from all over the world will gather, will serve the same purpose of rededication."

The president expressed thanks and appreciation to all who had contributed to the program. Refreshments were served by the hostess and her assistants.

Congratulations were extended to Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Tanner of Harold who were celebrating their 50th wedding anniversary on the morrow. Mrs. Tanner graciously expressed thanks.

Women's Missionary Societies represented were Salem United, St. Thomas' Anglican, Beulah United, White Lake United, St. Andrew's Presbyterian, Standard and West Huntingdon United.

The service opened with quiet music with Mrs. Stanley Prest at the piano. The call to worship was given by the president of Beulah United, Mrs. Earl Benson. Mrs. William Grant next led in responsive readings. Mrs. Barton Haggerty led in the special prayers ending with the Lord's Prayer. Individual prayers were offered. "For homes and families around the world", Mrs. William French; "For increased private and family prayer", Mrs. Walton Reid; "For followers of Christ around the world", Miss Bessie Fleming; "For non Christians everywhere", Mrs. John Jeffery; "For peace", Miss Doris Twiddy.

A solo "The Stranger of Gallilee", was given by Mrs. Milton Shaw.

The first service was held in 1920 on the first Friday in Lent. In 1922 they joined with the church women of the U.S.A.

In 1952 104 countries observed the Day of Prayer. The spark of interest had kindled universal fires.

In 1952 in Canada the number of groups that met was 2,388. Interest in the "Day" has deepened, its influence has spread. There has been greater generosity in giving.

In 1952 the offerings amounted to $31,590. A ten-fold increase in 21 years. The offering was presented by Mrs. S. Twiddy, and Mrs. Leroy Rollins.

The place of meeting for 1953 will be in St. Thomas Anglican Church. Key women, Mrs. Thos. Clements, Mrs. Lindsay Sills.

Reds Planning Sabotage Action

NEW YORK (CP)—The New York Times, in a dispatch from Bonn, Germany, quotes "authoritative sources" today as saying a Communist conference is scheduled to plan for sabotage in the coal, iron and steel industries of Western Europe.

The Times says the conference is planned to be held in West Germany within the next few weeks.

Ernst Wollweber, an experienced Communist director of sabotage, already has arrived in West Germany, the Times says. Wollweber was said to be charged with planning a prolonged sabotage campaign against the basic industries of the six countries of the coal and steel community.

The Times says Wollweber's orders are interpreted as proof of the extreme concern aroused in Moscow by establishment of the coal and steel community.

USEFUL COURSE

CALGARY (CP)—The fire department plans special courses to teach baby sitters what to do in case of fire. Certificates will be presented to the baby-sitters who complete the course which stresses evacuation of children from burning homes.

Glen Roys Sweep Through To Decisive 4-1 Win Over Kingston Goodyears

Score 1st Goal in 27 Seconds And Never Looked Backwards; Jones Paces Attack With Two

The Belleville Glen Roys flashing one of their better all-round displays handed the Kingston Goodyears a decisive 4-1 defeat here last night to notch the first victory of the senior "B" sectional playoffs. The teams battled to a five-all tie in the first game.

A record crowd of 2,400 saw the Glens sweep through to a well-deserved victory. They scored the first goal in twenty-seven seconds of the first period and never looked backwards. They rammed home another to a single return before the period end and scored one in each of the second and third periods.

Tony Parisi, the Glens brilliant goalkeeper came up with another outstanding performance one that slightly shaded that of Ken Johnson in the Goodyears nets.

Good Effort

The dark-haired youngster came up with some sensational saves, especially in the last period when the desperate Goodyears went all out in an effort to whittle down the margin.

But the Glens were not to be denied. It was their night to howl and the record crowd echoed their sentiments in one of the best senior games played here this season.

Peter Jones, the Glens' brilliant right winger, turned in the best effort of the night. The sorrel-topped flyer aided and abetted by playing coach "Red" Doran, flashed through to score wto goals, one of them a picture play that sent the crowd to its feet cheering and the other the "insurance" marker in the third period that definitely killed all Goodyear hopes for victory.

"Red" Doran, who has more hockey between his ears than the average player has from the hips down, turned in another clever effort, setting up plays and doing a masterful job as a penalty killer. The whole Glens team working like a machine came up with a sparkling collective performance that the skating wizardry of the Glens could not overcome.

The game was cleanly fought, with referees Maurice Walsh and Jim Crombie handing out but ten penalties, all of them minors. Both teams preferred the puck-playing style rather than the man and the result was a flashing, speedy exhibition of hockey. The Glens drew five of the sentences.

The teams meet in the third game of the best-of-seven semi-finals series in Kingston on Monday with the fourth scheduled for Memorial Arena on Wednesday.

The customers had scarcely settled in their seats when Ted DeGray ex-Oshawa junior star flashed down centre ice and blasted the puck behind a surprised Johnson for the first counter of the game. The clock read twenty-seven seconds.

The goal fired the Glens fuze and they swept in on power plays before the Goodies could get untracked. Vern Goyer brought the crowd to its feet when he went in alone but he missed two feet of open net by that margin. Deluca drew the first penalty of the game followed closely by Huck Reeves, Ken Partis weaved and drove his way through to Parisi's doorstep but missed by a mile. Came Peter Jones with Red Doran and the red-haired winger drove in for his first close-in drive but Johnson outsmarted him.

The Glens put up one of the best checking displays seen here this season, stopping the Goodies attack cold at times before they got started.

Murray Good

Don Murray, one of the best players on the ice engineered a Goodyear drive that clicked. The winger sifted through centre ice and flipped a rink-wide pass to Tinkless and the latter's hard drive whistled past Parisi to tie the count.

Play swept to a dizzy speed in the second period with the Glens drawing the only three penalties of the heat. They held off the desperate drive of the Goodyears and ripped in on consistent goal-seeking forays. Johnson rushed out of his net to almost the blueline to snatch the puck from an incoming Glen forward.

Peter Jones stood the crowd on its feet to put the Glens one up when he took Doran's perfect pass to whip the rubber past Johnson at the five minute mark.

Play ripped at top speed in the third period with the Goodyears attacks being thwarted by the fine work of Parisi in the Glen nets. Jack White got the gate for high-sticking at the five minute mark and the Glens poured on the power.

Peter Jones broke into the clear and sailed in on Johnson to beat him cleanly for the "insurance tally."

Partis, Nicholson and Murray spear headed the Goodyears attacks but the Glens playing outstanding defensive hockey held them off the score sheet meanwhile driving in on goal-seeking forays that almost clicked at times. Johnson and Parisi again stole the spotlight in a driving third period.

The teams:

Kingston: Goal, Johnson; defence, Watts, Londry; centre, Murray; wings, Deluca, Tinkess; subs, Nicholson, Stewart, Partis, White, Gerow, McGregor, Myke, McKeown.

Moiras Bow Out Of Cage Picture In Peterborough

By ED. MacDONALD

To quote from the immortal bard, "You can't win 'em all," but nonetheless it is still tough to lose, especially when it is the "big" one. And last night was the big one as the Belleville Moiras bowed to the Peterborough Marines 68-44 in the second of their home and home total points series in the Ontario Basketball Association playdowns. The victory gave the Petes a 16 point edge for the series and sends them against Oshawa in their next step towards the championship.

The Marines played their best ball for the howling crowd of home town fans, and deserved their win in every respect. The Kawartha City five outplayed, outshot and outhustled the Belles for the better part of the evening. It was no discredit to the locals to lose for they fought tooth and nail all the way, but couldn't seem to get untracked. Time and time again the Belleville attack ran afoul of the Petes' tight zone defence, and in direct contrast to the first meeting, the Moiras seemed unable to cope with the Marines' fast-breaking offence.

Crowd Pleased

The crowd whooped it up with delight as the Marines continually shook Did Dibben, Johnny Stewart, or Bob Edgar loose deep in Belleville territory. These three sharpshooters carried the scoring load for the Petes with 16, 18 and 19 points respectively. Don Burns was a tower of strength defensively for the winners and also played a key position on the fast breaks.

The Petes racked up their lead in the first half and led 44-18 at the intermission. During the second canto, the Moiras came back with their old fight and drive, and paced by John Batchelor's 16-point effort, managed to pretty well hold their own The balance of Belleville scoring was fairly well distributed with even Pap Pappas getting into the act at long last.

Out on Fouls

Two of the Moira first stringers, Lou Dousett and Chub Muirhead, were given the old heave-ho during the last quarter for committing five fouls, several of which were the result of mysterious calls. Before their untimely exile, both hoopsters were showing well along with George Garrow, Doug Soules and company.

A club official, who does not want to be quoted, but whose initials are Bill Spafford, stated after the game that the Belles had no excuses. They were beaten by a better team and a pox on the sour grapes. And so, as the sun sinks slowly in the west, the 1952-53 hoopball season fades slowly over the horizon for the Moiras (soft music please), but they pass out of the picture knowing they did their best and all voices join in that fine old song "Wait Till Next Year."

The line-ups:

Belleville Moiras — Lockyer, Soules 6, Muirhead 2, Dousett 8, Batchelor 16, Hayman 2, Garrow 7, Pappas 1, Massey 3.

Peterborough Marines — Dibben 16, Edgar 19, Northcott 5, Stewart 18, Smith 3, Frise 1, Gillespie, Burns 6, Grafstien.

HAPES WITH HAMILTON?

Sonja Currie Wins Junior Skating Title

OTTAWA (CP)—Sonja Currie, a determined little miss from Edmonton; carried off the junior women's figure skating championship Friday night and then set her sights for the senior title tonight.

The 15-year-old skater hardly waited to hear that she had won the junior championship before returning to her hotel to rest for today's strenuous round of compulsory and free-skating events.

Her showing in the difficult compulsory figures which count for two-thirds of the points brought her the junior title over Ann Johnston, 14, of Toronto and Yarmila Pachl, 15, of Montreal.

Miss Curire fell late in her three-minute free-skating exhibition Friday night. The mishap almost erased the slender lead she had built up in compulsory figures over Miss Johnston and Miss Pachl who finished second and third respectively. All three meet in the senior round today.

Douglas Court, 18-year-old native of St. Catharines, Ont., won the junior men's championship. His free-skating performance matched that of the compulsory figures in which he headed Paul R. Patton, 18, of North Bay, Ont., and Richard Rimmer, 15, of Guelph, Ont., who placed second and third respectively.

The green ice of the Minto skating Club was bright with whirling couples in the pairs and dance events later."

Dawn Steckley and Dave Lowery, an Oshawa, Ont., twosome who have been skating together only three months, won the Canadian junior pairs championship and the Dysart Cups.

They defeated a Toronto brother-and-sister team of Patty Lou and George Montgomery. Barbara Wagner and Bob Paul, also of Toronto, placed third.

The Montgomerys won a third in the junior dance championships behind Geraldine Fenton and Glenn Skuce of Oshawa, and Claudette Lacaille and Jeffery Johnston of Montreal who placed first and second respectively.

Emile Martel, Loretteville, Qoe., former international champion, iame seiond with a time of 2:32.55. Wilfrid Lepine, veteran Quebec mosher who won the llassil last year, did the stretch in 2:37.50 for third place.

Is a Fish Color-Blind?

RED

By JOHN ALDEN KNIGHT

(Noted Sportsman, Author and Creator of Solunar Tables)

Every now and then, here in Pennsylvania, we have unseasonably cold weather in May. Somehow, when we think about the month of May during the dreary winter months of the northern latitudes, we do so in terms of spring flowers, budding trees and warm sunshine.

The fact that we do have snow in early May once in a while is something that we try to overlook or forget. May, we hope, means spring and good trout fishing.

The day that I have in mind was May 1. The sky was blue and cloudless and the sun was shining brightly. The air temperature, however, was below freezing to the point where our lines actually froze in the guides of our fly rods.

We had planned to go fishing. The sun was shining, the weather was clear, the streams were in perfect condition, so fishing we went, regardless of the temperature. After all, we could put on enough clothes to keep warm.

As we had hoped, a hatch of flies appeared on the water's surface along about noon. It was a mixed hatch — Gray Quills and Quill Gordons — and the fish responded with enthusiasm that is rare when water temperatures are in the high thirties.

Used Wet Flies

Experiment soon showed me that a dry fly would pick up a coating of ice which made it heavy and difficult to cast, so I changed my rig to a cast of two wet flies to match the drifting hatch. My partner did likewise.

There were plenty of trout feeding in the water before us and I soon had four nice fish in my creel. That was all we needed for a meal at our house, so I began to release the fish that I caught. In all, I must have hooked and landed about twenty fish.

Meanwhile, my partner was having his troubles. Try as he would, those fussy trout simply would not take the flies that he was using. At last, in desperation, he walked down the bank and stood beside me while I fished.

Being curious to learn why my rig caught fish and his did not, I reeled in my line and we compared flies. After all, we were using the same patterns, and our flies looked much alike. Then the solution of the mystery came to me.

His flies were tied with dyed materials. The "wood-duck" wings of dyed mallard; the bodies of synthetic quill; and the hackles were white hackles, dyed blue-gray. Fished "dry," on the surface, probably they would have taken trout, but under the water they would not.

My flies were tied with natural colors — real wood duck, peacock quill and rusty-dun hackles. Polarized light does strange things to colors, particularly dyed colors. In the air the flies looked alike; under water evidently they did not.

I rigged my friend's leader with flies similar to mine and immediately he began to catch trout.

A Moot Question

For a great many years the matter of color-blindness or color sensitivity on the part of fish has been what the boys call a moot question. Countless hours of fireside argument have been spent in its discussion. It has been hashed over in the magazines, and all manner of stories have been propounded.

One school of thought insists that fish see things in varying shades of gray, ranging from white to coal black. In other words, color is merely a matter of shade intensity rather than actual hue. I never took much stock in that one.

During fairly recent years it seems to have been fairly well established that fish not only can distinguish one color from another but that they are decidedly color-conscious.

Those of a scientific turn of mind have conducted experiments under controlled conditions with fish in aquaria. All of these point to the conclusion that fish can distinguish colors.

One experiment, using sunfish as the sub-aqueous guinea pigs, used feeding boxes which were set on colored squares on the floor of the aquarium. These squares could be shifted about so that their positions were not fixed.

The little fish soon learned that at a given signal they would find food in the box on the red square. After a few days, no matter where that red square was placed, they would go directly to it.

The late Gifford Pinchot described in his writings an experiment that be conducted with a school of small fish that loafed around the wharf where he was spending the winter in the south.

For a while he made it a point to feed these little fellows fresh shrimp every day. Before long they came to know that they would be fed when he showed up on the dock and they would fight for anything he threw to them.

Then he began his experiment. Some of the shrimp he would color bright red with a tasteless dye, leaving them palatable. The rest he would color yellow and green, adding bitter flavoring which made them unpleasant to eat. It took only a few days for the little fish to ignore any but the red shrimp that he threw to them.

In the Museum of Natural History in New York City there is a display window which show's a fish's-eye view of a trout pool, complete with angler in waders in the background. Everything in that window shows intense, exaggerated color.

All of us who fish a great deal know that colors such as red and yellow seem to have "fish appeal." For instance, look at the way the Mickey Finn bucktail catches fish of all varieties. Exactly how a fish determines what is red and what is yellow and what is blue is something I don't believe anybody can say with authority.

The fact remains that personal experience and repeated scientific experiments do show that they can differentiate between colors and, for that latter, varying shades of the same color.

Knowing that, what more does an angler need to know when he is tying his flies and selecting has bass lures?

Wellington Ties Playoff Series With 6-4 Victory

TRENTON — (Special) — The old wooden arena vibrated until it groaned and creaked here last night but the Admirals needed more than the faithful support of local followers as Wellington came out on top with a 6-4 decision typing the best 3 of 5 semi-final Trent Valley Hockey League series at one game each. On Thursday night Trenton played a similar tune in Wellington under similar adverse conditions.

By adverse conditions it is meant that the ice was more liquid than solid, while the exhibition resembled a free-for-all driving contest at a miniature golf course.

Nevertheless the watchers apparently liked shinny because they became over-elated at times and resorted to flinging papers and bottles out on the ice as a visual expression of rabid enthusiasm. A broken pop bottle caused a few minutes delay while the referee and help from both sides disposed of the dangerous pieces.

The main reason Trenton lost can be attributed to a sturdy Wellington player named Joe Scott whose educated stick directed no less than five of the winners' grand total. Joe opened and closed the issue for Wellington. In the second period he rose to the occasion winging home the three goals that put his team on a par with the Admirals who were out in front by three after a sizzling first period. But the methodical Scott cut down Trenton's lead goal by goal as the Prince Edward steamrollers forged ruthlessly ahead.

In the third period, the Admirals swarmed all around the Wellington net but their luck had run out and no measure of effectiveness could cause that puck to drop behind the charmed goaltender. Finally Scott (who else was on the ice for the visitors) grabbed a loose biscuit and with no one to beat excepting Hill, whistled a sneaker that found a hole between the minder and the goal post.

Silvana Mangano Scores in Absorbing Love Story

That all-too-rare combination of a unique screen personality and a dramatic love- story, expertly directed and sensitively performed, make the new American-language film "Anna", which opens Monday at the Capitol Theatre, an unusual and absorbing motion picture entertainment.

In the demanding title role of a nightclub dancer who seeks escape from her complicated love-life as a nursing novitiate, beautiful Silvana Mangano, whose sensational film debut in "Bitter Rice" made movie history, proves conclusively that her star ranking is no mere billing whimsy but well-merited recognition of her distinctive position high in the international cinema firmament. As her menacing lover, Vittorio Gassman gives an exceptionally convincing performance, and Raf Vallone, Gaby Morlay and Jacques Dumesnil play the other important roles with equal effectiveness.

Under the sure-handed and compassionate direction of Alberto Lattuada, the I.F.E. Releasing Corp. film unfolds the eventful story of Anna's attempt to break with a cheap, cynical bartender (Vittorio Gessman) in order to marry the wholesome young farmer, depicted by Vallone, whom she sincerely loves. Unwilling to let her go, Gassman follows the girl to her fiance's farm and forces her to submit once more to his violent love-making.

Anna is accidentally wounded when the two men engage in a realistically exciting fight. Taken to a large city hospital, she determines to escape from the harsh emotional realtities of her own life through dedication to God and the care of the sick. But when an automobile accident brings Vallone into the hospital, she realizes that hospital walls alone cannot protect her from her inner turmoil of her human desires. In the end, she is forced to choose between the dedicated life which lies before her in the hospital and the personal happiness awaiting her in the outside world.

The sensuous excitement of the torrid "Anna Samba", sung and danced by Miss Mangano in one of the picture's nightclub sequences, is a highlight of the picture and one of several brilliant change-of- pace interpolations which Lattuada has integrated into the story for mood contrast.

As atmospherically authentic as the murky basement cabaret where Anna performs are the hospital sequences, actually filmed in the wards and operating rooms of a Milan hospital. As the Mother Superior and head surgeon respectively, Gaby Morlay and Jacques Dumesnil give such realistic performances that it is difficult to realize that they are not merely re-enacting their own lives.

With all of the above-mentioned merits, however, "Anna" is undoubtedly Miss Mangano's picture and, as such, a decisive personal triumph for the young Italian actress.

Gooder Scores 3 for Warriors

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Billy Gooden scored three goals as Syracuse Warriors routed Buffalo Bisons 9-4 in an American Hockey League game Friday night.

The first goal by Gooden gave him a total of 500 points in AHL play, the only player now active in the circuit who has reached that total.

The victory pushed the Warriors into a tie for third place with Hershey Bears. Goalie Jacques Plante, despite his lop-sided defeat, was credited with 41 saves compared with the 18 credited to Syracuse's Gordon Beall.

Gene Achtymichuk, Gordon Pennell, Lorne Davis and Calum Mackay tallied for the losers.

Backing up Gooden's tallies were Eric Pogue, Leo Curick, Harry singles and Kelvin Burnett with two.

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

FOR SUNDAY, MARCH 1, 1953.

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—Better to do it right and slower, than have speed without surety or stability. Take rebuffs philosophically, and you should learn much.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus)—Heed small warnings as well as big ones, especially in health matters. No unfriendly stellar indications, but wise precautions are in order.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini)—Saying right thing at the right time makes for a more relaxed life daily. Give yourself a pep talk occasionally, and take due criticisms.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer)—Make up your mind you will start day with calm attitude, reviewing sufficiently the demands of your routine. Thus you can start "with a bang!"

July 24 to August 22 (Leo)—Look further into whys and wherefores of obligations and extra interests. Recheck for surer methods next week, better understanding, and a more pleasant route.

August 23 to September 23 (Virgo)—Start day with prayer. Don't fret but investigate your ways for flaws. Once you have determined them, correct them promptly.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra)—Pay attention to your intuition, while considering suggestions from outside. Apply preventive measures against repeating old errors.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio)—Heed Libra today. Your star configurations stress same advice; "an ounce of prevention," you know. Don't neglect your soul's needs.

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius)—May feel you cannot find answers readily or wish you could uncover better means to your ends. Keep seeking knowledge from worthy sources. You'll soon be on smoother ground.

December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn) — A checker-upper day for most of us. Let's make up our mind to take setbacks sensibly, and to be patient about results. Have faith!

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius)—Let's look at our free time: Enjoy some of it with children. They enliven the spirit, bring us in touch again with a sense of values so often lacking in adult minds.

February 21 to March 20 (Pisces) — Run into stubborn problems, obstinate folks? So do we all at times. Patience is vital. Pray for guidance.

YOU BORN TODAY have great artistic ability, are intuitive, studious, capable of achieving more than you perhaps realize. You may lean toward science. Usually fond of learning and aim at high attainment. May have to overcome timidity, fear of others' ridicule. God expects all of us to make good use of our talents and capabilities. So speak up! Blessings! Birthdate: Augustus Saint-Gaudens, famed Irish-American sculptor; Wm. Dean Howells, novelist; Dinah Shore, singer.

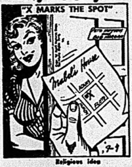
Why We Say--



Religious idea

We designate a particular place on paper with an "x" mark. The idea originated with the early Saxons who placed a cross after all signatures as a symbol of the cross Christ was executed on. Those unable to write used only the cross to show their good faith.

CAMPBELLFORD

Kinsmen's Club To Raise Funds For Flood Victims

CAMPBELLFORD — The regular semi-monthly meeting of the Campbellford Kinsmen Club was held on Wednesday in The Trent House, with president John Hill in the chair.

Mr. Hill will be resigning his position in the club as he has recently been transferred to the Bank of Montreal, Montreal, to which city he will be moving in the near future.

The main item of business under discussion in the meeting was a request from the national president of the Kinsmen Club concerning assistance for the flood victims of Britain, Holland and Belgium. The club has been asked to raise funds for the rehabilitation of the people in these countries, and this problem will be discussed at the next meeting, March 9th.

The club is going to attempt a Kin letter-exchange between school children of this area and the children of Europe. Any letters written by school children will be forwarded to the national president, who, in turn will ship them overseas for distribution. This idea should be beneficial in promoting a close friendship between the children of Europe and Canada. This will be discussed further at the next meeting.

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

FOR MONDAY, MARCH 2, 1953.

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—A few "clouds' on your emotional horizon, but they will vanish soon. Have clear understandings, no consorting with pettiness, wasters.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus)—Check Aries, same obtains for you clever but sometimes headstrong folks. It's greatly up to you whether this day will please.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini)—Most gains in activities in business, travel or profession will be gauged by how you react to small tasks, advantages. Do something about it early in day.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer)—Might be a good idea to pump up your enthusiasm, then you will grasp advantages through coordination, effort to achieve.

July 24 to August 22 (Leo)—Some uncertainties. Guard what you possess; work out problems carefully; don't complain. You are better off than many.

August 23 to September 23 (Virgo) — Discretion is your watchword this rather slow, uninspiring period. All money, business and personal deals will have to be well handled with special caution.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra)—Tone down self-assurance, emotional outbursts. And don't say, "that's the way it should be!" This goes for all of us in this sort of period.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio)—Little to offer, says this day in some respects. In the long run such periods are good for us, keep us from getting too smug. Duties rate first.

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius) — Go along with routine affairs calmly. An uplift indicated for personal problems, home and family doings. More gains with extra effort.

December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn)—The unpredictable often happens. Be thoughtfully prepared and the unexpected won't take you much off guard. If often leads to benefits.

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius)—It will take more than run-of-the-mill endeavor to advance this sort of day. Study, push yourself forward but discreetly. Keep pace with events; put aside worry.

February 21 to March 20 (Pisces)—Any snares you may encounter may be traced to lack of initiative or proper persistency if you aren't careful. Have a well managed campaign, even for little chores.

YOU BORN TODAY: Are trustworthy, sturdily faithful. Overcome retarding charactristics, timidity, oversensitiveness. The latter may cause you to be hurt where you shouldn't at some really grand "rough diamonds." Have less anxiety about health, wealth, success. Many notable teachers in this Sign. Birthdate of: His Holiness, Pope Leo XIII., Sam Houston, Tennessee - Texas titan.

Other Charges May be Laid Against Accused

MONTREAL (CP) — Rolland Labrie, 29, was arraigned in criminal court here Friday on charges of illegally possessing $5,000 in bonds stolen in 1948 from the Maxville, Ont., branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia.

He was also charged with defrauding the Bank of Montreal and Royal Bank of various sums, of forgery and if misusing stolen bonds.

He was refused bail after prosecuting attorneys said there was a possibility other charges would be lodged against Labrie. They claimed he was not a Canadian citizen and it was believed the bonds found in his possession were part of $350,000 stolen from the Maxville bank. Most of these bonds were still outstanding.

Preliminary inquiry was set for March 6.

Someone to Love

By Irene Lonnen Ernhart

Rick was good for Tod, and Jenny decided she must encourage him to see them often.

Tod needed friends. He had cultivated none of the other fellows in the trailer camp. He had said that the student body at Markwood College was made up mostly of goons. Naturally he missed the State University big football games, and being a campus big shot. He missed the life at the fraternity house too, the parties, and the people like Liz Conover and Ricky Morris.

Tod had been apologetic to Rick about their living in a trailer. He had apologized until she had wondered if he weren't apologizing for her too.

One afternoon later that week, as she was on her way to the grocery store to shop, she saw Rick again.

It was one of those wonderful October days, all golden and mauve, a hint of woodsmoke in the air, the leaves floating dreamily down in the sunlight one by one. Jenny was walking briskly, and as she turned a corner by a building, she ran squarely into someone.

She had a confused impression of a green corduroy coat, and the smell of tobacco and then she looked into Ricky Morris's dark eyes. The eyes crinkled pleasantly as he said, "Hello! Going somewhere in a hurry?"

"Only going shopping for groceries, and not in this much of a hurry, really." It was wonderful that day, she felt splendid, and it was somehow vaguely exciting to run into Ricky this way.

She wasn't dressed up an old red beret, and a short red coat over her pencil slim black skirt, but the fresh air had put a tingle in her cheeks and brightened her eyes.

"Let me go along," Rick said. He took her arm. "I'll help you I'm a regular bargain hound. And you ought to taste my cooking, Jenny. Honestly, if you had known about me and all my various talents, you'd never have married Tod."

Yes, she was sure Rick would be good for Tod. She must encourage him to come and see them often. He was good for her too, somehow.

• • •

—XIV—

Jenny and Rick had a lot of fun in the super market. He insisted o paying for the groceries, because of so many extravagant items he'd selected himself, mushrooms, some terribly expensive cheese and a bottle of wine.

When Tod returned from his last class Rick, with one of Jenny's ruffled aprons tied around his middle, was in the kitchenette cooking dinner.

Tod was in an extra good humor. He and Rick sampled the wine and had a high time kidding each other.

They had just finished the dessert and lit cigarettes when Rick said to Tod, out of a clear sky, "Say, you know Liz Conover—"

"Yes."

"I heard she's getting a divorce already from that Courtney fellow she married last spring."

No one said anything for a second or two. Rick looked from one to the other of them, "Did I say something wrong?"

"No," Tod said. He rose and began hunting for an ash tray.

"The ash tray is right behind you on the desk," Rick said quietly. "And now tell me what's wrong with my mentioning Liz."

"Well, if you must know Rick." Jenny said, turning the water on in the sink for the dishes "Tod was engaged to Liz last spring and she jilted him, and then I caught him sort of on the rebound." She ducked down to get the soap flakes out of the cupboard, because she couldn't face the angry look on Tod's face.

"That's not true, Jenny, and you know it."

Rick looked uncomfortable. "I didn't mean to bring any skeletons out of the closet."

"It's all right, Rick," Jenny said. She was sure of herself now. 'Skeleton or not it's better to have things out in the open, isn't it? Anyway, I love Tod, and even if I did get him on the rebound, I'm glad I did. We're going to make a success of our marriage."

"Jenny's right" Tod said. His eyes met Rick's briefly as he set the ash tray down on the table. "Want to drive down to the drug store with me," he said. "I'm out of cigarets.'

"I've really got to be going," Rick said.

Jenny protested, but only half-heartedly, and after the usual things were said, Rick left. Tod drove him to his rooming house.

"I didn't know Liz and you were engaged last spring," Rick said as they got in the car.

"We were supposed to be married as soon as I got home from that hospital in New York," Tod said. "She and Courtney eloped the day before I got back."

"You were lucky," Rick said.

"Lucky?" Tod said. "To marry Jenny you mean."

"And to having escaped marrying Liz. She's no good. She'll be married to half a dozen fellows before she's through. You'd better get her off your mind and be happy with Jenny. She's a swell kid."

Jenny was all finished with the dishes when he got home.

"There's nothing to apologize for Jenny." He looked down at her, seeing the trembly sweetness of her lips, the softness of her face. He ought to be ashamed for even thinking of Liz when Jenny was so sweet.

"I guess it's just nerves that makes me fly off the handle so."

"Sure." Tod got out his books and notebooks and sat down at his desk to study. He couldn't get Liz out of his mind.

Aware suddenly that Jenny had been saying something to him, he looked up. "What was that, Jenny?"

"You mean you didn't hear a word I said?"

He shook his head. Her brown eyes were stormy again.

"I said your mother phoned and wanted to talk to you today. They told me at the office. She would not talk to me, but she left her number."

"Maybe I'd better go call her."

At the trailer camp office he found the slip with the phone number on it in his mail slot.

Ma's querulous voice came loudly and reproachfully over the phone.

"We figured you was pretty busy, but like I told Harriet today looked like you didn't care what become of us. We ain't seen hide nor hair of you for weeks and weeks."

"I've been thinkin' I must look you up."

"I know Jenny's probably doin' everything she can to keep you away from us, but it looks like—"

"Look Ma, if you phoned me to pick a quarrel let's break it off right now. I've been meaning to come around and see you. We sold the shack that belonged to Jenny's father and got $500 for it. I could let you have some money if you're hard up. Jenny wouldn't care if you really needed it."

"No, thanks. Joe's got a good job with a friend of his. He says soon as he can he's goin' to get us a nice place again. Joe'll take care of his old mother even if you dodn't think enough of her to come around."

"I been busy with school, and Jenny's had to quit work. We'll be over to see you though, soon. maybe tomorrow night."

"You don't need to bring her to see me!" Ma said firmly.

He walke back to the trailer slowly, feeling a miserable sense of guilt.

—XV—

After his first visit, Tod fell into the habit of going to see Ma and Harriet and Joe once a week. When he came back from one of these visits he was always upset and restless.

Jenny felt better physically now and made a special effort to overlook his moodiness. He was studying hard these days, with mid-term exams not too far away. Saturday nights they usually tried to have someone in, Rick and Nina to play bridge and occasionally the Hansens from next door. Although the Hansens bored Tod.

Fred Hansen was in one of Tod's classes. He was a small bespectacled fellow with sandy hair and faded blue eyes. His wife, Ruth was plump, vivacious, friendly. They always put their baby to bed in their own trailer when they came over, and every time Ruth was dummy she trotted over to see that it was all right. She was delighted when she learned that Jenny was expecting, and went into all the details of her own pregnancy. Tod was disturbed and for a time he treated Jenny with concern. Jenny laughed at him. And presently he got over it.

There were other urgent matters to be concerned about. The $500 they'd gotten for the summer cottage would last through December, but after that something would have to be done.

The silhouette is slim as a young sapling, with gentle, easy lines and soft-falling fabrics. Costumes abound in enchanting dresses and suits, narrow and neat but still with an easy line.

Coats are slender, often fitted, sometimes very straight. Suits love the matchbox jackets with undefined waistline.

Many dresses are reed-slim sheaths . . . many have lovely necklines that bare the throat and shoulders. For evening, skirts are fuller but still swirl slenderly for a narrower appearance.

The picture Spring has fashioned is exquisite . . . exceedingly wearable, completely, beautifully feminine.
